Stage Robbers Kill Driver.

Two Bandits Flee With Eighteen Thousand Dollars in Bullion.

Posses Hot on Trail Force Them to Abandon Their Loot.

Lonely New Mexican Mountain Road Scene of Second Hold-up.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Hiding behind a giant boulder on the lonely Mogollon Mountain stage road between Mogollon, N. M., and Silver City, two daring bandits held up the Marriott stage at 2 o'clock this morning, shot the Mexican driver, José Dominguez, instantly killing him, and looted the mail and express packages, securing $18,000 worth of gold and silver bullion.

The desperadoes escaped to the mountain fastness, but were forced to abandon their loot before leaving the country.

The second in two weeks on the same stage road, the robbery was one of the most daring in the history of Grant county, N. M., known for its hold ups and robberies.

Waiting night after night until the stage was empty save for the lone Mexican driver, the bandits shot the Mexican from ambush and after procuring all of the silver and gold they could carry, escaped down the stage road and fled into the mountains. After examining their booty at the foot of the Mogollon Mountains, the men threw away the less valuable silver bullion and loading the gold onto a pack horse retreated to the unbroken mountain side with it.

HORSES GIVE WARNING.

The frightened stage horses dashed frantically down the road after the robbers had looted the bullion chest and continued to run until they reached Glenwood, where the station is located.

Jake Humes was waiting at Glenwood to relieve the murdered Mexican. As soon as he saw the horses dash up to the stage station, he gave the alarm by telephone and a party was sent out from Mogollon to search for the driver. Hi body was found beside the road in the darkest part of the mountain side, where he had been thrown after the keys to the strong box had been taken.

At Glenwood the missing silver and gold bullion gave a clue to the murderers and a posse headed by mounted Territorial Rangers Beel and Wright started in pursuit of the bandits. The alarm was given all over the Mogollon mining district and the miners turned out to search for the holdup men.

ABANDON BOOTY.

At dark tonight the chase was getting so hot that the robbers had discarded their heavy ore bricks and were fleeing for life across the mountain range. The entire country-side had been alarmed by telephone and posses are starting out in different directions to head off the men.

Six of the twelve bars were being shipped to New York by the Socorro Mines Company, while the remaining ore was the property of the Ernes-

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A curious incident has come to light as a consequence of the troubles which marked Mr. Roosevelt's sojourn in Rome.

Hamilton W. Mabie of New York was some time ago in Italy, and while he was in Rome everything had been arranged at the Vatican in order that he might have a private audience with the Pope. Then it was learned at the apostolic palace that he was one of the editors of the Outlook and all the arrangements were countermanded. It was feared that an audience to a colleague in editorship of Mr. Roosevelt might bring about further complications in a situation already sufficiently embarrassing.

QUIET WEDDING PREFERRED.

Son of Late Cuban President Weds American Heiress, Miss Helen Douglas Browne.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Friends of Thomas Estrada Palma, son of the late President of Cuba, and Miss Helen Douglas Browne, daughter of Mrs. Douglas Lester Burman-Browne, an heiress in her own right and a distant relative of the late William C. Whitney, were surprised when they learned that the young couple suddenly abandoned their plans for an elaborate wedding and were quietly married at noon today in the presence of the bride's mother and a few friends, in Grace Episcopal Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Melville K. Bailey.

"We just didn't want a big wedding and all that fuss," said the bridegroom today.

Mr. Palma has a large ranch and plantation in Cuba where, it is believed, he will take his bride. He was born in Central Valley, N. Y., and was educated at Cornell.

Spanish Government's Prompt Action Stops Trouble Set for Today.

Many Dispatches Sent to Pope Offering Support; Carlist Plot Masked.

Insults Heaped on Canalejas. San Sebastian Crowded With Troops.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN SEBASTIAN (Spain) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Until 2 o'clock this afternoon the government had no official news that the so-called "Catholics Junta," had given up the plan for Sunday's demonstration here. The cause alleged for the abandonment is that the government prevented the running of special trains, suspended, according to the Junta's statement, constitutional guarantees, and occupied the country with military force preventing Catholics from coming here, even on foot.

In giving these reasons the Gaceta Del Norte Bilboa, which publishes 109 dispatches sent yesterday to the Pope offering to the cause of Rome the lives and property of the senders, about 100 dispatches to Señor Canalejas, couched in the most insulting language, and many promises of support in the planned demonstration, pours fresh insults on the premier and the authorities, accusing them of tyranny.

The real cause of the suspension of the proposed demonstration, however, is the rapidity with which the government acted to prevent by lawful means a political rebellion, because the religious aspect of the demonstration was merely a mask to conceal a Carlist conspiracy. It was intended to surprise the San Sebastian authorities.

As Carlism is stronger in the country districts, the idea was to bring into San Sebastian an army of fanatic peasants and the Carlist element from Bilboa, who are handicapped there by the presence of a large body of troops on account of the strike and the fact that labor element is uncompromisingly anti-Carlist.

Baron De La Torre confirms the belief that the movement was of a Carlist and revolutionary character. This is also evident from the orders of Señor Felio, the Carlist delegate to the Juntas of his party, not to fail to attend the demonstration. During the last week monks have been traveling through the Provinces of Navarre, Vizcaya and Guipuzcoa acting as agents ang distributing instructions and arms among the peasants until the vigilance of the authorities put an end to the distribution of weapons.

Under pretext that they are for self-defense and to be used in case of popular attacks on conventions, such as happened in Barcelona in July, 1909, every friar at Catalonia and the Biscayan provinces carries concealed weapons. The convents also have been transformed into fortresses.

On his way here an American saw at Pamplona and Alsazua groups of monks holding mysterious conferences with peasants, who, afterward have confessed that the moment to strike a blow for King and people is at hand."

It is undeniable that the royal family are staunch Catholics, but none of its members dare oppose the Liberal tendencies of the King, who, as Señor Canalejas insists today, are not harmful to the true interests of the church. That Queen Victoria's influence over her husband may be the cause of the government's anti-clerical policy is a calumny spread by Señor Dalmacio and other Carlists and Señor Iglesias.

Forty Carlists from Tudela, led by two priests, arrived at San Sebastian today. Meeting a body of troops who had just arrived from Madrid, the priests ran away abandoning their followers, whom the Governor sent back to their homes.

Saturday night found this summer capital of Spain presenting the aspect of a town strongly occupied by military. There are infantry regiments from Madrid, Vitoria and Bilboa, with their batteries of machine guns, just returned from Morocco, hussars from Madrid, lancos from Vitoria and mountain batteries with Schneider guns from Burges. All have come by special trains, and have been pouring in night and day to reinforce the ordinary garrison, 3000 strong, and the thousand civil guards, the Royal Horse Guards, the famous Provincial Militia, styled "Los Migueletes," and the specially detailed guard at the palace at Miramar.

At the palace the gallant Queen Mother Dona Christina is also on guard over her three grandchildren, the Prince of the Asturias, Prince Jaime and little Princess Beatrix. All of the royal children wonderingly ask why San Sebasian is so alive with troops whose bands, trumpets and bugles delight them.

There is much suppressed excitement on both sides of the Pyrenean frontier in the French and Spanish Basque Provinces, where the Catholics feel strong Carlist inclinations.

Both governments are on guard and are taking measures to avoid surprises

Mrs. Cudahy Declares She Would Rather Sacrifice Her Life Than Part With Them—Her Parents Furnish Funds to Retain Counsel—Evidence Is Collected Secretly.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Jack Cudahy, son of Michael Cudahy, millionaire Chicago pork packer, is preparing to sue for divorce and the custody of his four children. Mr. Cudahy is living at the Hotel Baltimore.

Mrs. Jack Cudahy, who is living with the four children in the Cudahy home at 101 East Thirty-sixth street, will fight the contest to a finish. Mrs. Cudahy declares that she would almost as soon lose her life as to lose her children, and she is preparing to file counter charges against her husband if the petition for divorce is filed against her.

Gen. John C. Cowan and his wife, father and mother of Mrs. Cudahy, were in Kansas City yesterday and it is said they have furnished her with means to pay her lawyers and fight the case.

It is understood that though Karnes, New & Krauthoff, attorneys for the Cudahy Packing Company at Kansas City, I. B. Kimbrell has been retained to conduct the divorce proceedings for Cudahy.

It is known that for some time Cudahy has been getting evidence upon which to base his suit for divorce, although all his efforts have been secret. Different chauffeurs who have had occasion to know of Mrs. Cudahy's movements have been approached by Cudahy and others whose testimony might aid him in securing the separation have been sought in his endeavor to secure a divorce from his wife.

Mrs. Cudahy, who is ill at the Cudahy mansion, talked but little of the impending proceedings except to say that she did not believe such a proceeding was contemplated.

"If there is any divorce proceedings to be brought, I will be the one to do it," said Mrs. Cudahy, a little vehemently, when told that it was practically assured that her husband was making preparations to sue for divorce and for the custody of the children.

Roosevelt Damaged Slightly from the Flames Supposedly Caused by Spontaneous Combustion.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Commander Peary's historic ship, the Roosevelt, which carried him north on his last successful trip to the North Pole, caught fire early this morning while lying in her berth in the East River.

The fire broke out, supposedly from spontaneous combustion, in a rubbish heap on the port side amidships, but it was quickly discovered by a night watchman, who turned in an alarm, but was able to put the fire out before the arrival of the fire companies. The damage will not exceed $25.

Wife of Sixteen Asks for Divorce from Middle-Aged Hubby—Alleged Forced Nuptials.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ethel M. Custer, a 16-year-old bride, has brought suit for divorce against her husband, who is twice as old as she. Mrs. Custer tells how Custer literally forced her to a marriage by taking her to the Courthouse at Port Oxford, securing a license and marrying her despite her protestations before she had time to realize what she was doing.

She says she never wanted to marry Custer, and that his plan of courtship was irregular and extraordinary. Mrs. Custer was living with her parents in Vancouver, Wash., when she met Custer last September. Custer proposed that they go to Port Oxford to visit his relatives. When she arrived there, he asked her to go to the Courthouse to see those relatives.

All unsuspecting the young girl acquiesced, when to her surprise he secured a marriage license and coaxed her so persistently that she agreed to marry him.

REVENGE IS THEORY.

RICE MURDER LIKELY INDUCED BY HATRED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CLEVELAND (O.) Aug. 6.—A startling development in the mysterious murder of William L. Rice, the millionaire lawyer, whose body was found in the roadway near his house last night, came tonight with the testimony of three men, a night watchman, a patrolman and a chauffeur, who told how they had found a man lurking in the rear of the Rice home, just prior to the murder. The man appeared to be a foreigner and when he was detected, fled.

Rice had been shot twice, struck on the head by a blunt weapon, and slashed across the left hand with a knife.

These men also testified four shots had been fired instead of two, as at first had been stated. Two bullets were found in Rice's body and the other two are believed to have been a signal to the murderer's accomplices who were watching the other approaches to the Rice home for their victim.

While refusing to make public the entire results of their investigations, the Mr. Rice's movements were closely watched all yesterday evening, and when he left the Euclid Club for his home, assassins were lying in wait in at least three places.

NOT ROBBERY.

The first theory of the police was that Rice had been killed during an attempt to rob him, but this theory was abandoned this afternoon and the police now believe the murdered man met his death at the hands of men who were seeking revenge.

They are searching for an Italian golf caddy, who, it is said, had sworn vengeance against Rice for siding against him in a fight which he had with another caddy, and which resulted in his dismissal.

The body was found close to a powerful arc light, and although Mr. Rice carried a large sum of money on his person, in addition to several articles of jewelry, nothing was missing.

A reward of $5000 has been offered by Rice's law partners for the Davilla Asks United State for Permission to Search Homes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN PEDRO .Sula, Spanish Honduras) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A number of instances outrageous and atrocious treatment Americans by the Honduran government officials are coming to light.

Political prisoners are being torture by hanging by their thumbs. The have been wholesale arrests of su pects.

President Davilla has asked permi sion of the United States governme to search the houses of all America here and at Puerto Cortez for ar and ammunition, which they clai have been accumulated by the Americans for the benefit of the revolution ists.

If the United States consents t lives of many Americans will be sa rificed, because they will not meek submit. They cannot remain und the present conditions without ar for their personal protection, and the are the only arms any of them have.

AMERICAN PERSECUTED.

Dr. J. M. Waller, an America formerly of New Orleans, who h been living here for many years, the victim of the most reprehensib persecution it is possible to imagin because the Governor, Señor Caria believes he has a large quantity arms concealed in his house.

A demand was made on the doctor give up the arms, but he replied th he had not except such as he need for his protection. Then a threat w made to arrest him and search h house, but fortunately they did n carry out this rash proceeding. I stead, they devised a form of persec tion that is just as bad.

A sentry has been placed in fro of Dr. Waller's house and every n tive who enters is arrested immediat ly on leaving and hustled off to ja where he is put through the thi degree.

PATIENTS WARNED.

Any American negro who visits t doctor is arrested and taken befo Gov. Carias and reprimanded for ca ing on a man who is under the di pleasure of the Governor, and told th if he wants medical treatment the are other doctors who can treat him.

White visitors are exempted fro arrest, but their names are taken dow and put on the list of enemies of th government. The authorities are u ing high-handed methods in getti evidence against their enemies.

Ignorant natives are arrested a tortured until they will confess anything, the favorite method being hang them up by the thumbs. A co pany of soldiers was arrested and di armed to prevent them from killi their officers.

MANY ARRESTED AS POLITICAL SUSPECT

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PUERTO CORTEZ (Honduras) v New Orleans, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Di patch.] Wholesale arrests of politic suspects are occurring here dail Among the arrests last night w Señor Don Federico Girbal, who w accused of complicity in the revolutio and, despite the great efforts of h friends to have him released, he w taken to San Pedro with the oth prisoners.

Señor Girbal, though a native of Central America, is said to be a Britis subject. While he has large interest in and around here, his family spend a good deal of time in New Orlean and there his daughter met and ma ried Dr. Leroy Stowe, who is the Marine Hospital surgeon detailed at Puerto Cortez, for the quarantine seaso Dr. Stowe enlisted his friends in th case and sought the aid of the American Vice-Consul, but the authoritie were obdurate, and he was taken t San Pedro, where his fate is bein awaited with keen anxiety.

Gov. Carias of San Pedro organize a force of cadets and had quite a formidable troop of young soldiers. Whe the trouble broke out here, he sen twenty-five of them here under command of Antonio Bonilla, the native who was given such a salutary lesso by Commander Fulham of the Mariett some years ago. Yesterday the commandant of the garrison received orders from Carias to arrest the twenty five cadets, disarm them and send them back to San Pedro under arrest.

It seems that Carias discovered tha his force of cadets had plotted a conspiracy which meant his own death as well as the death of their officers as the principal feature. What ha happened to them since their return t San Pedro is not known.

INDIAN CHIEF TELLS OF PALEFACE GREED.

Senate Committee Hears His Story of How Choctaws Lost Faith in Promises—Son Accuses McMurray, Congressmen Deny Alleged Interest.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MUSKOGEE (Okla.) Aug. 6.—Not only Jake L. Hamon, but J. F. McMurray was named as a would-be briber in the investigation of the $30,000,000 Oklahoma Indian land case before the special Congressional committee today.

McMurray is the holder of the contracts with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians, to promote which in Congress Senator Thomas P. Gore charges he was offered a bribe.

D. C. McCurtain, a Choctaw Indian, and a delegate to Washington for his tribe, charged that McMurray, in 1906, offered him a bribe of $25,000 to withdraw opposition to the old tribal McMurray contracts, which were subsequently disapproved by President Roosevelt.

CHIEF TELLS STORY.

Greene McCurtain, chief of 18,000 Choctaws and a venerable Indian of 62 years, then took the stand and told the committee that one George W. Scott, whom he believed acted in the interest of McMurray, had offered him one-fourth of the profit to be realized the tribe to withdraw all opposition. This offer referred to new contracts held by McMurray, which are the cause of the present investigation.

The amount of the bribe mentioned by D. C. McCurtain, who is a son of the chief, is the same as that which Senator Gore alleges was tendered him May 6 by Hamon to put through the pending contracts, which, according to Senator Gore, would result in the selling of 450,000 acres of coal, asphalt and timber lands owned by the Indians, to a New York syndicate on a basis that would give McMurray and his associates an "attorneys' fee" of 10 per cent., or $3,000,000.

The presentation of the charges against McMurray followed another day of sensational testimony, in which Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas and Congressman B. S. McGuire of Oklahoma appeared on the stand to refute statements that they were "interested" in the deal.

The name of Vice-President Sherman was again mentioned, and conferences

ENGLISH PEER IS HIGH MASON.

Here to Attend Meeting of Knights Templar.

Earl of Euston Talks of British Affairs.

Predicts Death Penalty for Dr. Crippen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Earl of Euston, who stands highest in Masonry in England, is in New York, at the Hotel Belmont. He is on his way to Chicago to attend the Grand Lodge meeting of the Knights Templar. He is past Grand Master of the Masons in Britain.

Six years ago he started a movement to amalgamate the English speaking Templars of the world. He thinks his idea is approaching success. That's the reason he is here now. Lord Euston is 62 years old, a widower, florid and well-preserved. He's a soldier, too. But while he is eligible and has a fine title he is not looking for an American heiress. In fact, he's not looking for a wife, wealthy or poor.

"Oh, the women; bless you, old chap; of course I like the American women. They are fine. Marry? No, I don't think so. While I like them all I am not considering marriage."

"Now, that's enough to say about that," spoke up Thomas Frazer, a member of the party and grand treasurer of the Lodge of England.

THE CRIPPEN CASE.

Asked about the Crippen case, Lord Euston said that all England was excited about it.

"Well, what about the outcome. Would you venture an opinion?"

"Oh, Crippen, he should be hanged. hat's what he'll get too, either that r life imprisonment. The people in ur country are all worked up over it nd I think any jury they select will onvict."

King Edward as Prince of Wales vas at the head of Masonry in England. Earl Euston virtually repreents King George, as he did Edward II, after his accession.

Asked about the reported unpopurity of King George, he twisted his ustache and said: "Don't you believe ."

"Greatest mistake ever made—that" himed in Mr. Fraser. "King George popular, well-liked and deserving. ake that from me. Isn't that the way ou say it here in the States?"

The party will leave for the West omorrow.

"The most striking differences in the stems are the quick manner in England of selecting juries, and the short ne between sentences and final judgents on appeal.

"We began our work by reading the wspaper accounts, then going to the lice courts, and following the cases rough to the Court of Appeal. Rube Waddell's Wife Offers to Exhibit Hers for Reasonable Consideration.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There may be here and there a devoted fan who thinks Rube Waddell has a monopoly on the curves in the Waddell family. For the benefit of these and of fandom in general, it may as well be stated at the outset that he had not. Mrs. Madge Waddell, his better half, has some curves at her command. At $1 a pound she will exhibit her curves, suitably draped in lingerie and pajamas, during "Made-in-St. Louis" week. Mrs. Waddell was one of a dozen young women who applied for positions to pose in muslin and linens in answer to an advertisement.

INDIAN CHIEF.

held by President Taft over the McMurray contracts were referred to.

Both President Taft and Vice-President Sherman, according to Senator Curtis, had declared that the 10 per cent. attorney fee asked for was excessive. The opinion was unanimous at the President's conference, he said, that in the sale of the land no attorneys' assistance was needed, as the government by treaty already had stipulated to sell the land on its own responsibility.

Something of a spirit of Indian war council was presented when Chief McCurtain, known as the "Governor," squatted himself in a chair before the committee, and, brushing the flies off his head with a large handkerchief, gave his testimony.

SENT PROTESTS.

"A long time ago," he said, "many of the Choctaws protested against the big fees that would be allowed under the McMurray contracts. I, myself, sent a protest to the Secretary of the Interior. Just before the adjournment of the last Congress, George W. Scott came to my home and asked me to sign a letter. I refused to do so. Then he came again and told me he wanted me to write a letter to the Secretary of the Interior withdrawing my protest against the McMurray contract.

"When I said I would not do that, he said he was authorized to agree to give me one-fourth of the profits if I did. 'Yes,' he said, 'we are going to get a 10 per cent. fee out of it and you will get one-fourth. Now you sign the letter and it will be a great bargain.'

"I absolutely refused to do it and he went away."

"A good many of your tribe did sign the contracts with McMurray, didn't they?" asked Congressman Miller.

SHORT OF FUNDS.

"Yes, they did that because they were losing all faith in the government. They have lost all faith in government officials and n. their tribal officials, too. It is because they have been given so many promises and the promises have not been kept. The government promised it would sell the land and distribute the profits in 1906. It has not done so yet. The Indians are becoming disheartened over the government's promises an that's why they signed the contracts. They thought it would be better to get some of the money than none at all."

"Are they in a hurry to get money?"

"Yes, they certainly are; they need it. They are poor, for they have been living on promises for so long."

"Why do you Indians have so many lawyers?"

"Because we want to get the money."

"Can you estimate how much your tribe has paid out in attorney fees in the last ten years?"

"Our tribe in that time has paid out about $300,000."

DAY'S DEVELOPMENTS.

Among the developments of today were:

Senator Curtis told of having been summoned to the White House to discuss with President Taft and Vice-President Sherman the merits of the McMurray contracts. President Taft had expressed the belief that the 10 per cent. fee was too high and his visitor agreed with him. This, the Senator thought, sufficiently refuted the imputation that he was "interested" in the deal. The Senator knew McMurray for years, and had never known of his attempts to "influence legislation."

Senator Curtis also testified that he also knew of no animosity between himself and Senator Gore, except that Mr. Gore had remarked that Curtis was meddling too much in Oklahoma affairs by fair means and by foul means.

Congressman C. E. Creager, of Oklahoma, attacking the testimony previously given by Hamon, whom he accused of having suggested that he might obtain an "interest" in the contracts. This Hamon denied. Hamon had asserted that before the conference at Washington, Creager had called him up on the telephone, and made the appointment. Creager, in a long circumstantial narrative of riding on street cars, meeting at a restaurant and going to the Occidental Hotel, emphatically declares that Hamon had called him up, and that the meeting was at Hamon's solicitation.

M'GUIRE DENIES "INTEREST."

Congressman McGuire denies he was ever "interested" in the contracts, or had sought their approval by Con-

Hamon had sometimes stopped at his suite of rooms at his hotel in Washington. McMurray had asked him if he had opposed the contracts and, on his answering he had not, he agreed with McMurray to tell President Taft that the entire Oklahoma delegation was not opposed to the contracts. He said he never had been improperly approached in regard to the contracts, and he never was interested in them, "to the extent of one penny."

R. L. Murray, of the Chickasaw tribe, said Governor Johnson, of that tribe, had repeatedly urged him to induce as many Indians as possible to send telegrams to Washington to have the contracts approved, which he had refused to do.

D. C. McCurtain, who described himself as a delegate to Washington for the Choctaws, preceded his father on the stand. He testified that before his disapproval of the old tribal contracts by President Roosevelt in 1908 and while they were still pending, he was approached by McMurray in the lobby of the Raleigh Hotel at Washington. McMurray had been talking with Cecil Lyon National Republican Committeeman of Texas, but Lyon wnet away before the subject of the $35,000 was discussed.

D. C. McCurtain testified: I met Mr. McMurray in the lobby and he said, "You know we have a contract for the sale of the lands."

I said I heard it, but had never seen a copy of the contract.

He said: "We have decided we will give you $25,000 if you will not oppose the contract."

"If the Secretary of the Interior approves the contract in its present form we will give you $25,000. If he scales the contract, then the $25,000 probably will be cut down accordingly. I want to talk to you further about the matter.

I didn't see McMurray for several days, but in the meantime I got to thinking about the proposition, and I knew they were going to bring powerful political influence to bear in support of that contract. I thought maybe if I didn't manifest too much opposition to that contract I would be in a position ultimately to defeat it; but if I became too antagonistic, I might have no opportunity to get my forces together and that they might, in some way secure the approval of the contracts.

"Several days after that I saw McMurray in the Capitol, and I said: 'I have decided to accept your proposition,' but I didn't learn any more about the contracts by that means. The matter went on for some time and no effort was made to get the contracts approved. Then the matter went along until the constitutional convention of Oklahoma appointed a committee to investigate whether it were possible to purchase the coal lands from the Indians.

"McMurray became active again; he wanted to appear before this committee as the representative of the Choctaws. He endeavored to obtain a written statement from Gov. McCurtain to the effect that McMurray represented the Choctaws, and they so recognized him. McMurray came out to my house to see me. He stated he thought he was in a position to do the nation a great deal of good.

"I said: 'Mr. McMurray, I don't want anything to do with your contracts.'

"Mr. McMurray, in an interview, denied he made the offer. He said Lyon had been financially interested with him in the contracts."

Congressman McGuire's testimony related to whether he occupied part of a suite at a Washington hotel with Hamon. He said he paid for the apartment and it was the custom for his friends from Oklahoma to stop there. Hamon, he said, had stopped there two or three times.

"Have you ever received any financial assistance from any person having contract with the Indians?" Chairman Burk asked.

"I never have," replied Mr. McGuire. "There never was the suggestion of aid to be given me by McMurray or any one else."

"Is there any reason why Senator Gore should feel unfriendly toward you?"

"None that I know of. Yet he has done his utmost to give me a black eye. Moreover, he has done a good deal of fabricating. He showed this in his attitude toward our efforts to secure appropriations for Federal buildings at Guthrie, Blackwell and Kingfisher. He wrote letters saying he would do all he could to help get the buildings, and then he wrote letters saying he had done all he could to get them, but to a dead certainty he did all he could to have the appropriations knocked out."

"How many times did Hamon stop at your apartment in Washington?"

"Well, I never locked the door at those apartments. Anybody from Oklahoma could come and make themselves at home. Hamon came there because I had known him for years, but Hamon never discussed with me the

READY FOR SIR KNIGHTS.

Chicago Preens Herself to Entertain Templars.

Californians Due to Arrive in Windy City Today.

Los Angeles Hot Contender for Next Conclave.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Accustomed as it is to big events and thrills, Chicago and its 350,000 visitors is expecting to sit up and take immediate notice when the Grand Commandery of California and the Los Angeles boomers arrive at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Los Angeles is a hot contender for the next tri-annual conclave, which New Orleans fondly hopes to acquire. New Orleans also wants the Panama Exposition, which San Francisco allows it can take care of right handily. Inasmuch as San Francisco wants the Panama Exposition and Los Angeles desires the next conclave, these cities are expected to make common cause against the Crescent City which is asking for both events.

New Orleans is already on the ground and has opened headquarters with a famous old colored coffee-cook who dispenses Creole drip-coffee, corn pones and other delicacies to all comers.

However, when the Golden State boomers come breezing in with their customary carload of fruits, flowers and wines, it is understood that the pace will be found pretty swift for the langorous South. Atlanta also is a bidder for the next conclave, but has not yet made any move to let the public know its desires.

Chicago this evening completed its primping in preparation for visitors and sat back with folded hands, confident that everything was ready for the 30,000 Knights Templar and the half-million relatives and friends who will accompany them to the great conclave which opens Monday. Thousands of them are already here. The streets and hotels are congested, but order prevails in every department.

Chicago never saw such elaborate decorations for any event. The spectacle overshadows the best efforts during the world's exposition. Hotels and restaurants in the loop district alone are prepared to feed three million people every hour if necessary. All the lake steamers have been chartered for various days and 1000 automobiles have been donated for the wives and daughters of the visiting Sir Knights for trips through the parks.

"GREATEST SINCE FAIR." DECLARE CHICAGOANS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—The arrival here today of William Bromwell Melish of Cincinnati, the Right Eminent Deputy Grand Master and acting Most Eminent Grand Master of the United States—the first official event of the thirty-first triennial Knights Templars conclave—opened what Chicagoans say will be the most spectacular week of entertainment since the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893.

Although the formal opening of the conclave will not take place until Tuesday, it is estimated there are over 50,000 visitors who will remain until the end of the gathering.

When the parade of escort opens the conclave on Tuesday, it is estimated that 500,000 visitors will be here.

600 ARE GREETED.

Grand Master Melish was greeted today by 600 Knights in regalia, including 100 mounted, and led by Sir Knight John D. Cleveland, Grand Commander, of Illinois. Grand Master Melish and the Cincinnati Knights were escorted through an elaborate entrance arch on Michigan avenue, and with a vanguard of mounted police, bands playing and banners flying, taken to his headquarters in the Congress Hotel.

Tomorrow morning conclave week will be inaugurated with religious services, at which the Rev. George C. Rafter, Very Eminent Prelate of the grand encampment, will officiate.

Monday will be devoted to receptions, with a military concert in the evening.

Tuesday, following the parade, the opening session of the grand conclave will be held. The grand conclave will meet daily at Music Hall, and its members, comprising the four highest officers of each State commandery, will have little time for the social programme prepared for the great body of knights.

DRILL CONTEST FEATURE.

Wednesday and Thursday the drill contests will be held. Thursday night there will be fireworks on the lake front. Friday and Saturday sightseeing and general entertainment will occupy the time of the visitors.

Chicago has gone to greater pains in decoration and preparation for its visitors than for any other occasion in years, and there is scarcely a building in the downtown district that does not bear some sign of welcome.

State street has been transformed into "Templarway," decorative pillars, covered with incandescent lights lining each side of the street.

Portland Editor Undergoes Treatment at Baltimore Hospital and Is on Road to Recovery.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BALTIMORE (Md. Aug 6. (10 p.m.) [Exclusive Dispatch.] Col. H. W. Scott, editor of the Oregonian, of Portland, Or., arrived here last Monday, considerably fatigued by his long journey. After an examination, he was sent to the John Hopkins Hospital for rest and preliminary treatment which resulted in considerable improvement in his condition.

The operation for prostatitis was performed at the hospital this morning at 9 o'clock by the famous surgeon, Dr. Hugh H. Young. The outcome of the operation was entirely satisfactory and the condition of the patient was excellent on his return to the ward. He came out of the anasthetic, and eight hours after the operation, when seen by members of his family present, his condition was most encouraging.

One hour later, he had a slight sinking spell, but, under vigorous treatment, his system re-acted well, and his condition now, twelve hours after the operation, is fairly good, with a prospect of satisfactory convalesence.

Deacons Want Court Injunction Against Expelled Member. Say He's Revengeful.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] On petition of Lewis B. Major, and other deacons, a temporary restraining order was issued today by the Wyandotte District Court, prohibiting William V. Jones from attending the Armourdale Baptist Church. The deacons in their petition, alleged that since his expulsion from the church in September, 1909, Jones has persisted in attending services and by "facial grimaces and noses," aroused the congregation.

tine Mining Company. The hold-up occurred at Confidence Divide, the steepest part of the grade from Mogollon to Silver City and one where the driving is extremely difficult. As the United States mail sacks were slit open and the express packages broken into by the two highwaymen, the United States Attorneys at Santa Fé were immediately notified and sent a detachment of Territorial rangers to Silver City to join in the man hunt.

SECOND IN TWO WEEKS.

The holdup was the second to occur on the same stage line recently. Just two weeks before at about the same hour, the stage was held up at the point of a winchester and a search made of the interior of the stage, but no ore or bullion was discovered and the driver was allowed to proceed. It is thought that a close watch was kept from that time until Saturday by the robbers who watch the mines at Mogollon for the shipment of bullion.

As soon as it was discovered the load was being taken to Silver City for shipment by express here, the men rode ahead of the stage, stationed themselves along side the road at Confidence Divide and shot the driver from ambush in cold blood.

It is thought that the two robbers are men who have been seen loafing around the mines at Mogollon. Lynching is openly talked of by the people if the murderers of the stage driver are found.

GIRL RESCUED BY ST. LOUIS POLICE SERGEANT.

She Was Dragged Into Black Man's Room When She Answered Advertisement—Visiting Cousin from Los Angeles Advises Lynching, But Officers Hurry Prisoner Away.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Bessie Unger, High School graduate, aged 22, was rescued from the clutches of a negro man in the bedroom of the janitor of the Culver office building, No. 302 North Twelfth street here at 8 tonight.

Police Sergeant Wade Matthews broke open the door, and seeing the negro threatening the white girl with a revolver struck the black on the forehead with his club knocking him through a window into an alley where he was captured by police waiting below. The negro said his name was James Bradford, aged 47.

Miss Unger explained that the negro dragged her into the room when she called in answer to an advertisement for a young woman to take charge of his office business when he left town on Monday on account of sickness. Aaron Priwer, her cousin, of Los Angeles, here visiting her uncle, Paul Littman, with whom she lives, had accompanied her and was waiting on the street below for her return.

He advocated that the crowd assembled lynch the negro, and cries of "lynch him," and "Get a can of oil," hastened the police away with their prisoner.

Seorgeant Matthews acted on information from James B. Smith, salesman, at No. 3501 Dodier street, whose daughter had answered the same advertisement. A warrant charging attempted criminal assault, the penalty for which is hanging in Missouri, will be applied for tomorrow.

AUTO CHASES TROLLEY CAR IN NEW ENGLAND.

Greenwich, Ct., Postoffice Employees and Chief of Police Capture Ingenious Robber of Many Aliases. Stolen Money Order Found in His Shoe and Many Pawn Tickets.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GREENWICH (Conn.) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] After a wild automobile chase, with the machine traveling at fifty miles an hour, Chief of Police Ritch, Asst. Postmaster George Sconeld and Postoffice Clerk Joseph Delaney, today captured William Baldwin, alias C. V. Woods, alias Edward Perry, alias Elmer Chadwick, one of the most daring postoffice robbers and ingenious swindlers that has ever operated in New England.

For three weeks inspectors have been watching the postoffice here, where it was expected Baldwin would call for a package. Today he appeared and asked for mail addressed to Elmer Chadwick. Clerk Delaney recognized him and told a clerk to go for the police while Baldwin was detained.

After a few minutes Baldwin be-time, Scofield had got into an automobile and meeting Chief Ritch, who was on his way to the postoffice, took him and Delaney.

The machine was rushed at the utmost speed until the trolley was overtaken and the prisoner was captured.

He is charged with having broken into the postoffice at Rumford, Conn., on July 14, and having stolen six money order books. He is said to have then proceeded to order bills of goods from various mail-order firms, sending orders as payment and at the same time sending apparently genuine advices to the postoffice, where the orders were made payable.

When searched, there was found in his shoe, a money order for $100, made out to Tiffany & Company. He also GHASTLY RELIC.

JAWBONE IS IN EVIDENCE.

Important Clew in Kendall Murder Case.

Identity of Victim Established by Teeth.

Statewide Search for Accused Jap Begins.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CAZADERO (Cal.) Aug. 6.—In the cañon three-quarters of a mile from the house of the Kendall family, there was found this afternoon an upper jaw, apparently that of a young man. This is the most direct evidence yet secured to prove that Thomas A. Kendall, the young man of the ill-fated family, had met his death.

Dist.-Atty. Lea said that he considered the finding of this bit of the anatomy the best yet secured, for, from the finding of the teeth the identity of the victim can be established.

The back teeth on either side had been filled with amalgam. The front teeth are missing, apparently they had been knocked out. The find would indicate that Tom Kendall's body was cremated.

The jaw was found by Newton J. [illegible] about a quarter of a mile from the spot in the cañon where the torso of a woman, believed to be that of Mrs. Kendall, was found earlier in the week.

Dist.-Atty. Lea today visited the cabin on the Starbuck place where the Japanese suspect, Henry Yamagachi, was seen about the time the triple murder was committed. He collected several articles which may have a bearing on the case, including a broken ax handle, which might have been discarded by the Japanese for a new handle with which to carry out his butcheries. Lea and Sheriff Smith returned to Santa Rosa tonight.

The Kendall house is left in charge of Deputy Sheriff E. E. Crosper. Four men familiar with the hills have been engaged by the Sheriff to continue the search for more remains.

DENTIST IS RELEASED.

[illegible] Mayeda, the Japanese dentist who was arrested at the Starbuck home last night on suspicion of being Henry Yamagachi, the Japanese charged with the murder of the Kendall family, was released this morning after being held in detinue all night.

Deputy Sheriff H. T. Ramsay of Santa Rosa and Deputy Sheriff Reynolds with Y. Yoshida of Santa Rosa, called at the Police Station this morning and declared positively that Mayeda was not the man who is being sought. According to the Santa Rosa officials, a blunder was made by Dist.-Atty. Hoyle in sending the picture, which was received at the police stations yesterday, as the picture nor the description of Yamagachi, who is accused of the murder, and the authorities are now making a search to find an authentic photograph of the man they are looking for.

Little 11-year-old Arthur Collins will be Sheriff Smith's chief deputy when he leaves today on a State-wide search for Yamagachi. Arthur Collins knew the hunted Japanese when the latter worked in a candy store here, and so clear in his description of the man that the Sheriff is positive the boy will recognize him even at a distance.

With this hope, Smith and his youthful deputy will visit the Japanese quarters in all cities and towns of the State in their search for Yamagachi.

INQUEST IS RESUMED.

The Coroner's jury resumed its session here today—a change from the gloom of the ranch that was welcomed by everyone in attendance. While the jury was sitting today, a posse was scouring the hills in search of the rifle with which the Kendalls are presumed to have been shot. This posse is led by Arthur Trosper, one of the most skillful trailers in this part of the country.

Most of the deputies who have been working on the case are worn out by the intense heat, and, at the conclusion of the inquest today, Sheriff Smith organized a new posse to resume the search for the missing remains.

JAP'S COUSIN HELD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Aug. 6.—K. Yamagachi, cousin of Henry Yamagachi, the accused murderer of the Kendall family at Cazadero, was placed under arrest at Point Richmond this afternoon. The men are known to have been intimate friends and it is believed that the prisoner may be able to throw some light on his cousin's movements since the crime.

McKIM DIVORCE SUIT.

IS DELAYED AT RENO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

RENO, Aug. 6.—Proceedings in the suit for divorce brought by Mrs. Margaret McKim, the Newport society leader, against Dr. Smith Hollis McKim of Baltimore were resumed in the District Court this morning, when a motion to set the case for trial was heard. Counsel for Mrs. McKim announced that the physician's attorney had refused to accept service in the case and consequently the court was unable to proceed at this time. Dr. McKim was allowed until Thursday of next week to file an appearance. If no appearance is filed by that time a motion for default will be entered. It is thought that Dr. McKim's attorney is preparing to make an effort to take the case into the Federal Court.

ASTRONOMER LEARNS SECRET OF VARIABLE STARS.

Mare Island Observer Advances Theory That Cluster Variables Are Suns Attended by Planets and Explains Why Their Light Blazes Up Suddenly.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

VALLEJO, Aug. 6.—Announcement is made by Prof. T. J. See, U.S.N., the noted astronomer, in charge of the naval observatory at Mare Island, that he has succeeded in establishing the general cause of variable stars.

For the past two years Prof. See has been occupied with extensive researches in cosmical evolution, which have given an entirely new aspect to the nebular hypothesis, and have become celebrated under the name of the "Capture Theory."

The main cause invoked to explain the round form of planetary orbits and other heavenly motions, is a resisting medium of nebulous material which is shown to be diffused everywhere in space.

Within the past fifteen years many hundred variable stars have been discovered in star clusters, especially at the Harvard observatory by Pickering and Bailey. Some of these have been critically studied by Barnard, of the Yerkes observatory, and the periods of light variation found to be as regular as the motion of a perfect clock, so that fluctuation of light of these variables could be used to measure time almost as accurately as the rotation of the earth about its axis.

In certain clusters, the variables are to be counted by hundreds; in others very few can be found. Heretofore this fact has been very perplexing to astronomers. After careful investigation, Prof. See finds that the cluster variables are suns attended by planets which revolve in close proximity in short periods, and that every time they pass through perihelion they plunge into a resisting medium of nebulosity so that the light suddenly blazes up and afterwards dies down gradually.

Some clusters are full of negulosity, while others are quite free from it and, according to Prof. See, this accounts for the abundance of variables in certain clusters and their almost total absence in others.

Prof. See says he has established also that the blazing forth of stars now and then in the heavens is caused by actual collisions with planets revolving about them. The fixed stars generally are now proved to be attended by systems of planets similar to those which revolve about the sun.

Prof. See asserts that any star, such as our sun, will have, in the long run, a collision once in a hundred billion years. The great length of period between these collisions shows that in general, such catastrophes do not affect the safety of the Universe.

Freeman of this city and José Alavarez, a Papago Indian. With specially constructed grappling hooks they scaled the cliff for two thousand feet.

RATTLER AMUSES CHILD.

MOTHER DISPATCHES SNAKE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEVADA CITY (Cal.) Aug. 6.—When Mrs. James Oxalli of Blue Tent went into the back yard to look for her child yesterday, she found the infant playing with a huge rattlesnake, the latter coiled up and hissing and rattling as though to amuse the child. Each time the child stooped over to pick up the reptile it would stick out its tongue, which served all the more to delight the baby. The mother was frantic, and quickly drew the child away, later dispatching the snake with a stick. It measured three feet, and had four rattles and a button. The rattlers are unusually numerous in this district this year.

CONVENTION PREPARATION.

Stockton Will Entertain the Y.M.I. Institute.

Six Thousand Delegates Are Expected in City.

Programme Opened With a Ball Last Evening.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

STOCKTON, Aug. 6.—Preparations are now complete for the reception here of over 6000 delegates to the Y.M.I. convention, which will remain in session four days, beginning Sunday. St. Ignatius Council, No. 25, of San Francisco, tonight entertained the local lodge at a ball on the roof garden of the Stockton. They arrived this evening on a special train 250 strong.

This, the twenty-sixth grand council of the Pacific jurisdiction, according to those in authority, will be far the largest in point of attendance ever held in this State. It is expected that many special trains will arrive in this city tomorrow.

PARADE PLANS.

The parade will form at the Southern Pacific depot and march up to Main street to San Joaquin and from thence to Washington square, where low mass will be observed, the first out-of-door mass ever celebrated in the city.

After mass the gathering will proceed to Oak Park, where a barbecue will be served, consisting of two 800-pound steers, twenty bulls' heads, twelve sheep, 6000 loaves of bread, chili sauce and a carload of Lodi watermelons.

Sacramento "Panama" Murphy's baseball team will play a picked team from the different councils of the institute. A number of other outdoor sports have been arranged for tomorrow's entertainment.

The business session of the grand council will be held in Weber Hall Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Princess May Victims Arrive at Juneau on Rescue Steamer—Plans for Salvage.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

JUNEAU (Alaska) Aug. 6.—The Steamer George today brought the passengers of the wrecked steamship Princess May to Juneau, and also some members of the crew. Captain McLeod and a number of the officers and crew are on Sentinel Island waiting until the salvage operating begin.

The wreck took place in American waters, and a Seattle firm will undertake to raise the steamship, Canadian wreckers being excluded by law. Twenty-nine sacks of mail were taken out of the wreck unwet and were sent South on the steamship Jefferson last night. There was a big shipment of mineral ore in the hold, and during the salvage operations this will be dumped overboard.

Half the width of the ship was all the distance that would have been needed to clear the reef. The steamship was moving 13 knots an hour. She struck lightly and skidded, and then struck heavily and stopped. The Sentinel Island light had been visible for half an hour. The quartermaster saw the peril a moment too late. He tried to shift the course of the vessel, but was unable to do so.

LAST DAY FOR CREAM CONES.

Harmful Nickle Teazers Are Forbidden by Health Authorities in Oregon. Analysis Proves Them Unfit.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The death-dealing ice-creams cones in vivid shades of rose and jaundiced yellows, which for seasons past have lured the nickles from the fingers of Portland's youth, are banished. State Food Commissioner Bailey has delivered his ultimatum, and the local dealers and manufacturers have agreed to abandon at once both the manufacture and sale of the cornucopias.

Food Commissioner Bailey caused an analysis to be made of cones of various colors. From the coal tar dyes brought forth it was found possible to dye white woolen yarns in all colors of the rainbow, and the colors once in could not be washed out or faded. Mr. Bailey found that the batter of which the cones is made, is composed of flour, water, saccharine and cotton seed oil, colored with either napthol, acid, or alkali extract, which, if taken in sufficient quantities acts as an irritant on the delicate stomach tissues of children, and filtering through the organisms, produces a rise in temperature.

REFUSES TO MARRY SISTER.

Crown Prince of Siam Sets Country by the Ears in Defying Traditions of Family.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—The Crown Prince of Siam is adding gray hairs to the head of his royal father, King Chulalongkorn, and has set the country by the ears generally, by defying the traditions of a long ancestral line in refusing to marry his sister.

According to the Rev. W. C. Dodd, a Presbyterian missionary, who arrived here yesterday, all Siam is agog over the Prince's announcement. From time immemorial, the missionary says, it has been the Siamese custom for the Crown Prince to wed his sister, or, if he has no sister, then a half-sister, the daughter of one of his father's numerous wives. The present Crown Prince, though, has asserted his independence by publicly declaring he intends to have but one wife, and that one of his own choosing.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SEATTLE, Aug. 6.—Gov. Brooks of Wyoming, Gov. Spry of Utah and Gov. Burk of Montana, have written to Gov. Hay of Washington, indorsing his plan for holding a conference this fall in Salt Lake to discuss conservation, and to consider means to keep the control of the water power and other natural resources in the heads of the State government, instead of allowing the national government to assume full charge. Gov. Gillett of California has written a non-committal letter in reply to Gov. Hay's suggestion. Gov. Brooks suggested the conference be held in Denver, and that the executives of all States west of the Mississippi be invited. This is being considered.

Your Teeth

F-E-A-R

A little word of four letters.

A syllable that has caused more misery and suffering than any other in the language.

I have been told it has killed more people than all the battles of history.

I have banished the FEAR of the dentist's chair. Big, husky men come in here every day, with white faces and the sweat standing out on their foreheads and beg me to say it again—what?

I NEVER HURT A BIT

and then they put me through the 'third degree," and make me prove it before I can get one of those huskies to take a chair.

I tell you, it is terrible the way people have been abused by dentists.

Fear of being butchered keeps young folks away, and just at a time when their teeth are beginning to decay.

Away with this bogy man.

I have downed him.

My painless plan of extracting, filling, treating or crowning teeth is building up the greatest dental business in Los Angeles for me, because my patients spread the gospel of glad tidings.

I get them here by my ads.

But I get ten through my patients for every one that comes from an ad.

Are you a coward?

Will you be convinced?

Do you know where my offices are? (See below.) You need me—I need you—for you have some friends who are dodging the dentist, and they will listen to you.

Meanwhile—maybe I had better say once more—

"I NEVER HURT A BIT"

I mean what I say.

Will you let me prove it?

CONFIRMS PACT REPORT.

Assistant Manager of Jap Steamship Line Says Company Has Parted Company With Espee.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William H. Avery, assistant general manager of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha Oriental Steamship Company, confirmed the report that the Southern Pacific road and this company had decided to part company. The traffic agreement that has existed between them for many years will terminate on January 26, upon which date the Japanese company will enter into a traffic agreement with the Western Pacific road. The contract between the Japanese company and the Southern Pacific carried a clause which permitted either to withdraw from the contract upon giving six months' notice. Such notice was given in New York on July 26. Mr. Avery said:

"There is no ill feeling between our company and the Southern Pacific road. If we had not entered into a contract with the Western Pacific the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, or some other foreign company, would have done so, and that would not have been a good thing for us. The Southern Pacific has its own boats and we cannot, therefore, get all of its traffic. The Western Pacific has not boats and we, therefore, get all of its traffic and also keep a country foreign to Japan from getting a foothold on the Pacific. Really, however, under present conditions the Oriental traffic is not worth fighting for. It costs the Southern Pacific between $300,000 and $500,000 a year to keep the American flag afloat on the Pacific."

NEW ROAD HOLDS RECORD.

Western Pacific Shortens Fruit Time to New York—Competitors Sit Up and Take Notice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Other western railroads are considerably exercised over the apparent coup executed by the Western Pacific, which ran a trainload of California fruit from San Francisco to New York in eight days. The record thus established is only three days slower than the ordinary passenger train between the same points.

If this can be done when the Western Pacific is new, it is stated that another day can be cut off the schedule when the roadbed and track get in perfect condition. The ordinary fast fruit schedule between the two oceans is from eleven to thirteen days and the managers of other railroads declare that this is fast enough. It is also maintained that the Western Pacific cannot maintain any such a schedule and that it would be unnecessary to do so in this day of refrigerator cars.

ROCK ISLAND SHARES SOLD.

Kuhn-Loeb-Cassell Syndicate Bargains for Farquhar-Pearson Interests in London.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—A cablegram to The Tribune from London says a conference was held in London yesterday at which final details in connection with the taking over by the Kuhn-Loeb-Cassell syndicate of the Farquhar-Pearson interests in the Rock Island Railroad, were settled.

The meeting was attended by Sir Ernest Cassell, on behalf of the syndicate, and Farquhar, who started for America today to carry out the details.

While Farquhar and Pearson still retain a small holding in Rock Island, the Reid-Moore interests have lost the controlling interest in the concern, which now rests with the Kuhn-Loeb-Cassell syndicate absolutely.

The informant says one of the first things the new organization will do is to reorganize the whole system, making sweeping changes in the active management of the line and reëstablishing it with the most modern methods. With Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Sir Ernest Cassell are associated a powerful group of French bankers and it is stated they have paid $20,000,000 for the Pearson interests.

INSIDE VIEW.

SOCIAL AND A MORAL FORCE.

RAILROAD HAS FUNCTION NOT GENERALLY CONSIDERED.

Modern Systems Conduct Clubs, Bestow Pensions, Maintain Rest Houses, Training Schools, Hospitals and Banks for Benefit of Employees. Good Citizenship Aids.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The prevailing public impression regarding a modern railroad is that of a corporation organized with the sole purpose of manufacturing and selling one commodity—namely, transportation. This impression may have been nearly correct a quarter of a century ago, but a marvelous change has come over the character of the business performed by every large railway system in the United States.

Almost as important as the railroad function of transporting freight and passengers has become its other function of making men better citizens, of making them happy, industrious, thoughtful, self-educated, sober and independent citizens. In doing this the railroad has become a great social and moral force, and is in the business of conducting clubs, bestowing pensions, maintaining rest houses, training schools, hospitals and banks wherein its employés may gather their savings and secure a reasonable interest on them.

Probably nothing has done more for the cause of temperance than the stand which the railroads have taken in use of liquor. Not only is drunkenness recognized as a cause for dismissal, but one after another the railroads are going so far as to discourage all drinking. Many of them have rules forbidding an employé to touch or use intoxicating liquor in any form.

The extensive club life among railroad employés is one of the most important results of the interest shown by the railroad in the daily life of its men. When the engineer, fireman or the conductor leaves duty now in some town away from home, he is not forced into a saloon for comfort. He goes to the Railroad Club, where he may mix with his companions in clean surroundings with books, newspapers, games and music. At this same club he is able to get an appetizing meal at very low cost.

SOME BUILDING STATISTICS.

Los Angeles Makes Good Showing in July, Compared With Many Other Leading Cities.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] According to statistics compiled by the Construction News, a small increase in building operations in the leading cities is shown for July but there is a decrease in cost in most of the larger cities.

Los Angeles shows an increase in the cost of buildings erected during July of this year of 29 per cent. In July, 1910, 832 permits were taken out and the cost of the building $1,319,268, while in July, 1909 only 627 permits were taken out and the cost was $1,022,213.

Troy, N. Y. leads the country with an increase of 436 per cent. for the month. Wilmington, Del., ranks next with an increase of 368 per cent. New York and Chicago both show decreases of 67 per cent.

KING'S QUIET INNOVATION.

George V Outshines All of England's Statesmen.

Steps Point Toward a New Imperial Epoch.

Shapes Party Policies Without Any Criticism.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] George V's hope is said to be that he may live to hold courts in the capital cities of the several governmental partners in the Empire, thus making the crown actually visible on the outskirts as at the center.

His remarkable extension of the Royal prerogative in government is, by common consent, the most important development of the session of Parliament, interrupted this week for the summer recess. Without any definite intimation that he intends to open up a new imperial epoch, he has taken steps that lead apparently to such a goal.

"It has not been Mr. Asquith, neither has it been Mr. Balfour, who has stood in the center of the stage at Westminster of late," says a comprehensive review of the conduct of public business since the death of Edward VII.

"The new sovereign has completely overshadowed both of them, as well as other statesmen, by the pressure personally exerted in shaping the policies of the party in power and the party in opposition. There was nothing comparable to it in the reigns of ria and Edward, and the nation the world are face to face with a thing."

hat is equally significant is the k acquiescence by all parties, ther English, Scotch, Welsh or h, in the revision and expansion of epted ideas of royal activity. No ous criticism is to be heard anyre of the King's quiet but resolute ovations.

e theory is gaining ground on all s that the new condition of British ire and the modern world suggest need of Royal activities for which earlier times there was no obvious nand.

OYALTY HOODOOS LIPTON.

Loses Topmast While King Al- o Is Aboard—Accidents While King Edward Was Guest.

CIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

(Isle of Wight) Aug. 6.—Lipton's yacht, Shamrock, on h King Alfonso of Spain, a t of the owners, lost its topmast y while a stiff breeze was blowand a heavy rain falling. No one s injured.

ll luck for the second time follows Thomas Lipton in entertaining royalty on his racing yachts, King Edward having been a guest on Shamrock II when the challenger for the American cup was devastated and wrecked by a sudden squall on the olent, May 22, 1901.

King Edward had a miraculous escape from injury when the topmast and then the heavy steel mast gave way, the wreckage coming down all over the deck. A heavy block fell between Lady Londerry and Mrs. W. Jameson, and a wire rope struck the owner on the head, momentarily stunning him.

King Edward, who had started to go below, was half in and half out of the companionway, and when the owner and the crew of the yacht recovered from their consternation His Majesty was seen clambering over the wreckage trying to ascertain whether any one was injured.

ANTICIPATES PUBLIC SNUB.

Dorothy Deacon, That Was, as Princess Radziwill, Uses Wits to Good Advantage.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Princess Albert Radziwill, who was Miss Dorothy Deacon of Boston and Newport, outwitted the Duchess De [illegible], when she met her haughty new relative at a great Paris ball.

The Duchess was a Radziwill and opposed the marriage of Prince Albert to the American girl. So when she saw her at the ball the Duchess is said to have attempted to publicly snub the young princess.

But the latter was too clever and quick. Instead of succumbing to the force of the impending blow, the ever calm and smiling American walked up to the duchess and profitably complimented her on her splendid appearance.

That was disconcerting, for even a duchess cannot withstand the effect of compliments, but the princess followed up her advantage by pointedly referring to the superb whiteness of the diamonds worn.

"Ils sont bien blancs," she said, "they are very white," but the emphasis put on the word "blancs" (white) was a stinging reminder of the connection of the Blanc family (the source of much of the Radziwill wealth) with Monte Carlo gambling.

King George's Daughter, Fourteen, Visits Children in Hospital, Leaving Treat for Them.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Princess Mary played the part of a good fairy to the little children in the Beatrice Hospital when she was taken there a few days ago by the King and Queen. While their majesties were inspecting the Fineen lights, Princess Mary hurried away to the children, for she is only 14, and sympathetic.

After vainly trying to make the usually loquacious parrot in the ward talk she went among the tiny cots of the children and chatted merrily with the patient little sufferers.

Ernie Little, a Canadian boy with a bad burn on his hand, won her sympathy at a glance, and she petted and patted the youngster, to his confusion and delight. The children shouted, "Good-by, little girl," which pleased her immensely.

After she had gone the sister in charge presented each child with chocolate and a penny, which the Princess had left for them.

LEPROSY GERMS ISOLATED.

Triumph of Doctors in Honolulu May Lead Eventually to Cure for Dread Disease.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

HONOLULU, Aug. 6.—Drs. Brinckerhoff and Curry, and M. Thallman of Honolulu, have succeeded in isolating germs of leprosy, it was announced today. This means, it is said, the ultimate discovery of a cure for the disease.

The doctors are attempting to make toxine from the bacilli. Experiments at the leper settlement soon will be made.

PLAGUE-INFECTED CITY.

HUNDREDS DIE IN CANTON.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) Aug. 6.—That the city of Canton is badly infected with plague is the news brought by the steamer Ning Chow from the Orient yesterday. People are dying by hundreds, and it has been difficult to get men to bury the dead. The hot weather of an unusually dry summer has made conditions in the city unhealthful. Efforts were made to burn some of the infected quarters, but with little success. The houses are so crowded and so dry that it was found difficult to burn them without starting a serious conflagration.

BETROTHED.

RETENDER TO FRENCH THRONE WILL WED BELGIAN PRINCESS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BRUSSELS (Belgium) Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Betrothal of Prince Victor Napoleon, the Imperialist pretender to the throne of France, and Princess Clementine of Belgium, a cousin of King Albert, will be officially announced to the courts of Europe as soon as the Empress Eugenie returns to England from her annual cruise in th Mediterranean. It is expected that the wedding will take place in the autumn, or immediately after Christmas. The ceremony will be in the little Catholic Church of Farnborough, Hampshire, England, where the deposed Empress of France, who will leave her great wealth to Prince Victor, has resided thirty years.

Bonapartist enthusiasts in France are sorely distressed at the promises their leader has been compelled to give to win Princess Clementine's hand.

King Albert of Belgium, now has a document signed by the Prince, in which the latter faithfully promises never to advance his claim to the throne in France while in Belgium.

Another clause in the marriage settlement reuiqres the couple to live with the Prince's widowed mother at the latter's chateau De Moncalleri, near Turin.

The couple will only visit Brussels as guests of the King and Queen and the French pretender will have to arrange to issue his periodical half-hearted manifestos from Italy.

ANGELENOS IN SCOTLAND.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Harold Richardson and wife of Los Angeles have taken a place in Scotland, where they will entertain a party of friends during the grouse shooting season. Many Americans will be among their guests.

KING-TO-BE PUTS OFF BABY WIFE.

MENELIK'S SUCCESSOR DIVORCES BRIDE, EIGHT YEARS OLD.

She Is Daughter of Rebel and a Grand-Niece of Deposed Empress, So Abyssinians Would Not Have Her for Queen—Groom Is Aged Fourteen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ROME, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Though only 14 years old, the future "King of Kings" of Abyssinia has just divorced his eight-year-old wife, Melograno. Political grounds are solely responsible for this untimely disruption.

Shortly after the youthful couple were married, in May of last year, Negus Menelik designated the bridegroom, Prince Lidj Yassu, as his successor on the Ethiopian throne. But the fact that the bride was the daughter of a rebel did not please her future subjects and recently it became known that she was a grand-niece of the deposed Empress Taitou. This benevolent old lady Abyssinians wish to entirely forget on account of her treachery, and they refused to have a relative of hers as their queen. So the youthful Negus has become once more single in order to satisfy his people.

During their brief year of married life the coming Negus and Melograno occupied separate villas on the heights outside the capital. They were never allowed to discuss domestic matters confidentially and spent the occasional hours allotted them playing together with toy steam engines. The unfortunate young lady in the case, who through no fault of her own has had her lawful husband taken from her, will now be "put away" with some remote tribe, to forget she ever was a wife.

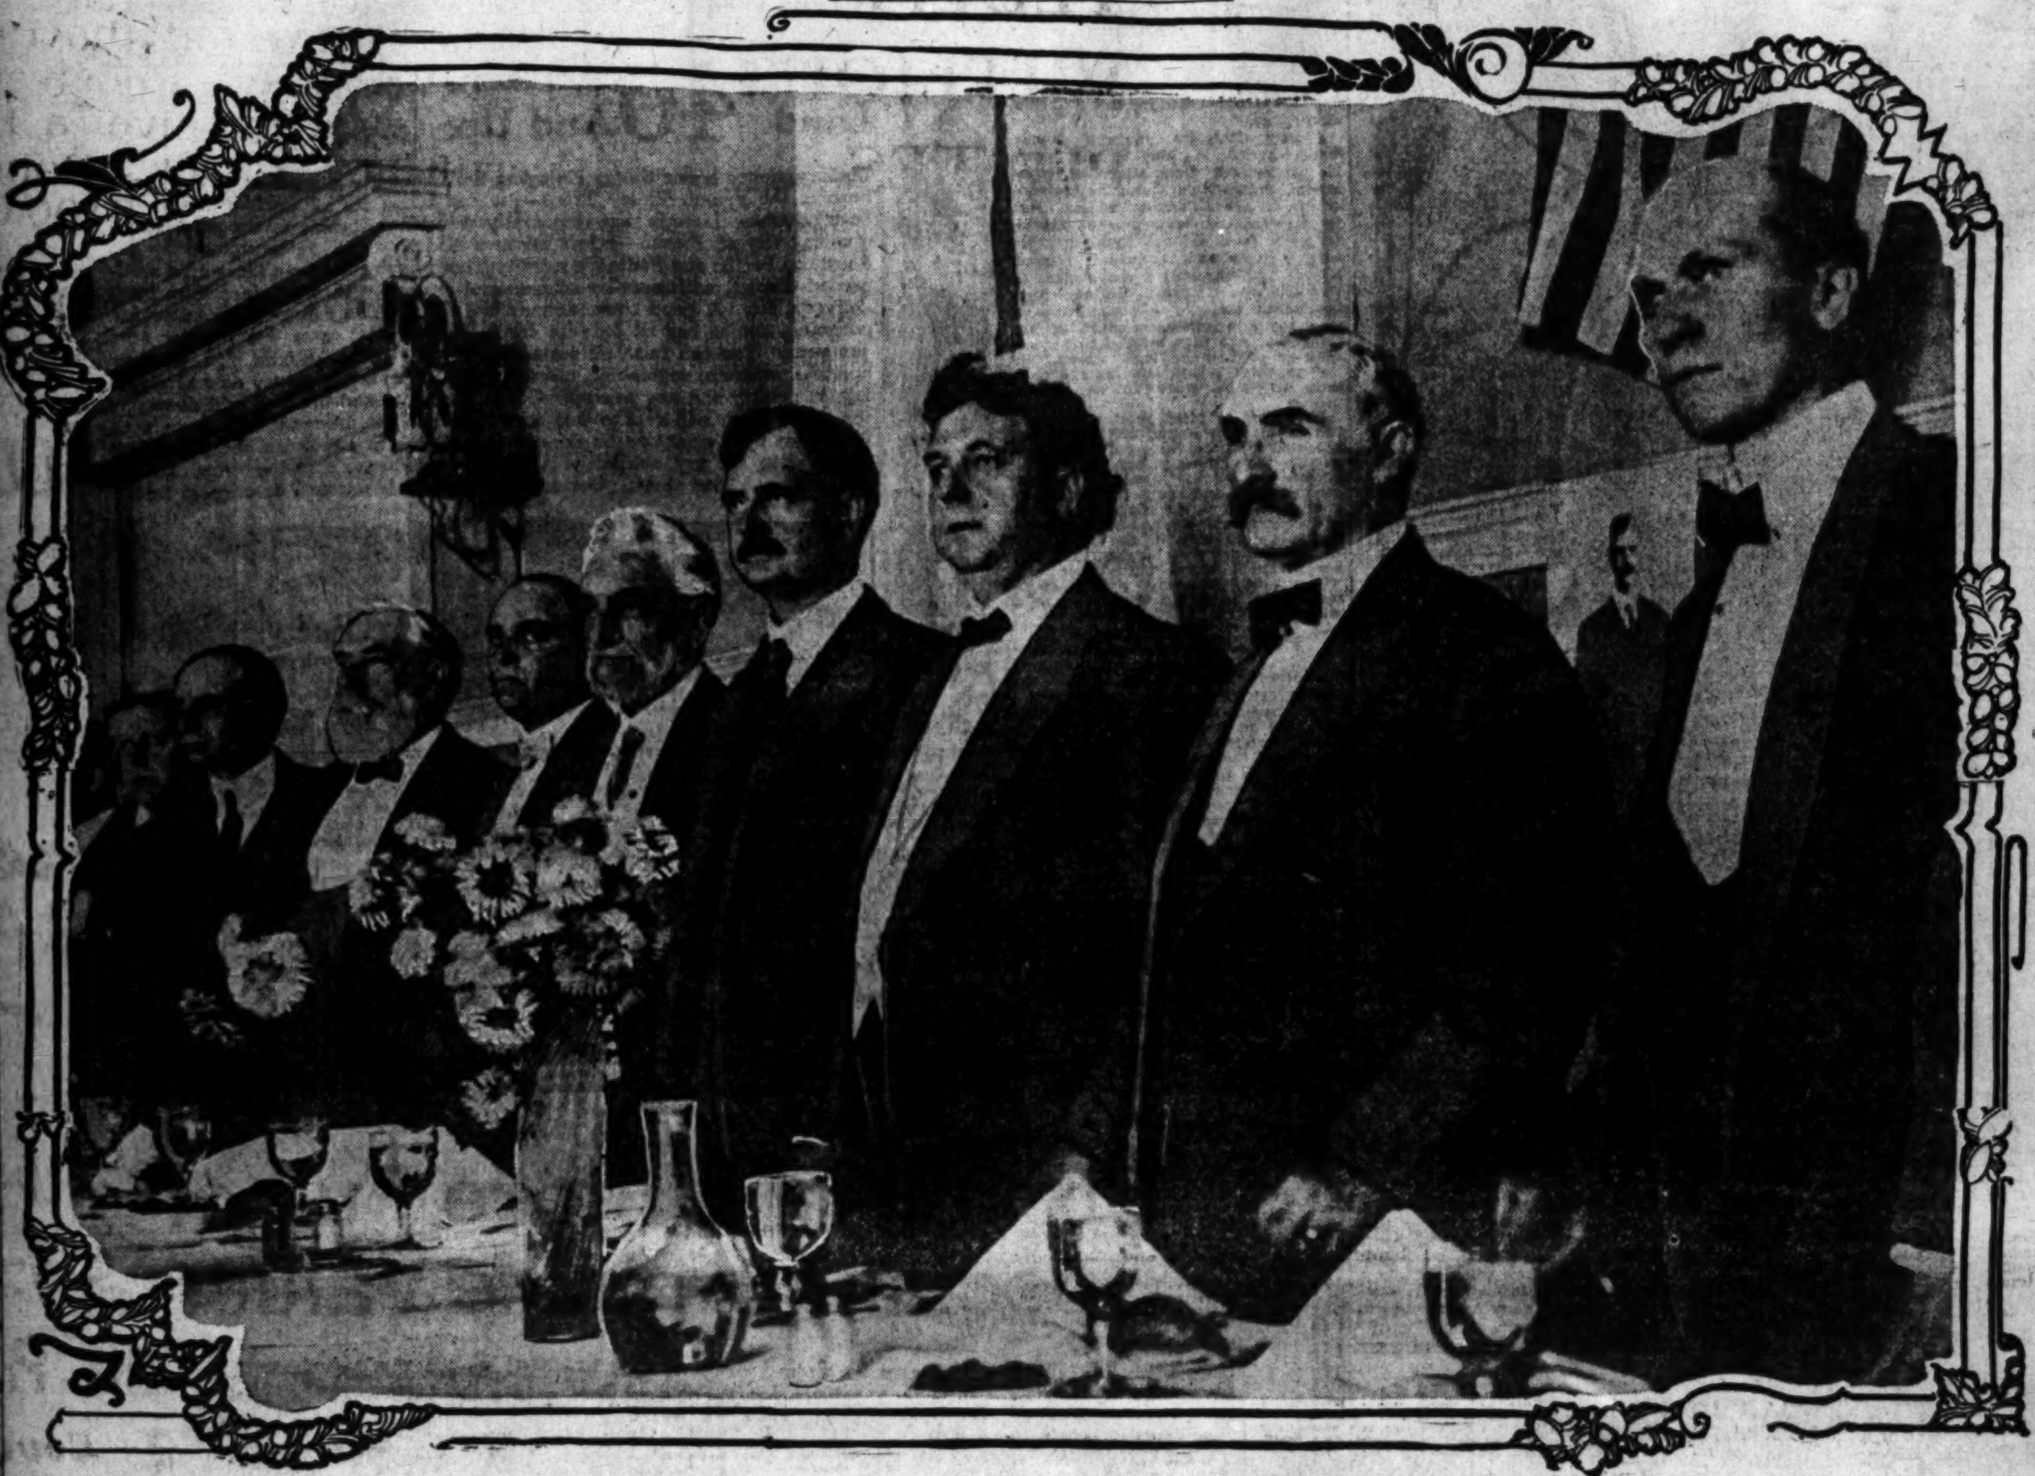
GOOD CITIZENS OF MANY POLITICAL FAITHS BANQUET EDWIN A. MESERVE FOR U. S. SENATOR.

Johnson-Works Campaign of Vilification and Billingsgate Is Denounced as Unworthy of Loyal Californians and Drives Wanderers Back Into Fold.



The Great Republican Banquet in Honor of Edwin A. Meserve, at Levy's, Last Night.

PUTS PERTINENT QUESTIONS TO WORKS.

FRANK G. TYRRELL propounded the following questions to John D. Works last night at the banquet given to Edwin A. Meserve. It was a delicate compliment in reply to a catechism which Works recently addressed to the Republican candidates:

1. Are you the same John D. Works who wrote and published an article in the Arena magazine two years ago, denouncing Roosevelt as a dangerous character, and stigmatizing the Lincoln-Roosevelt leaders as political soreheads and pharisees, or is it a sad case of mistaken identity?

2. Was that production the result of a carefully-reasoned conclusion, of profound moral earnestness; or was it the thoughtless effusion of a momentarily-irritated brain; or are we to take it in a Pickwickian sense, or just plain buncombe?

3. If that utterance was candid and sincere, when and why did you change your mind?

4. If you did not have a change of mind and heart, is your present position, carrying the banner of the Lincoln-Roosevelt forces, self-stultification—a mere pretense, in the hope of obtaining office?

5. If sincere in both instances, and you have experienced a change of heart, how long before you will change the change?

6. What assurance can you give, should you succeed in being nominated for the United States Senate, that you will not experience another change, become a reactionary of reactionaries, and out-Aldrich Aldrich?

Your prompt reply to these questions, in which as a citizen and voter I am interested, will be much appreciated. If I do not hear from you in ten days I shall consider that you still entertain the sentiments of the Arena article.

HE banquet to Edwin A. Meserve last night at Levy's was one of the most enthusiastic political demon- ations ever held in the city of Los geles. It was attended with the thusiasm and spontaneity of a cele- ation of victory—which it anticipated. the tables were seated not only the lwart Republicans, but well-known ders in Democratic ranks, independ- s and erstwhile Lincoln-Roosevelt gue explorers, driven back to the ks of patriotic and loyal citizenship y freely admitted by the campaign vilification and abuse which has cked and disgusted the decent ele- nt.

on. Charles J. Noyes stood at the akers' table with a copy of the Ex- in his hand. He would not read quotation from the speech of Hiram nson because he said it was unfit repetition in an assemblage of de- t men, to say nothing of publication paper going into the homes and ng the families of Los Angeles. He ely quoted the statement of John Works that he had never listened to h speeches without pleasure and fit.

TO REPUBLICANS.

I am addressing myself to Repub- ns of the real type of Abraham Lin- and Theodore Roosevelt," said the aker. "We are called on in this race select between the real politician the counterfeit.

t will not copy that aggregation t has been wandering up and down State like a circus using bil- gate that would shame the fish nen of London. But I do believe in ing things by their right names. real Republican will stand by his ner in these times. To masquer- under the name of Lincoln, one of purest, sweetest spirits that ever d, and under the name of Roose- who was never ashamed of being talwart Republican, is doing vio- e to the English tongue.

We had a sample of the counter- Republicans last night indulging nselves in a gospel of hate. The ublican party was not founded in gospel of hate and its splendid rd of half a century has not been t upon that gospel. Love for men, teousness and good government made the party what it is and n this nation the grandest half ury of history it ever had.

regret to say that the tongue of ication has turned itself not only nst political candidates but against an who has given this city its dom and industrial liberty, a man has helped to put this city in the t rank of the great cities of rica.

ou are asked to vote for a man thinks he can go to the Senate the flag of revolt in his hand to e you. It would take him about n minutes to get his answer. By idiosyncracies of old age, if for no r reason, he is unfitted for a place ny deliberative body.

wish we had a photograph of the s with which his associates in the Council bade him goodby that ight enter a larger field. Works is ier a Republican nor a Democrat a hermaphrodite. I am reminded of farmer's complaint regarding a certain hen—she wasn't worth a cent for laying eggs and she hadn't a single function of a rooster.

"We are standing upon a national firing line. Do you remember that the Republican party took millions of dollars worth of duties off the important commodities and protected the citrus industry of California? Will you betray the party that protected you?

"You have here before you a man who is not seeking a place for fame or emolument, but a man who is giving up a splendid practice to serve his fellow citizens. If you want to vote for that kind of a Senator you will vote for Edwin A. Meserve."

TOO BIG FOR AN INSURGENT.

Edmund B. Drake introduced the programme of the evening with an address of welcome. He was born in old Kentucky but if he is born again he thinks it will be in California. It is the greatest State in the West in his estimation, and so big, he said last night, that it needs a bigger man in the Senate than an insurgent.

"We want a man," said Mr. Drake, "and not a billy-goat, we want a scholar and a gentleman and not a common scold. We want a plain, hard-headed, old-fashioned honest Republican."

The various references to the slander and vituperation by Hiram Johnson, and the reading of a communication from Gen. Otis, brought forth one of the biggest demonstrations of the evening. The entire assemblage rose and gave three cheers for Gen. Otis and his attitude of fearless defense of the interests of a free city, and the principles of the Republican party.

BY THE TOASTMASTER.

W. C. Patterson was the toastmaster. "I feel," he said, "that I shall do no violence to the sentiment of the occasion when I express the regret that Senator Flint has felt it necessary to withdraw from a position which he has filled with so much credit and usefulness. We are all proud of the position he has maintained. There is no State in the Union that needs the protection of its industries more than California. The opinions of men are influenced by their surroundings. The insurgents are so grouped that they cannot see the needs of other parts of the nation. You cannot expect a man raised in a cornfield to understand the needs of the citrus industry. Mr. Meserve knows about the orange industry and the other vital questions in Southern California. What we want is a real Republican and not a hyphenated one."

TO THE PRESIDENT.

John G. Mott was then introduced to read communications from a number of guests who could not be present. George C. Perkins proposed the following toast:

"To the President of the United States, the Honorable William H. Taft:

"His patriotism and loyalty to the principles of the Republican party have fostered the diversified resources of the country and merit the confidence of every true American citizen. They are a guarantee of the protection of our industries from the attacks of private interests and cheap foreign labor. The foreign policy of the administration has been exemplified by such judicial fairness that it has won for our country the respect and admiration of every foreign government."

The reply of Victor H. Metcalf to an invitation was as follows: "Sincerely regret that I cannot attend the banquet Saturday evening. It is of the highest importance that a strong, forceful, energetic and capable man, and one thoroughly familiar with California's needs and industries, be selected to succeed Senator Flint. We have such a man in Edwin A. Meserve, and I hope that he will be elected."

FROM GEN. OTIS.

The following letter from Gen. Otis was then read:

TIMES BUILDING,
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6, 1910.

Dear Mr. Mott:

I find to my regret (as I intimated to you yesterday might prove to be the case) that I cannot be present at the Meserve banquet tonight. I have another engagement on business appertaining to the pending conflict; but as a stalwart and "staying" Republican, seasoned in many political battles, I greet the assembled Republican guests and salute the stalwart Republican citizen who is the object of their united personal honor.

Make my compliments and express my regrets to all the goodly company present.

This Senatorial candidate's political attitude is clear, bold and right, and his manly stand for the straight Republican cause, without frills or any insurgent qualifications or compromises, is worthy of our high respect and of our back-to-back, face-to-face, shoulder-to-shoulder support.

These be times when we Republicans all need to stand up and stand together, firm in our old-time political allegiance, ready, if need be, to go down in its defense.

The duty of the hour is to make a strong, open, brave and persistent battle for our cause and candidates, especially for the Senate, the Governorship and the State Legislature, which will have before it the vital work of choosing a United States Senator.

With unity and faith—likewise works (without a capital W, however,) we can win. Let us aim to do it, and thus save the State to the Republican column, and better still, serve the nation itself.

[Signed]

HARRISON GRAY OTIS.

Brief expressions of regret from Julius Kahn, Gov. Gillett and Motley H. Flint were also read. H. G. Tinsley of Pomona paid a sincere tribute of friendship and respect from the friends and boyhood neighbors of Mr. Meserve.

"OUR CANDIDATE."

George P. Adams responded to the toast, "Our Candidate." He said, in part: "One of our Senatorial aspirants I remember as a boy, having the reputation of making the best baseball and the best bat. Since then he has gone to bat at Point Loma. Another has all the symptoms of a Democrat and also some of the symptoms of a socialist. A socialist runs at the nose and breaks out around the mouth. He was willing, for the sake of $100 a month, to forsake a wide law practice and devote himself to the task of muzzling dogs and passing swill ordinances.

Mr. Adams then quoted from the court records in the Imperial Valley case between the Southern Pacific Railroad and the Imperial Land and Development Company. Mr. Meserve was a director in the development company and attorney for the Southern Pacific road. Mr. Works was attorney for the development company. Mr. Works addressed the court, saying that when Mr. Meserve was asked to turn over the property of the development company to the Southern Pacific road, he took a firm, courageous stand and refused to do so. He spoke in terms of highest praise of Mr. Meserve.

Mr. Adams addressed the open question to Mr. Works as to how he is now offering the argument against Mr. Meserve that "he stands too close to the Southern Pacific." Mr. Adams then quoted from the Arena articles which have been referred to in The Times on numerous occasions, showing that Mr. Works has a tendency of frequently changing his views on Roosevelt, the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, socialism and other issues according to the exigencies of the occasion.

TO THE POINT.

Frank G. Tyrrell, responding to the subject "New Occasions—New Duties," said:

"The election of a United States Senator provokes one to look closely at home, as well as afield; to take careful account of present conditions, and present duties, remembering that a State shows its character by the kind of man it honors with the toga.

"No one will claim this a time of cheap peace, of unperturbed serenity. The nation is agitated; good men are mad clear through. With all the machinery of government in our hands, we have had much more than the usual amount of strife, division and opposition within the party. Why these warring tides and cross-currents? And what duties do these occasions teach.

"We are confronted with whole sections of the nation, clamorous and indignant, because they declare the Republican party has not kept its platform pledges in tariff revision; they are disappointed and angered with the policies and practices of the administration. Others are as vehemtly defending the administration, declaring that we have fought a good fight, and kept the faith. Is it all froth and foam, fox-fire and hot air? Are they voting and will they vote accordingly? Should the people have what they clamor for?

"In California we have suffered much from the undue influence, sometimes absolute control, of the Southern Pacific Railway. In Pennsylvania it's the Pennsylvania lines; in Missouri the Missouri Pacific and the Burlington that oppress. No State seems to be wholly free. Can we have safe government control of these great arteries of trade, without facing the dreadful alternative of government ownership? Can we curb the trusts? Can we stop gambling in food stuffs and the necessaries of life? Can we exact justice for both capital and labor, in the marts and markets of the nation. Can we protect women and children from the Juggernaut of greed, in our factories?

"No one questions the peril of concentrated wealth; government of wealth is not democracy, it is plutocracy. Are we menaced by that? Have we tasted it?

"These conditions, these occasions emphasize certain fundamental duties.

"1. "First, we must face the situation manfully—sift, analyze investigate, understand.

"2. Hold fast to the elemental principles of our government, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the idea that all men are equal before the law; cherish the best traditions of the Republican party, the party of law, and liberty through the law.

"3. We must, without malice, firmly manfully, set about it to solve these vexatious problems; equalize the burdens of taxation; and give all men, as far as possible, both industrially and politically, equality of opportunity.

"Because I believe in the candor, integrity, ability steadfast courage of Edwin A. Merserve, as the man best fitted to enter upon these duties, I enthusiastically support him for the United States Senate."

MRS. PIERCE EN VOYAGE.

New York Horsewoman Sails on Vaderland; Adele Richie Sees Her Off—Very Mysterious.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Tom Pierce, the horsewoman who has attracted much attention because of her difficulties with the police, sailed today on the Vaderland. It was not known who Mrs. Pierce was until she raised her veil to kiss Adele Richie, the actress, who went to the ship to see her off.

Mrs. Pierce drives too fast to suit the police. Quite recently a patrolman thought she was reckless in the pace she was setting in going to the Pelham Railroad Station. Her whip, aplied to her roadster, caused the animal to jump away from the officer, who had grabbed the animal's bridle. After she picked up Adele Richie and was on her way back from the station, she was again stopped by a policeman. This time the horse reared, upsetting her curricle and tipping out Miss Richie and her dog. Mrs. Pierce thereby was arrested for fast driving and Miss Richie for cursing the policeman, both being held for trial.

Mrs. Pierce's name was not on the passenger list today. She boarded the ship in a great hurry and Miss Richie made a speedy getaway for a taxicab.

PRESENT A SILK FLAG.

The Thimble Club of Uncle Sam Woman's Relief Corps, on Thursday presented to Mrs. Martha Chapin, past patriotic instructor of the department, a beautiful silk flag. The presentation speech was made by Mrs. Jennie M. Berry, in which she touchingly referred to Mrs. Chapin as "mother of our corps," and presented the flag as a birthday token. The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miles on Childs avenue, and was one of great pleasure to all concerned.

All Teeth Extracted WITHOUT PAIN. Nothing inhaled, no gas, no chloroform, no ether and above all no cocaine or anything else dangerous used. From one to thirty-two teeth extracted at one sitting without a particle of pain, danger or bad after effects, making the task one of pleasure rather than one of dread.

Come and See How We Do It The safest and best methods for elderly people and persons in delicate health and for children. No risk, no pain, no bad effects. We extract over 100 teeth a day by our Painless method, and are equipped for just this kind of work.

The reason for our great success is due to the uniform high grade work done by us.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., Security Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "it didn't hurt a bit."
C. S. SPRECHER,
Printer and Publisher, 115 Winston st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted twenty teeth for me, and did it absolutely without pain. I have had a great deal of experience with other dentists, and can truthfully say that Dr. Schiffman's method is best of all. I highly recommend him to everyone.
T. B. ROSECRANS,
Soldiers' Home.

For all the past fourteen years Dr. Schiffman has been doing my dental work. In all they extracted and replaced by means of crown and bridgework some twenty odd teeth. The work is very satisfactory and I highly recommend him.
H. A. WITTICK,
81 Mary st., Pasadena, Cal.

Have had molar tooth extracted by Dr. Schiffman. It was a complicated task, but work was done very successfully and I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman to any needing dental work.
REV. W. E. BLAIR,
District Supt. Children's Home Society of California, 334 Daisy ave., Long Beach, Cal.

Have had several teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain.
M. E. MASON,
With Fairbanks-Morse & Co., 136 S. Los Angeles st.

Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me, four years ago, which proved satisfactory. I came in today and had my teeth examined and found that everything was just like new.
MRS. A. SCHILLING,
864 W. 52nd st.

I have had two plates made by Dr. Schiffman and after a three months' trial can truthfully say that they are entirely satisfactory.
T. H. BREWSTER,
President Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Co., 226 West 41st st.

I have had teeth extracted, plate and bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman. I am delighted with the work and advise nervous women to go to Dr. Schiffman.
MATHILDE M. PHELPS,
1150 S. Figueroa st.

Dr. Schiffman, I consider expert. By experience I find his work painless and perfectly satisfactory.
H. C. ROYER, M.D.,
103 S. Spring, Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman has just filled a tooth for me and he also put in a crown and a bridge about five months ago, all of which has given me complete satisfaction. My work was all done painlessly.
S. E. MILLS,
No. 820 Ave. 20.

Dr. Schiffman extracted two worthless teeth for me and replaced them by bridgework, which was done to my entire satisfaction and without any pain whatever.
MRS. JUSTICE J. ROESE,
592 E. 49th st.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all the different methods, and I can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his methods of treatment.
MILO M. POTTER,
Prop. Van Nuys Hotel and Hotel Potter, Santa Barbara.

I have had bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman and I am pleased in every way.
MRS. A. OLESEN,
1115 E. 12th st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted three teeth for me absolutely without pain. He also fitted three teeth from which I suffered no inconvenience whatever. I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman for all kinds of dental work.
PROF. J. J. WHITE,
St. Vincent's College.

On account of some unfortunate experience I had in the extraction of my teeth, I became a great coward in this respect. Today Dr. Schiffman extracted one of my very refractory teeth without causing me one particle of pain.
D. K. TRASK,
Formerly Judge of Superior Court Los Angeles County.

I have had two difficult gold fillings put in by Dr. Shiffman and can say that they are entirely satisfactory.
GRACE HALLIDAY,
Spaulding Station, L. A.

Being a stranger in this city and not knowing any dentist, I am certain I found one of the best, "Dr. Schiffman." His work is very satisfactory and should be highly recommended.
KATHRYN BUCKLY,

Dr. Schiffman made me a partial upper and lower plate and they are both very satisfactory in every respect, after a test of eight months.

TRIPLE MIX-UP.

TROUBLE COMES IN A BUNCH AT NINTH AND SANTA FE.

TWO men were shot, a riot started, and passers-by frightened when a deputy constable who recently served twenty-five days in jail, a Watts barber who was deputized by him for one day's work of general raiding throughout the country, a colored sport who tried to pass as a Texas detective in disguise, and a blacksmith with several drinks too many, became involved in an arresting bee at Ninth street and Santa Fé avenue late yesterday afternoon. Neither of the two men was seriously injured, and after their wounds were dressed at the Receiving Hospital they were busy explaining the tangle to the police until late at night.

F. H. Andrews, the barber, became possessed of a star early yesterday when he met C. G. Lockridge, a deputy constable who was recently locked up after Deputy Sheriff Talbot had arrested him for striking a boy in the City Jail. Lockridge took some early morning drinks in Sidney Johnson's notorious club at Ninth street and Santa Fé avenue. He at once became proud of himself. He told Andrews that he wanted a temporary deputy to help raid clubs in Vernon and the surrounding country. The ambitious tiller of human faces jumped at the chance to be an officer. A few hours later he tried to make a dramatic arrest. He grabbed a sorry-looking revolver and whirled it down on the cheek bone of Charles Johnson, blacksmith, who lives at No. 2213 East Ninth street. Unfortunately, the weapon was at a full cock, and it sent a lead pellet through the blacksmith's cheek and into the right leg of Joseph Armelian, 17 years old, colored, who lives at No. 1944 Bay street.

The cornucopia of trouble was poured into the neighborhood when Joseph Armelian started out to "hunt for father." The colored boy suspected that his father was tippling in Sidney Johnson's club. He rapped on the door and asked to be allowed to enter. He was told to go away and stay away. Armelian replied by announcing in a hushed tone of voice that he is in reality a Texas detective following a clew. "I don't see no clews in here—beat it," said the doorkeeper. Deputy Constable Lockridge rushed out to investigate. Seeing that Armelian weighed nearly 130 pounds, Lockridge called for Barber-Deputy Andrews. The two told the boy that he was under arrest and started to take him to Lockridge's buggy, which was hitched nearby.

Charles Johnson, filled with drink and sympathy, rushed up to the near-officers and told them to let the colored boy go free. Then Andrews pulled his weapon and the bullet flew.

A crowd rushed up, people yelled for the police, and the deputy constable and his deputy-deputy constable abandoned the prisoner and ran for cover. Lockridge was not found again, but Patrolman Werts and Plainclothes Officer Stevens caught the shooter hiding in the washroom of a stable. He stated that he was only doing his duty as an officer, but the police insisted on holding him for an assault with a deadly weapon. After being treated at the Receiving Hospital, Charles Johnson stated that he was opposed to stringing out the "deputy business." Joseph Armelian had the bullet removed from his leg and requested Dr. Wiley to call up and "find out if father has come home yet." He was then put to bed for the night.

JAP VISITS WALL STREET.

Amazed at Way Americans Do Business—Nimble Work Surprises Guest from the Orient.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Baron Oura, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce in Japan, who is spending a few days here on his way home from the Anglo-Japanese exhibition in London, paid a visit to Wall Street yesterday and came back amazed.

"Never have I seen anything like it," he said. "We Japanese have always thought ourselves nimble with our fingers, and with out wits, but we are still plodding in ox carts while you Americans are riding in aëroplanes. Your way of doing business is like a race in which all pass the goal at the same second. What becomes of the laggards? Do they crawl into the bushes and die?

"There is no need for the Americans to be jealous of the Japanese commercially. The Japanese merchant can never catch up with the Americans. In matters of finance it seems to me that you have nothing to fear from any nation in the world.

"Japanese feeling toward America is almost affectionate. War will never come unless America starts it."

OUGHT TO STAMPEDE THAT STORE!

841 Sunset Blvd., July 14, 1910.

THE BARTLETT MUSIC CO.,
J. Fremont Salyer, President, City:

Dear Sir—Keep the ball rolling. I like to boost in a good cause. I don't doubt that what you say about those piano purchase checks is true. I have a pile of them—I never think of using one of them. I know of some that have been badly bitten using them.

What is more cutting than this—to contestants—viz: That it is not the one who gives the best solution according to the rules in the printed offer, but it is the one who can paint a dainty picture, writes a poem or send in something not required and outside the rules, who gains favor? You would hardly believe it, but I can show you where the first prize was recently awarded to a contestant who did not adhere to any of the rules given, except to send the (so-called) answer within the time limit! Neatness in doing something else is not neatness in the genuine answer.

The whole army of contestants, except the one who obtained the piano by unfair means, ought to combine and go together in a body and stampede that store. It might be a good ad for the firm.

Yours truly,
W. R. HAMILTON.

All over the land this opposition to the piano certificate spreading fast. And the opposition comes from a class of retaile sufficiently representative to mean something. The Presto has di cussed the many-sided subject so fully that there is little more be said beyond a repetition of the caution against promising thin that are not within reason.

There has been so much agitation that in some sections of t country attention of the authorities has been drawn to the prospe finding schemes, with the result that legal prosecution has be threatened, if not actually instituted. The law is plainly that scheme of chance will be permitted, and that whatever promise made in the way of prizes must be lived up to literally.

The way the prize winner can beat the picture puzzle certifica man at his own game is to buy his piano at the Big Exclusive Pia House, where no bonds, coupons or certificates are issued.

The reason for our great success is due to the uniform high grade work done by us.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold plates, being much lighter and thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere better to the roof of the mouth. Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any others and will not break, as they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which had been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH,
Of Robert Marsh & Co., Security Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "it didn't hurt a bit."
C. S. SPRECHER,

TRIPLE MIX-UP.

TROUBLE COMES IN A BUNCH AT NINTH AND SANTA FE.

TWO men were shot, a riot started, and passers-by frightened when a deputy constable who recently served twenty-five days in jail, a Watts barber who was deputized by him for one day's work of general raiding throughout the country, a colored sport who tried to pass as a Texas detective in disguise, and a blacksmith with several drinks too many, became involved in an arresting bee at Ninth street and Santa Fé avenue late yesterday afternoon. Neither of the two men was seriously injured, and after their wounds were dressed at the Receiving Hospital they were busy explaining the tangle to the police until late at night.

F. H. Andrews, the barber, became possessed of a star early yesterday when he met C. G. Lockridge, a deputy constable who was recently locked up after Deputy Sheriff Talbot had arrested him for striking a boy in the City Jail. Lockridge took some early morning drinks in Sidney Johnson's notorious club at Ninth street and Santa Fé avenue. He at once became proud of himself. He told Andrews that he wanted a temporary deputy to help raid clubs in Vernon and the surrounding country. The ambitious tiller of human faces jumped at the chance to be an officer. A few hours later he tried to make a dramatic arrest. He grabbed a sorry-looking revolver and whirled it down on the cheek bone of Charles Johnson, blacksmith, who lives at No. 2213 East Ninth street. Unfortunately, the weapon was at a full cock, and it sent a lead pellet through the blacksmith's cheek and into the right leg of Joseph Armelian, 17 years old, colored, who lives at No. 1944 Bay street.

The cornucopia of trouble was poured into the neighborhood when Joseph Armelian started out to "hunt for father." The colored boy suspected that his father was tippling in Sidney Johnson's club. He rapped on the door and asked to be allowed to enter. He was told to go away and stay away. Armelian replied by announcing in a hushed tone of voice that he is in reality a Texas detective following a clew. "I don't see no clews in here—beat it," said the doorkeeper. Deputy Constable Lockridge rushed out to investigate. Seeing that Armelian weighed nearly 130 pounds, Lockridge called for Barber-Deputy Andrews. The two told the boy that he was under arrest and started to take him to Lockridge's buggy, which was hitched nearby.

Charles Johnson, filled with drink and sympathy, rushed up to the near-officers and told them to let the colored boy go free. Then Andrews pulled his weapon and the bullet flew.

A crowd rushed up, people yelled for the police, and the deputy constable and his deputy-deputy constable abandoned the prisoner and ran for cover. Lockridge was not found again, but Patrolman Werts and Plainclothes Officer Stevens caught the shooter hiding in the washroom of a stable. He stated that he was only doing his duty as an officer, but the police insisted on holding him for an assault with a deadly weapon. After being treated at the Receiving Hospital, Charles Johnson stated that he was opposed to stringing out the "deputy business." Joseph Armelian had the bullet removed from his leg and requested Dr. Wiley to call up and "find out if father has come home yet." He was then put to bed for the night.

JAP VISITS WALL STREET.

Amazed at Way Americans Do Business—Nimble Work Surprises Guest from the Orient.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Baron Oura, Minister of Agriculture and Commerce in Japan, who is spending a few days here on his way home from the Anglo-Japanese exhibition in London, paid a visit to Wall Street yesterday and came back amazed.

"Never have I seen anything like it," he said. "We Japanese have always thought ourselves nimble with our fingers, and with out wits, but we are still plodding in ox carts while you Americans are riding in aëroplanes. Your way of doing business is like a race in which all pass the goal at the same second. What becomes of the laggards? Do they crawl into the bushes and die?

"There is no need for the Americans to be jealous of the Japanese commercially. The Japanese merchant can never catch up with the Americans. In matters of finance it seems to me that you have nothing to fear from any nation in the world.

"Japanese feeling toward America is almost affectionate. War will never come unless America starts it."

OUGHT TO STAMPEDE THAT STORE!

841 Sunset Blvd., July 14, 1910.

THE BARTLETT MUSIC CO.,

J. Fremont Salyer, President, City:

Dear Sir—Keep the ball rolling. I like to boost in a good cause. I don't doubt that what you say about those piano purchase checks is true. I have a pile of them—I never think of using one of them. I know of some that have been badly bitten using them.

What is more cutting than this—to contestants—viz: That it is not the one who gives the best solution according to the rules in the printed offer, but it is the one who can paint a dainty picture, writes a poem or send in something not required and outside the rules, who gains favor? You would hardly believe it, but I can show you where the first prize was recently awarded to a contestant who did not adhere to any of the rules given, except to send the (so-called) answer within the time limit! Neatness in doing something else is not neatness in the genuine answer.

The whole army of contestants, except the one who obtained the piano by unfair means, ought to combine and go together in a body and stampede that store. It might be a good ad for the firm.

Yours truly,

W. R. HAMILTON.

All over the land this opposition to the piano certificate spreading fast. And the opposition comes from a class of retaile sufficiently representative to mean something. The Presto has di cussed the many-sided subject so fully that there is little more be said beyond a repetition of the caution against promising thin that are not within reason.

There has been so much agitation that in some sections of t country attention of the authorities has been drawn to the prospe finding schemes, with the result that legal prosecuion has be threatened, if not actually instituted. The law is plainly that scheme of chance will be permitted, and that whatever promise made in the way of prizes must be lived up to literally.

The way the prize winner can beat the picture puzzle certifica man at his own game is to buy his piano at the Big Exclusive Pia House, where no bonds, coupons or certificates are issued.

MERRY-MAKERS.

RESEMBLE THE SANDS OF SEA.

·any Thousand Catholics at Redondo Beach.

·ishop Conaty Touches Upon News Conspiracy.

·retty Babies Galore Place Judges in Quandary.

A conservative estimate of the number of Catholics at Redondo Beach yes erday was 21,500. There may have een more, certainly not less. It was tremendous picnic, with everybody appy and declaring they will attend next one.

t 8 o'clock in the morning the cars n to unload the picnickers and by ock the city was crowded. About 'clock the assembly was opened R. Dwyer, who introduced President insworth, of the Board of Trustees who placed the city at the dis of the visitors. He welcomed and all their friends to the city, that he was glad they had de to come to Redondo Beach for merrymaking, and that every citi s waiting to help them have a time.

op Conaty, followed, preceded by vocal solo by Mrs. May S. Bradrick. e congratulated the committee upon e success of the reunion, and said at it was a consoling and inspiring ght to see so many Catholics gathered r a day's outing. It would have the ffect of strengthening the ties of iendship that bind them together as llow citizens of a prosperous community. It would also serve to rengthen them in the work which the urch has to do with the growth of outhern California.

Continuing, he said:

"Loyalty is a duty. It has its origin the commandment to love God and r neighbor. Loyalty to the church the teststone of Christian manhood, d an intelligent faith leads to an norable life and ennobles our citizenhip, as well as promote the glory of od, and the well being of the people. he church comes to us commissioned God to teach us the truths of re ion, and by her sacramental system rves to bring us the graces of re mption. Her history is full of honor the Christianizing of the world, and e bears to us the sweet relation of other in the faith. We owe her the yalty of intelligence and love."

The bishop also said that among the any difficulties to be overcome was e prejudice frequently excited against e Catholic church by misrepresentaon and calumny. Along this line he id:

"Many of these prejudices are inerited, many come from the histories e children have read at school, written in a spirit of intense hatred, innded to create hostility to everything atholic. Then what we have to contend with lately is the appearance of conspiracy on the part of foreign ews agencies, which flash over wires storted statements of prominent urchmen, misrepresentations of the titude of the church toward national ovements, which always places the urch in a false attitude in questions education, liberty or progress."

He made a stong appeal for the oldshioned Catholicity which loves the urch and its precepts, which hates n and keeps itself in touch with the cramental graces. He closed by begng God to bless all the people that us happiness and contentment might the privilege of every one.

Dancing was kept up until a late hour, the last cars starting for Los Angeles about 1 o'clock this morning. The picnic was loudly praised by every one and labeled the largest and best the Catholics have ever held. The general disposition, of the crowd was jolly. Many a stout lady had some one's parasol jabbed into her ribs without getting mad, wnile in the center of the crowded dancing floor the most fun was had by the people who could not find room to dance, but just let themselves be jostled by every one that passed. They all said that next year's picnic would find them on the spot.

FIZZLE.

SEEKING JAIL, SYMPATHY COLD.

LABORITES KEEP UP FARCE OF GETTING PINCHED.

Heretofore Foiled in Efforts to Be Looked Up, Trick Is Tried—Several Captured After Court Adjourns, Provided With Quarters in Tank. Wright in Wrong.

About thirty more labor-union pickets were arrested during yesterday for deliberately violating the picket ordinance so as to get into jail in order to enlist popular sympathy in their scheme against the industrial life of Los Angeles.

One of them, C. G. Wright, arraigned yesterday morning before Police Judge Rose, faces a trial in the Superior Court on a charge of felonious assault. Conviction in his case means a penitentiary sentence.

Wright was one of the shouters around the Mills Iron Works yesterday morning. He was not content with merely shouting. He wished to distinguish himself above the feats of his pals.

A chain has been stretched across the entrance to the Mills Iron Works to keep out the lawless crew of strikers. A bunch of these gentry was clamoring at the entrance of the works when T. E. McLaughlin, a big Irish employé, walked through them, stepped over the chain and started on his way to work. He was pursued by a volley of ribald denunciation, and his "Irish was up."

McLaughlin turned and the nearest of his insulters was Wright, who repeated the vile epithets. The big Irishman's hand shot out, wide open, and Wright sat down.

Not content with the rebuke, Wright rushed into the street, it is said, and, picking up a large stone, hurled it at McLaughlin's head. The latter dodged it, and Wright was picking up more stones when Patrolman Slaughter ran up and placed him under arrest. Wright was charged with felonious assault, to which he pleaded not guilty. He was placed under a $500 bail and his preliminary hearing was set for August 13.

Eight pickets were arraigned in Police Court and released on their own recognizance after their trials by jury had been set for various dates next winter. They were: Al Schoenberg, W. A. Hewes, T. Peterson, C. Westgard, George H. Adams, Edward Lynch, A. Staffan and John Meredith. Arthur Tyler and Phillip Lugar, arrested by a special officer, for picketing, were dismissed, no complaint having been filed against them.

The other men arrested during the day were: David Smith, A. Govan, D. Lambert, F. B. Kruse, L. Vitte, R. L. Word, S. Anderson, Mike Buffington, A. McWilliams, H. H. Ozmun, E. D. Nolan, F. W. Young, C. Lloyd, John Varalla, J. J. Williams, B. Bertoni, G. H. Henerietta, Arthur Cox, F. G. Anderson, W. H. Nordwark, C. W. Hunter, Thos. Lynch, C. F. Balser, John Armstrong, A. D. Gable, E. Tucker, E. Garza, F. J. Bender, A. Peterson, Z. Bornes, Henry Fuhrman, F. W. Judson, Edward Enoitt and A. Borcard.

As many of these as were arrested after noon were locked up in the City Jail to await the opening of court tomorrow morning. They were given a room to themselves in one of the upper tanks, and the alleged "martyrs" proceeded to have a high old time through the afternoon, playing cards, singing songs and making socialistic speeches.

The palpable attempt to win sympathy for so-called constitutional rights, continues to be a farce.

NEWS REPORTS FROM CORRESPONDENTS OF THE TIMES.

PASADENA.

MAYOR PLEADS FOR A PEACE.

SAYS THE COMPANY OUGHT TO SELL ENEGRY.

Addresses a Two-Thousand-Word Letter to the Public Regarding the Electric Rate War—Representative of the Corporation Explains the Position of That Concern.

Office of The Times, No. 25 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Aug. 7.—After a three day journalistic bombardment participated in by the officials of the Edison Company and the Municipal Lighting Plant, Mayor Early wound up a two thousand word letter addressed to the public yesterday in which he pleaded peace. "What ought to be done to settle the rate war," he said, "is for the Southern California Edison Company to sell energy to the city at wholesale and take all of its poles out of the streets where the city's poles are and for the city to buy any of the company's poles, meters and transformers that the city could use and for what they are worth. If the Edison Company would submit a fair proposition on that basis then the people of Pasadena could approve it and we could have our charter amended next winter."

It is believed the Mayor's contention will be generally concurred in by a majority of the conservative taxpayers of the city. It is in part in line with a public statement which he made somtime ago, when he stated he would be in favor of buying current from the Edison Company at wholesale if the company would sell it cheaper than the city could manufacture it, but that under no consideration would he consent to the city buying or leasing the distributing system of the company.

"We have stated a number of times recently in interviews and otherwise that we will be pleased to entertain any reasonable proposition the city cares to make us," said an official of the Edison Company last night.

"Of course we cannot agree to tear out a portion of our system on short notice and sell just that portion that the city wants at marked down prices. That would not be reasonable or just. Our Pasadena plant supplies Altadena, Lamanda Park and much outside territory and we must have our distributing system for those customers but we will entertain a propsition to sell out our distributing system in Pasadena or lease it to the city on a reasonable basis when the city charter is amended so that a long time contract can be made which will justify us. We have a big investment in Pasadena and are doing a good business. We do not have to sell. The Mayor states in his letter that sooner or later one or the other of the two plants will have to sell to the other. So far as we are concerned we are not expecting to be compelled to quit soon. Our business is improving but of course we are not making near the money we would if we had all the business in the city. We would always rather wholesale than retail electrical energy.

"So far as making any proposition to the city on the basis outlined by the Mayor I can say now, as I have said before, we will not do it. We have made a number of propositions and they have been turned down and now if the city wants to make us a proposition it will be courteously received and very carefully considered. If the city is in a mood of making a deal and is willing to be fair and give due consideration to a business matter I believe we can do business which will be to the advantage of both plants."

To many people the Mayor's statement came as a surprise, especially to many of the members of the recently formed Municipal Light League and to those who took the resolutions passed by the City Council at its last meeting for their face value but to the business and financial men who are well versed in municipal matters it has been expected for sometime because with the very large number of new subscribers brought in by the volunteer solicitors during the past six weeks, entailing large expenditures for extensions, poles, wire, meters and transformers the city is face to face with a lack of funds and something must be done. Mayor Earley suggests borrowing money from the General Fund of the city to meet the deficit in the electric light fund until the plant can repay, but it is believed there will be a storm of opposition if such a system of shifting is attempted.

STIRS STOCKHOLDERS.

The agitation given the water question during the past few days by the appointment of a special commitee of eighteen, by the Board of Trade, to make investigations has started an internal movement among the stockholders of the three big water companies, the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, the Lake Vineyard Land and Water Company, and the Pasadena Land and Water Company. The stockholders of the small plants, of which there are several doing business in Pasadena, have not exhibited much uneasiness, although it is believed the committee intends to investigate them as well as the big companies.

Consolidation of the existing water companies into one big company was the slogan started yesterday by many of the principal stockholders. This sentiment was mentioned some time ago, but inasmuch as there was no apparent need for hasty action, the agitation died out because the directors believed the plants were getting along all right.

Just what the companies expect to accomplish by consolidating is not made clear, but it is thought by some that, if they were consolidated into one concern, negotiations for sale to the city could be more expeditiously handled. On the other hand many are of the opinion that the consolidation plant would cost the city more money than if each of theplants was sold separately.

Much opposition is bobbing up on all sides to the proposed move by the Board of Trade. It is alleged that it is the same old crowd that is going to work the same proposition which has already been worn threadbare.

"If I understand the matter thoroughly," said a Board of Trade man last night, "such is not the case. This is an entirely different matter. If I am correct, I believe the proposition can be carried through, but, of course, if the 'wiseacres' are correct—and I hope they are not—the question will be another case of soap-bubble. I understand the committee is to meet the first of the week. The policy will probably be outlined at the first two or three meetings and then we can tell about what may be expected. I am always in favor of believing a man honest until he proves himself otherwise, and I want to feel that the committee will get started on the right track, will profit by past experiences, and I am going to believe that way unless it shows a disposition to be otherwise."

TALK TOURNAMENT EARLY.

Tournament of Roses talk has started earlier this year than in years past. Those who have been away on their vacations and are now home rested and ready to start another year's work and returning globe-trotters, of whom Pasadena has a good representation, are enthusiastic over making the next Tournament of Roses the best ever.

Secretary Rider, who is looking after all the business of the association during the absence of President Hogan, says that he is now working on a new design for the advertising literature this year. He is also reading all the advertisements and magazine literature he can get hold of trying to work out some brand new features for the grand pagent this winter.

President Hogan, who is spending the summer in Europe, is said to be rushing from one center of attraction to another, dividing his time between looking out for new features for the Tournament of Roses and lining up polo enthusiasts, all of whom he is trying to induce to spend the winter in Pasadena. He writes that he is having remarkable success, and that he will surprise a big bunch of French, German and English sportsmen this year if he can get them in Southern California during the "busy season."

The Tournament of Roses Association has devised a new scheme to make the event this year a financial success without calling on the merchants, banks and citizens generally for donations and guarantee funds. An effort is being made to get some big insurance company to insure the association against bad weather on January 1. It is believed the insurance can be secured, because with the new features which are now being planned, the big show will be a great success if the weather is fine and if it is not, the loss will not be of any great consequence. It is believed the association can afford to pay a liberal premium.

This history of the Tournament of Roses shows that is has been most remarkably successful from a financial standpoint. It has never cost the people of Pasadena any great amount and yet the show is one of the most widely advertised of national fetes. If the weather is good and the attractions interesting the tourists and residents from all parts of California pay the bills.

PULPIT NOTES.

Rev. Charles Blaisdell, rector of the Episcopal Church at Redlands, will occupy the pulpit at All Saints' Episcopal Church this morning. He will be in charge during the absence of Dr. Learned, who is on his vacation, which will last during the months of August and September.

Rev. W. H. Oxtoby of Philadelphia will preach at the Pasadena Presbyterian Church this morning and evening. He is the successor of the Rev. Dr. John McCook, who for many years was one of the noted divines in the East. It is stated that Dr. Oxtoby will simply fill the pulpit at the Pasadena Presbyterian Church while he is on his vacation and that he is not an applicant for the pastorate.

Rev. L. Potter Hitchcock, pastor of the West Side Congregational Church, will deliver the Sunday afternoon address before the Men's Club of the Y. M.C.A. at Library Park, this afternoon.

Mrs. William B. Riddle of Rose avenue entertained a delightful tennis party yesterday afternoon at her home, "Forty Oaks," in honor of Miss Gladys Cavill of Los Angeles and Miss Mary Kerchief of Ohio. The afternoon was spent playing tennis after which refreshments were served. There were twenty guests.

The marriage of Mrs. Fannie G. Twaddie of Walton, N. Y., and John J. Berray of Franklin avenue, took place yesterday afternoon at the home of the bridegroom. Rev. Henry T. Staats officiated. The bride arrived yesterday morning from the East and soon after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Berray left for Redondo Beach, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Bennett, who have been traveling abroad two years, returned to their Pasadena home yesterday.

Miss Lillian Cocman, aged 28, died suddenly yesterday from heart trouble at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Coffman, No. 253 South Lake avenue. Miss Coffman formerly lived in Indiana and for some time had been one of the prominent teachers in the Pasadena Presbyterian Sunday-school. The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at the Pasadena Presbyterian Church.

VENICE.

MANY DIP IN SURF IN NIGHT.

CROWD SPORTS IN BREAKERS BY SEARCHLIGHT.

Supposedly First Affair of the Kind Ever Held at a Seashore Resort. Regular Republicans of the Santa Monica Bay District Organize. Johnson Speaks.

VENICE, Aug. 6.—One of the most unique affairs ever pulled off along this beach was staged in the surf here this evening. The attraction was a searchlight bathing party, and the novelty of the conception brought out a large crowd and a large number of bathers. So far as local knowledge goes, this is the first affair of the kind ever attempted at a seaside resort. It was wholly informal, having been without invitation or regulation style of bathing suits. Everybody who wished to join in the pleasure of the evening was there, clad as far from full dress as the season's designs for bathing costumes might dictate. Located on the sand near the water's edge were a number of powerful electric searchlights, which made the scene as brilliant as day. Out on the water, just beyond the line of combing breakers, were the life savers in their boats, ready to rush to the assistance of any unfortunate. On the sand the Italian band was installed and played waltzes and two-steps while the bathers dived to the strains of that mesmerizing tune or paddled a mazourka.

Regular Republicans of the Santa Monica section, including this city, Ocean Park and Venice, met tonight and completed the organization of the Santa Monica Bay Republican Club. Officers were elected as follows: W. H. Anderson, president; K. A. Miller, vice-president; B. C. Hanna, treasurer; R. M. Miller, secretary. Committees were appointed on Finance, Elections, Constitutions and By-Laws and Public Meetings. The last-named committee was instructed to make arrangements for a grand rally of straight Republicans to be held at some central beach point next Saturday night. Whether this meeting will be held at Venice or Pier avenue has not been decided, but the determination was to make it a grand affair. Much enthusiasm was shown at the meeting tonight. A large number enrolled their names as members.

Simultaneous with the organization of this club, Hiram Johnson addressed from the band stand the crowd that had gathered on the ocean front to enjoy the band concert.

LONG BEACH.

UGLY BULLDOG ATTACKS CHILD.

OFFICER HAS SAVAGE FIGHT WITH BRUTE.

Incident Occurs on the Pike When Crowd About Locality Makes It Out of the Question for Guardian of the Peace to Use Firearm to Quiet the Animal.

LONG BEACH, Aug. 6.—An ugly bulldog attacked and injured a 4-year-old girl on the crowded Pike just before sunset this evening.

The victim is Bell Houseman, who lives with her uncle, Thomas H. Jones, at No. 519 West Second street. The dog was owned by Miss Clara Mehesy, No. 1078 East Ocean avenue.

Biting the child in the face and injuring one eye, the dog caused several deep lacerations.

Officer Edward Remelt attempted to take charge of the dog. The brute then turned its attack to him and the officer had a hard fight to get the animal under control. In the struggle the officer was bitten on the right wrist. On account of the crowd about the place the officer could not use a revolver. The dog was afterward killed by the police.

FIXING TAX RATE.

The annual expense budget of the city of Long Beach as passed by the Mayor and City Council, does not include the usual annual allowance for the maintenance of the municipal band, and other necessary luxuries. To meet the great demand that these features be continued, the City Council must call a special election to raise a tax levy for these expenditures.

This will probably be done at the Council's next meeting. If not, it is believed the citizens will storm the city fathers with petitions. The municipal band, they say, is something that they cannot do without. The Council and the Mayor also realize this fact, but conditions arising in the formation of the budget precluded an allowance for the band.

It was included in the budget of $341,000 adopted by the Council last Tuesday night, but the Mayor last night returned the budget to the Council with this item, and many others, cut out. The Council could not pass the budget over his veto, and at the same time reduce it, which it was found it would be necessary to do in order to keep the tax rate down. The Mayor cut out about $75,000, leaving the total annual expense fund of $266,000.

This amount will allow a dollar tax rate. The library and redemption fund will call for a tax levy of about 27 cents, and with the proposed tax levy of 10 cents voted for the band maintenance, the tax rate would be in the neighborhood of $1.37 per $100 worth of property. This is not considered high for an assessed valuation of more than $21,000,000.

Following the close of the Christian convention tomorrow evening the presiding officer, Rev. A. C. Smither, pastor of the First Christian Church of Los Angeles, will with his wife begin a vacation that will last until the middle of September. In this period he and Mrs. Smithers will tour Alaska. They are preparing to depart for the trip early the coming week. Their son, Chester, will accompany them. They will go as far North as Dawson City. Upon his return Rev. Mr. Smither will enter upon his twenty-first year as pastor of the First Christian Church.

The convention closing here, and of which Mr. Smither was the presiding officer, is to become known on the church records as the greatest in attendance, in sustained interest and as to the amount of money raised, that has ever been held by the Christian churches of Southern California.

The closing programme for tomorrow morning will be a sermon by Dr. Ainslee. A committee service is to be held at 2 o'clock. The evening will be devoted to a platform meeting on Christian Union, with speakers including Dr. Ainslee, F. M. Dowling and W. H. Martin.

The Southern California Christian Endeavor Association this afternoon held its annual election of officers at the Christian Church. The result was: President, Harry C. Ravenscroft, Long Beach; vice-president, G. C. Gearhart, Orange; secretary, Jesse Steele, El Monte; treasurer, Roy Green Christenson, Pasadena. A resolution was adopted, as presented by Mrs. Walter Wood, declaring the approval of the Christian Endeavorers of the plan of the Christian churches to build a new edifice in Long Beach. The Endeavorers would assist in furnishing the building.

While several of the pickets from the labor union forces are still in evidence in the west part of town, it is said that the leader of the agitation here, one Garry, has departed with his family for San Francisco. The pickets remaining here are not allowing themselves to get over the deadline drawn by the ordinance, and members of the police force are seeing to it that peace is preserved. All pickets, it is said, have been notified to be on hand at the trial of Dan McQuaria, charged with a violation of the picket ordinance, in Justice Hart's court Tuesday morning.

The first step toward laying plans for the buildings of a horseshoe pier from the ocean ends of Pine and American avenues, was taken last night by the City Council, when an ordinance of intention setting aside a certain assessment district passed its first reading. The assessment district is for the purpoe of raising funds for the purchase of ground for the opening of American avenue at the ocean front.

It is now against the city law for any motorcycle or automobile to travel over the streets with a muffler of sound attached. The ordinance passed final reading at last night's City Council meeting.

James B. Heartwell fell headlong down a long stairway at his home, No. 407 Cedar avenue, this morning early and sustained a compound fracture of the right arm. When found the broken bones protruded through the flesh.

General Manager McMillan of the Pacific Electric, accompanied by Charles E. Shattuck, architect, and a consulting engineer, came to town this afternoon in McMillan's private car and spent some time on the company water front site, upon which it proposes to erect a mammoth office building. The company, it is understood, would build six stories instead of three, as has been proposed, provided the citizens of this city will get behind the matter with a guarantee that they will assist in securing tenants.

Reduced Prices

In line with our established policy—when an article has remained too long on our floors or for any reason we desire to close it out, we reprice it and the new price remains until the article is sold.

Since taking our annual inventory there are many articles in this store that have been re-marked to sell at cost, and in some cases less.

Your good judgment will govern your decision as to whether the article at the price is cheap and whether it is something that you want. On all of these articles there will not be two prices, "Was $50 now $30," to confuse and influence your purchase. Just the article itself, and on it Pease Brothers' LOW price, which will tell the story better than this advertisement can possibly do.

These Reduced Prices Will Apply in all Departments of This Great Business. Included in the Reductions Are Dining, Living and Bedroom Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Portieres and Lace Curtains.

Dining-room tables that you have been accustomed to seeing pric at $50 are now marked as low as $30. $30 values in dressers mark as low as $17.50. It is hardly necessary for us to add that all reductions are genuine.

Every article in this store is good value at the FIRST PRIC put upon it, and when for any reason we feel that a special indu ment should be made to move an article, and it is repriced, you be sure it is well worth your consideration.

Every article is just as desirable as it was the day we selected it for our trade.

Save ¾ of Your Mantle Expense

How? Block Innerlin Lined Mantles is the answer. Innerlin Mantles are lined. They outlast six of any other kind. Two thicknesses of extra strong fibre knittings are prepared as for two high-grade mantles.

One mantle is drawn over the other, and the two are ingeniously joined together, formed and finished as one Block Innerlin Lined Mantle. Double thickness, an exclusive Innerlin feature, insures extra strength—longer life. When the outer covering breaks, mantle is still good for another three months.

Give 50 per cent More Light

The illumination from Innerlins is of lasting brilliancy. Yet the light is soft and easy on the eyes. Ordinary mantles lessen in brilliancy very rapidly with use. Innerlins increase in brilliancy with use. They can be used where ordinary mantles are impossible. Shaking doesn't break them. Innerlins are absolutely shrinkless, keeping their full shape always.

EL CENTRO.

DAM COULDN'T INJURE YUMA.

ENGINEER EXPRESSES HIS OPINION ON IT.

Government Representative Visits Imperial Valley and Sees the Great Development of Ranches and Cities, the Protection of Which Is in His Charge.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

EL CENTRO, Aug. 6.—Engineer Ockerson, appointed by President Taft to take charge of the work on the Colorado River under the appropriation of $1,000,000 made as one of the last acts of Congress, is actively engaged in his new duties. This week he visited various points in Imperial Valley in company with Franklin J. Cole, judge of the Imperial County Superior Court, and Receiver Holabird of the California Development Company.

Ockerson was taken on an automobile tour through fifty miles of highly cultivated Imperial Valley ranches and expressed his realization of the great importance of the work under his charge for the protection of the ranches and cities of this valley.

Residents of Yuma Valley have been circulating petitions asking the government to rescind its permission for a weir dam, alleging this would flood Yuma Valley should a rise in the Colorado River occur.

Engineer Ockerson stated that the Imperial Valley people need not be disturbed by these petitions as, if any attention were paid to them by the War Department, the matter would be referred to him and he would put the situation up straight to the department as he considered the weir could not injure Yuma in the slightest degree. Ockerman will establish a camp on the Colorado River near the Abejos River break and begin surveys immediately. Permission for engineering parties to operate in Mexico territory has been obtained from the Mexican authorities.

Employees of a Los Angeles Mercantile Establishment Hurt in Accident in Ocean Park.

OCEAN PARK, Aug. 6.—While hurrying to catch a 7 o'clock trolley flyer this morning, Perry Solomon of No. 53 Sunset avenue, was struck by a Los Angeles Pacific trolley car and sustained injuries which it is feared may result in his death. The accident happened near the car barns. The unfortunate man was struck in the head by the second car of the train, he having missed his attempt to board the rear end of the first moving coach.

The injured men was unconscious when he was picked up, he having been knocked to the side of the track. He was romeved to the Santa Monica Hospital. It was reported from that institution this evening that he may possibly recover, although the hope held out is not very strong.

Solomon, who is about 25 years of age, is employed as salesman in the Mullen & Bluett store of Los Angeles. He was spending the summer by the sea, and was on the way to his work in the city when the accident happened.

CHANGE IN MUSIC.

In order to satisfy all classes of music lovers, Douglas Allen has decided to make a change in the beach musical programmes. Hereafter the philharmonic orchestra will play each afternoon, and in the evening he will put on a full brass band.

The movement to equip and maintain a free bed at the Santa Monica Hospital has resulted in the formation of a Good Samaritan Free Bed Association and the election of officers. Mrs. D. G. Stephens was made president, and Mrs. R. Z. Gill secretary. Vice-presidents and a treasurer are yet to be named.

Tomorrow afternoon there will be a quarterly meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of the Los Angeles diocese on the beach near the Hollister-avenue pier. Bishop Johnson will be present and will preside. In the evening the session will be continued at the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd.

Sunday evening F. Grandier, assistant superintendent of the Los Angeles Anti-Saloon League, will discuss the saloon question in the pulpit of the Lake-street Methodist Church.

Do You Weigh Too Much?

The Real Remedy and the Recipe.

There are some stout people whom the above question does not seem to trouble very much. They are, however, wrong to be so careless, for obesity is a complaint which brings many evils in its train. There are others, who have sought long and earnestly for a really reliable remedy for obesity, and to these the following prescription will be of absorbing interest, because it presents in a simple and harmless form and sure relief—a remedy which is rapidly gaining a world-wide reputation. The reader may make up the prescription for himself (or herself) on getting the ingredients from the druggist—or the latter will do so willingly.

This is the full receipt: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water. Take a dose of one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

This admirable and quite harmless remedy will soon take off pounds of the offending fatty excess; and as, day by day, the weight decreases, strength and vigor will return in equal ratio; for, be it observed, there is no fasting or exercise required. Rest, good food, regular doses—these are all that is necessary to reduce weight to normal, increase the supply of pure blood, clear the skin, beautify the complexion, and restore energy and excellent spirits.

WASHINGTON.

SAYS ALASKAN COAL IS RICH.

Worth More Than Best of Eastern Lands.

Half-Cent a Ton Misleads the Public.

Geological Survey Furnishes the Figures.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Accessible coal of the best Alaskan fields, even at a half-cent a ton in the ground, is worth more than most of the coal lands in the Eastern States, notwithstanding their nearness to lines of transportation and to market. This statement is contained in a bulletin issued by the Geological Survey today under direction of Gen. Otis Smith.

During the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation, A. H. Brooks of the Geological Survey testified that the accessible coal in the Bearing River and Matamuska districts was worth half a cent a ton in the ground.

This small figure created the impression in the minds of many people that Alaska coal lands were of small value. The bulletin just issued says that, priced at the rate named by Mr. Brooks, the best Alaska coal lands are worth from $50 to $500 an acre, values far above the average price of bituminous coal lands.

The statement says that the most serious handicap has been the laws. Though laws intended to enable the individual to obtain title have been on the statute books for the last decade, not an acre of land has gone to patent.

WORLD PEACE RESOLUTIONS.

American Delegates to Interparliamentary Union in Brussels Have Work Outlined—Leave Tuesday.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The American group of delegates to the conference of interparliamentary union at Brussels August 29 to September 2, will sail for New York next Tuesday. They will present several resolutions looking toward the establishment of permanent peace between the nations of the world. These resolutions were submitted to the State Department today by Representative Richard Bartholdt of Missouri, chairman of the American group.

One will ask the conference to request governments which are signatories to The Hague peace conference and the London Naval conference to sanction the American proposition that the international prize court be invested with the jurisdiction of an international court of arbitral justice.

Another resolution will ask the conference to request each of the governments represented to appoint a committee analogous to that recently appointed by the United States.

The commission would report to the respective parliaments prior to the third Hague peace conference in 1915 a well defined scheme looking to the perfection of a system of world federation, in addition to an international judiciary.

ALCATRAZ ARMY HERO.

Private Lester Hanson Is Given Certificate of Merit for Rescue of Companions.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The honor roll of the army records for deeds of valor show few that can overshadow one for which Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff, yesterday gave a certificate of merit to Private Lester Hanson of the Fourth Company, Prison Guard, at the military prison on Alcatraz Island, Cal.

Hanson and five companions went sailing July 24 in the bay off Alcatraz. Their boat capsized and the men had practically no support to which they could cling. The record says that for more than an hour, as the frantic men fought for hold on the overturned vessel, the wind and tide would carry them away helpless.

All that time Hanson repeatedly swam to their assistance, buoyed them up and got them back to the craft again. Finally, when Privates Nash and Bates became unconscious from exhaustion and cold, Hanson supported their limp bodies in the water until his signals to the steamer Coalinga brought help. Nash afterward died of his hardship.

If you are hobbling about with rheumatic joints, or suffering torture from inflammatory rheumatism—come and let us explain our theory and treatment for this painful affliction. It is somewhat different from other treatments, and cures when others fail. It will pay you to investigate.

Stomach Bad?

If you have distress and bloating after eating, don't neglect treatment. Catarrh of the stomach is a most common ailment and can be cured; but remember, a cancer of the stomach is incurable. Don't neglect stomach trouble. Consult the Doctors who know how to cure.

Medical Skill

doesn't mean just sufficient technical knowledge to enable a man to pass a Medical Examination and hang out his shingle. It means ACTUAL PRACTICE AMONG THE SICK—for years and years; daily watching and learning from each case the secrets of nature and the cure for disease.

Such knowledge is possessed by Drs. Shores in a wonderful degree.

WOMEN

Weak, tired-out, sickly women—suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex, find Drs. Shores' treatment prompt and wonderful in results. Consultation free and confidential.

BREVITIES.

Kryptok means a lens for near and far vision, in solid glass, invisible. No dirty lines; will not come apart. No air bubbles. A pair of kryptok do the work of two pairs of glasses. If you have failed with other kinds of bifocals, you will have no trouble in wearing kryptok. The success of bifocals is the way the nose piece or bridge is adjusted to the nose. I make kryptoks in flat and toric, or deep-curved lenses. My price is within your reach. No matter how hard you are to fit, it will be easy for me. Years of experience makes me an expert on the eyesight. Call and see samples, and talk it over; examination free. I make kryptok as low as $8. I handle the only genuine nose piece, Shur On, with lenses for $3. My motto, "Square Deal." Dr. Garfield, eye specialist, room 417 Grant bldg., 355 So. Broadway. Fourth floor.

SOLDIERS' HOME.

New Cold Storage Rooms and Various Other Improvements to Be Installed.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Aug. 6.—A number of improvements along the lines of "construction and repairs" are soon to be undertaken, bids on which are to be opened on the 30th inst. Principal among them are construction of cold storage rooms in the general mess kitchen; furnishing and installing oil burning furnaces, and fuel oil and blowoff pipe lines in power-house, and one for remodeling and converting the second floor of the bakery building into a dormitory.

Star B. Wood, formerly of Co. B, Seventh Ohio Infantry, a native of Ohio, admitted from Los Angeles in 1899, died August 8, aged 68.

The Los Angeles Grays, which two weeks ago gave the Soldiers' Home nine a thorough beating, came on the home field this afternoon just to show the veterans they could do it again—if they wanted to. Evidently they did not want to. In all but the seventh inning they took eggs. The game at close stood, Soldiers' Home 4, Los Angeles Grays 2.

H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 30 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. I make this statement that you will know you consult a celebrated Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience, acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes ordinary doctors with questionable ability, give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. HOW THEY'RE TRYING IT OUT.

NEW WAYS CANDIDATES HAVE IN CAMPAIGNING FOR PRIMARY.

The Human Hammer and the Man With the Tireless Handshake—New Problem of Getting at the Voters. Cost to State Nearly Two Millions.

BY HARRY C. CARR.

IF THE history of this campaign is ever written, it will be the story of a battle.

Nothing like it, in point of dramatic interest, high stakes and fighting cost has ever been seen in California before.

Particularly fighting cost. Every one knew that the direct primary would be an expensive luxury; but no one knew it was to be like this.

Knowing what they do now, it is extremely doubtful if any of the candidates for Governor would have the courage to tackle another campaign.

The expense has been somthing terrific. A thousand dollars in this campaign is nothing but a whiff in the wind. That amount will stick up a few posters for boys to throw mudballs at.

It is estimated by one of the most conservative campaign managers that the aggregate sum spent by the various Republican candidates for Governor will run very close to $500,000. Hiram Johnson is said to have had a warchest of $150,000. This figure includes only the legitimate campaign expenses—the price of arousing enthusiasm.

In addition to this, the expense of holding the primary election with its stupendous printing bills and other foolishness will be about $1,700,000 to the State.

A pretty stiff price to pay for changing Governors.

All of this, however, is by way of parenthesis.

The really interesting and unique feature of this campaign is the unusual opportunity it gives for the display of the personalities and methods of the different candidates.

The old-fashioned campaign was like modern warfare—impersonal and mysterious.

This new business of campaigning is more like the jousts, the knighthood tourneys—like the individualized wars of olden days.

To a very large degree the campaign methods are dictated by the personality of the candidate. One would naturally suppose the tatistics of all would be about the same. Not so.

The methods of the various candidates for Governor differ so utterly in this fight that one can hardly believe they are racing for the same goal.

The fighting ideas of the six men who are struggling for the Governorship seem not to resemble in any particular.

Their campaigns form an absorbing study in individuality.

CURRY.

The first in the field was Curry. He is a long, tall individual, who very hopefully insists that he looks like Abraham Lincoln. He went into the campaign with a tremendous sack of money, supplied, apparently, by the "liberal element," and a very definite and somewhat ingenious plan of campaign.

Curry's idea was to mix with the public, disguised as an innocent, guileless, plain man of the people, who made no speeches and had no system but to love his fellow-man.

Meanwhile, behind the scenes, his campaign managers built up the most elaborate system of "fire control" and campaign plans used by any of the candidates. Its operation must have cost a fortune.

Curry was one of the first politicians to see the possibility of using the nominating petition as a means of canvassing the votes of the community.

In this county, for instance, he sent out his men to get all the signatures possible to his petitions.

He was only required to secure 414 signatures in Los Angeles county; but, under strong pressure, his men worked on until the petitions bore 1500 pledged names.

Curry had a double object in doing this. By getting out early, before it was exactly known who were to be candidates, he pledged many voters who would otherwise have wavered and probably never would have come to him.

To nail down, if possible, the support of the men who signed these petitions, Curry sent out, at the very first clatter, cordial personal letters to all the signers.

It is claimed that this is the only instance in which Curry has made use of the mails. He believes in neither speeches nor postage stamps. The latter are a source of heavy expense to all the other candidates. It costs about $750 to send a single circular to the voters of this county.

After these nominating petitions were in, a careful list was made up on the old Tammany Hall system, showing the streets and localities from which the signers came.

His next move was to send out professional "glad handers" to organize Curry clubs.

This was a mere bluff for the benefit of his statistical department. All you had to do to join the "Chas. F. Curry Central Organization" was to sign a card—"I hereby enroll myself, etc." That was the last you heard of the club; but your enrollment card, or your refusal to enroll, was duly entered on a card index.

Mr. Curry next got out precinct books—containing the name of every voter in each precinct—with their views, if known. This was for the use of the Curry precinct captains. They are now supposed to be filling in the gaps of these books by making a house-to-house canvass.

By means of this elaborate system Curry knows or thinks he will know, the political intentions of every voter in the State of California. When he knows exactly who is against him, and why, his profesional glad handers (of whom he has an army) will try to turn the doubters.

Curry, himself, confines his attentions to a sort of indescriminate ramble up and down the cocktail route. This is in no way to be taken as a hint that Mr. Curry is a tough. He has the old-fashioned political idea that more voters can be found in a listening mood, without business distractions, in saloons than anywhere else. He does not confine his attentions exclusively to saloons of course; but the most of his efforts have been spent where the electric light hit the asphalt and has relied almost exclusively upon shaking hands and distributing the idea that he is a "good fellow."

"Personal friendship; personal loyalty" is the song you hear at Curry headquarters. They rely on the fact that "Charlie" has stirred up such a furious affection on the part of the voters that none of them could bear to turn against him.

Curry's great weakness is the lack of any reason why anybody should vote for him. When you have said he is a good fellow, he seems to be all in. The only reason why you should elect him Governor is that he shook your distinguished mitten.

His best strength came at the very first of the campaign when he was the only candidate actively in the field. He has been losing ground ever since.

His case is like that of one of the candidates for Sheriff who advertises "Why not vote for me?" And the voter murmers, "On the other hand, why should I."

ANDERSON.

Alden Anderson has an entirely different idea and goes office-hunting with an utterly different point of view from Curry.

Anderson goes for the few and weighty men. He comes into town, relying very largely on his prestige as bank commissioner. He carries letters of introduction from some big bug somewhere to the local big bug. This letter is sent forth and an interview is arranged with the B. bug, who comes to the office and they "confer."

When you hear that Alden Anderson is in town "campaigning" it means that he is having these conferences, one after another, at his campaign headquarters with representative men who have been herded in by somebody.

He does not rely on lists and the card index. With many politicians of ability, Anderson shares the idea that an indexed list of people who "say" they are going to vote in some certain way is not to be compared, for accuracy, with the intuitive knowledge and judgment of men who come in daily contact with the body of the citizens.

His plan is to meet as many strong, representative men from as many different walks of life as possible; to inquire of them where the line of battle is weakest, and to try to show them how it is to their interest to get out and hustle votes for him. Anderson seems to depend upon political leaders being able to swing their precincts for him; to depend upon the heads of big business institutions to swing their friends into line.

Anderson's great weakness has been the utter lack of newspaper support in this part of the State and upon the taint of being the known "push" candidate.

He has spent a pile of money trying to make up for his newspaper shortage with billboard advertising.

It is said that he has already spent about $20,000 on bill posters. He does seem to realize that in the modern science of advertising, bill posters have no primary value. They are only of value as what advertising men call the "reminder." The poster is to recall to your mind a more explicit and quieter advertisement you have read elsewhere.

Curry and Anderson are only interesting academically, as you may say. They are not of interest as "possibilities" any more than is poor Ellery, the fifth Republican wheel, who goes wandering about forlornly with a sack of campaign money he don't know what to do with. He is a political orphan.

Coming down to the possibilities, you encounter Johnson and Stanton.

JOHNSON.

Of all the candidates, Mr. Johnson follows the nearest the old-fashioned political campaign. His thinking is done by other men who don't consider him a very serious or important phase of the situation. He is "nothing but the candidate" to them. Meyer Lissner, the head of one of the most effective political machines ever organized in the West, directs the campaign in every particular. All Johnson does is to look at the books of dates arranged for him; climb into the automobile and "spout."

The only part Johnson takes in the campaign is to make speeches. In a certain way these speeches are attractive. They are spectacularly brutal. Johnson is violent and abusive. In the practice of his profession as a criminal lawyer, he is notorious as a courtroom bully. He never addresses a decent remark to the opposing lawyer and taunts and insults every witness called to the stand. He has carried these methods onto the stump. He is the human hammer—the worst knocker in the field.

Were Hiram to describe a sunrise, he would confide his remarks to cursing and villifying the recreant, outrageous criminal moon in having failed to give light enough and made the rising of the sun necessary.

He has only one note which is a raucous, outraged bellow of rage. He would have been a red-hot card at the beginning of the French revolution, but in a campaign like this his cause suffers because his audiences realize that he is overplaying his themes.

Hiram can never impress an audience but once. Consequently his second visit, which is now in progress through Southern California, has been weakening his strength. The Lincoln-Roosevelt supporters are tired of the roar.

He is very much such a man as Francis J. Heney. Like Heney, the first time you hear him, his effect upon your mind is impressive; the second time, you inwardly protest at what you now realize to be his unfair statements. The third time, you yawn.

Mr. Johnson's strength and Mr. Johnson's weakness depend upon the intimacy of his relations with the voting population. His chance of being elected depends upon how familiar the voters are NOT with him. If the campaign were to last longer and he kept up this yawp, he would surely be defeated. At present his chances and Stanton's seem about even.

This undoubted tendency of people to turn against ranters like Johnson,

Methods of some of the busiest of them with pen and pencil. The new ways of doing it will cost a would-be Governor from $150,000 down, while the State's taxpayers will foot bills amou ing to nearly $2,000,000 for the first trial of the device.

Preliminary skirmishing has been

Young be committed to jail. For so reason not apparent in the records t order was never executed. Spella

Judge Bordwell required Young which established a new local rec

The trial of the issue promises to very sensational in character, as sta

both men.

The suit arises from an old partn ship arrangement which existed in 1 and 1902, and which was ended by Sp lacy accepting Young's interest in tru according to Young's contention. Pla tiff alleges that his moneys were vested in oil land and developme an accounting though the property h proved an enormous producer. He d

Defendent Spellacy enters a sweepi denial of Young's claims and represen that he has only been a financial me who has devoted his time and substan to Young's upbuilding. He says Youn demands are preposterous and cann be sustained in a court of law and a ba engaged by each side and the fir

The trial will probably last a wee

Desert Whisky and an Aqueduct Cook Give Unappreciated "Wild West" Performance on Southern Pacific Train, and the Man With the Gun Is Taken to Jail.

Passengers on a Southern Pacific train bound for this city from the north witnessed a "wild west" exhibition, yesterday, but were too thoroughly terrorized to enjoy the performance. Avery David, a cook on the aqueduct, was the "show" and he is now in the County Jail awaiting a trial on a charge of having displayed firearms.

Few persons noticed a meek-mannered man of middle age when he got on the train at Mojave. He did not give any signs of having filled up with desert whisky. It soon began to take effect, and in a short time he appeared willing to eat fire.

The performance began when he extracted some eggs from a small grip he was carrying. The passengers wondered if a magician was in their midst.

David's next move was to pull an old-fashioned Colt's revolver, with a split handle, from his pocket. He tossed an egg from the car window and took a shot at it. His nerves were unsteady, and he appeared disappointed when he could not hit the small target. He repeated the performance until the supply of hen fruit was exhausted.

The gun wielder seemed to have a longing to shoot at something. His eyes roved around the car.

"Throw your hat out that window," he commanded a man who was sitting near him.

The passenger was not pleased with the idea of throwing away his perfectly good head-covering to satisfy the whims of a bibulous man. He was too frightened to move and did not say anything.

David gave him a crack on the side of the head with the gun and then

OLD-TIMER!

M'LARREN IS EXPERT HAND.

Admits He Has Visited Larger Cities on Coast.

Adam McLarren, the old man who as taken in custody by Secret Service perator Hazen as a counterfeiter, hursday, is now believed by the of- ials to have made many of the urious coins which have been circulated in Coast cities for several years. The government authorities have en harassed by their inability to p a flood of small coins which ap- ared periodically in the seaport cit- , but now believe that the source them has been discovered.

McLarren firmly denies that he ever sed a counterfeit coin, and sticks his first story that he was merely perimenting with metals, and hap- ned to take impressions from money. He admits that he was in this city out four years ago, about the time en the Federal officers received ny reports that counterfeit money s being passed. He acknowledges t he has visited all of the larger ies on this Coast.

"I am convinced that he is an old- er," Hazen said, in discussing the soner's case. "He turned out as rly perfect counterfeits as we ever d. I have no doubt that we will nect him up with other work."

OF ELD.

TO CELEBRATE HER CENTURY.

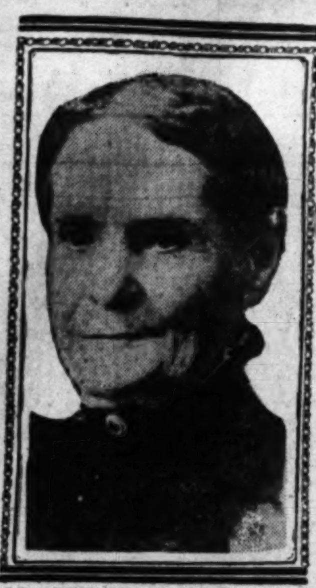
S. FOORD WILL SOON BE ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

right Little Los Angeles Woman, ioneer of "Calico" Days, Born in oston Before the Last War With ngland, Receives Callers and Takes terest in World Happenings.

n the 16th inst., Mrs. Elizabeth rdner Foord, who has been a resi- t of Los Angeles and vicinity since 4, will attain her hundredth year. n in Boston, August 16, 1810, Mrs. ord is a fine example of the high e of character which has made New gland the intellectual center of the ntry and the birthplace of the men women who have largely laid the ndations of our western progres- eness and acomplishment.

he was the descendant of Puritan ck upon the one hand, and of the nch Hugenot family upon the other e, one of the members of the latter ng Peter Faneuil, who gave the radle of Liberty" to the city of ston. Her father's family were of se Bostonians who counted educa- n and high thoughts as the first y of life. They were among the nders of Unitarianism, and in her y life the daughter, Elizabeth, was ociated with the coterie of thinkers o were led by Channing, Emerson, rker and other brilliant minds. Nat- lly she grew into a womanhood of e culture and refinement.

he married Enos Foord of Dedham, ss., who served for many years as gistrar of Norfolk county, succeed- his own father in that position, and ng succeeded by his son, James rd. For forty-five years Mrs. Foord ided in the beautiful village of dham, presiding with the gracious [illegible] and simplicity which marked [illegible] over a home that [illegible] in the community. Although essentially a domestic woman, she took active interest in the great movements of those stirring days and shared in the relief work during the Civil War and in the philanthropic aid extended to the freedmen at that time.



Mrs. Elizabeth G. Foord, who will be one hundred years of age a week from next Tuesday.

In 1874 Mrs. Foord accompanied her son, James Foord, and his family to California. For a number of years they lived upon a ranch in San Gabriel. Here her love of flowers and of outdoor life was gratified. Although somewhat isolated by her ranch life, she was still counted as one of that band of pioneer New England women who were among the earlier American residents of Los Angeles. In those "calico" days, as these women half-jestingly, half-tenderly recalled the period when Los Angeles offered little opportunity of social intercourse or culture, a group of these women were in the habit of gathering with their sewing or mending to "spend the afternoon" upon a shaded porch or underneath the trees of some home. Here they read the latest book received from "back East," and discussed the news that came from home, and thus kept their minds from rusting.

When in her sixty-sixth year, Mrs. Foord went to Enrope, making the trip alone, and spent two years in company with her niece, Miss Margaret M. Fette of this city, in traveling. While in Germany, and after her return to this country, this daughter of Boston studied the German language. Until very recent years she has kept up her intellectual activity, reading largely and taking keen interest in the topics of the day. An accident has rendered her an invalid during the past few years, and she is now confined to her room and her chair, but still reads and enjoys the calls of friends, which break the monotony of the days.

Motor Speedway.

A great motor speedway is being projected across the river from Cincinnati, and when the course is built and ready it will be only natural that the Automobile Club of Cincinnati will take a more prominent part in the sporting end of the work than it does at present. As it is, the club declines to be identified with race meetings that are founded upon the simple effort to gain dollars. As a matter of fact, the money-making features of motoring do not appeal very strongly to the organization.

turned to another passenger. He in turn was told to make a flying target out of his hat. The long 45-caliber gun looked twice as big as it really was, but he took a chance on his life to save his headgear.

David continued to have "fun" with the occupants of the car until the train pulled into River Station. A special agent, who had been telegraphed for, was on hand and took the shooter in custody and disarmed him.

When searched at the County Jail, David was found to have a razor of large dimensions in his pocket. He accounted for it by saying that he was a barber before he went out on the aqueduct to cook.

The officers believe he is not naturally a bad man, but that the liquor made him feel ferocious. The charge against him is that of having exhibited a deadly weapon in a threatening manner, and not in defense of himself.

For the entire United States, estimates place the motor car production of 1909 at 82,000, 1910 about 210,000, and for 1911 about 300,000, with an average value of approximately $1250.

One Honest Price To All.

It is unsafe to buy any Player-Piano on the strength of its rendition of heavy, rythmic music.

¶ Such music is so well adapted to a fixed tempo and to either extreme forte or pianissimo effects that a child can, by following the instructions on the roll, render very masterly music, even with an instrument of questionable merit.

¶ Avoid, also, the technically brilliant selections, when you are hearing a piano-player, those compositions where runs abound and where perfect execution is of more worth than singing beauty of tone.

¶ Choose a simple piece of music, one where brief pauses give value, where there should be an infinite number of gradations between the forte and the piano. Hear that on some other player, and then let us play it for you on the APOLLO. You will appreciate at once the vast difference which the human touch of the APOLLO gives to the rendition.

DRINK PLENTY OF WATER.

The Old Medical Idea of Water at Meal Time Given a Hard Scientific Rap.

While the medical profession generally has encouraged the drinking of pure water in large quantities, it has discountenanced the copious drinking of water with meals, says a New York dispatch to the Chicago Inter Ocean. The theory was that an excess of water taken when eating dilutes the gastric juice and thereby disturbs digestion.

Now it appears that this theory was all wrong and that the more water that is taken with meals the better will be the digestion and the general health. The Journal of Experimental Medicine, published by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, recites an experiment recently conducted for the sole purpose of settling this point.

"Although there have been many investigations made upon the influence of copious water drinking," the Journal says, "yet nowhere, in so far as we have been able to discover from a careful study of the literature, has there been made a carefully conducted experiment or series of experiments upon human subjects for the purpose of obtaining data as to the effect of copious ingestion of water with meals. The reason why our literature contains records of no such experiment is not far to seek. The medical profession almost unanimously advise against the drinking of large amounts of water at meal time. The desirable features following the liberal use of water taken at the proper time are thoroughly appreciated, but any suggestion as to the taking of water in large quantities with meals is strongly antagonized.

"Such being the attitude of the medical profession, it has therefore been a natural consequence that those interested in the study of medical problems should fail to attempt to place the theory upon an experimental basis. Why investigate something which is self-evident? At first thought the present-day theory as to the inadvisability of ingesting large volumes of water with meals sounds extremely reasonable. The principal objection to the copious ingestion of the fluid is based upon the supposition that the excess water dilutes the gastric juice and thus disturbs to a marked degree the normal rhythm of the digestive functions.

"However, we can no longer entertain the old belief that such is the case. The experiments indicate most convincingly that the entrance of water into the stomach does not produce a gastric juice of lowered acidity, but rather that the entrance of this fluid acts as a distinct stimulation to the gastric secretion, and that the juice, although secreted in larger volume than previous to the entrance of the water, nevertheless shows a higher concentration of acid than does that juice which is secreted under ordinary conditions.

"In the experiment the subject was placed on a normal, constant diet, and by means of a preliminary period of sufficient length was brought to a condition of approximate nitrogen equilibrium. At that point 1000 cubic centimeters of water was added to each meal and continued thus through a period of five days.

"Immediately following this period came a final period of eight days, during which the original normal constant diet was again maintained and the after-effects of the copious water ingestion observed.

"The result showed an increase in weight of two pounds during the five days of the test, and the general conclusion reached was that the drinking of a large amount of water with meals was attended by many desirable and by no undesirable features."

VALUE OF DEEP BREATHING.

Is Becoming Recognized as One of the Main Elements for Good Health.

"More attention is being paid by the medical profession to the deep breathing cure," said Dr. Andrew F. Crothers, of Philadelphia, to the Washington Post.

"When, it is understood that the whole human system depends for its very existence on the proper supply of oxygen through the lungs the importance of proper breathing may be realized. There is a movement on foot among educators connected with the Philadelphia public schools and a large number of physicians to add to the physical culture programme, which is part of the public school curriculum, that of deep breathing. A regular course of breathing, administered by experts, will be a thing of the near future, not only in public schools, but in the army, the navy, and athletic societies; in fact, everything, even in the home.

"The exercise of the respiratory organs is effected through the chest, and its results are manifested in the gradual increase in size of the chest cavity, and the exercise of the abdomen is effected from the abdominal cavity by alternate muscular contraction and relaxation. There is no better cure for tubercular ailments than deep breathing; it is especially to be recommended to weak children and women.

"Military authorities of the great powers have recently paid the closest attention to the matter of breathing with a view to increasing the lung power of their soldiers. They are favorably impressed with the method as advanced by Dr. John E. Ruebsam, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania Hospital, who has given the subject years of study and has perfected an apparatus which not only tests the lungs of the soldiers, sailors, and others, but strengthens and develops their lungs in a surprisingly short time. Of all the methods yet advanced to combat the ravages of the white plague, deep breathing is not only the most simple but the most effective, and teachers and parents and the general public should begin the practice at once."

VALUE OF BUGS.

Their Economic Possibilities Cause Them to Be Exchanged Between Countries.

"I was interested in reading about Dr. L. O. Howard's recent trip abroad in the interests of an interchange of bugs between this and foreign countries," said Dr. A. K. Peterson of Indianapolis, to the Washington Post.

"The average person has littl ciation of the economic value

REDISTRICTING THE STATE.

The State administration to be chosen at the November election (practically to be decided upon at the primaries next week) will redistrict the State of California. The present districts were formed, none of them, later than ten years ago, after the last Federal census. Great changes have taken place during the decade.

By the former census Los Angeles was credited with about 100,000 people. The growth of the city has been 250 per cent. in the census period, and in the county not less. If we take the southern half of the State, say from Fresno down, the growth of population has been on the whole perhaps larger than in the city of Los Angeles. The development of the San Joaquin Valley has been at an enormous pace since the last census was taken. So down in Imperial county. The districting now in force does a great deal of injustice to the south half of the State in every way.

Take, for example, the State Board of Equalization. Of the five members composing that body, the south has a single member. We have only to recall this board to mind and its action of a year ago, attacking the taxpayers of Southern California, to arouse lively interest all through the southern part of the State.

On the attitude of the next Governor and the views of the members of the Legislature to be chosen will depend whether during the next ten years the taxpayers all over the southern half of the State of California will enjoy a fair deal or the opposite. They have the opposite at the present time, and will have it again unless they rise above partisan politics and act in their own behalf.

There should be an increased membership in the Board of Equalization, probably, and if it should be raised to seven, that part of the State south of Fresno should have four members. You can get them if you will vote right at the election a week from Tuesday and again in the early days of November. Begin with the Governor and cast your vote at both these elections for a candidate who understands this matter and who will act fairly. There is only one candidate for Governor who has committed himself in this respect, and he is the only one who can be depended upon for any relief for the southern half of California. The others are all northern men, all under the domination of political parties whose whole strength is in the north, and its interests also.

There is no candidate except Philip A. Stanton who will not do everything he can, when the redistricting of the State takes place, to keep Southern California at the same disadvantage it is in now. That is a proposition clear to the mind of any intelligent person and will not be disputed by any such person who is without prejudice, wherever his home may be. The determination to keep the southern half of the State out of its rights will draw many votes north of Fresno to the candidates whose homes and interests are up above that point. If the voters in the southern half of the State are even half wise, Mr. Stanton will get a vote on Tuesday of next week which will put him upon the ticket for the November election and cut out all his Republican and near-Republican rivals. Once get him on the ticket for November and his election is sure.

For Controller the people of Southern California should vote in a solid body for Frank Mattison of Santa Cruz, a fair-minded, intelligent man who will help us win our rights. Of course, they should vote for B. B. Gregory of Los Angeles for the member of the Board of Equalization for the southern half of the State, inasmuch as until the redistricting is done he will be the only person in the board who will raise a voice on our behalf. Mr. Gregory's long experience as a title and property expert and his personal qualifications admirably fit him for the place; not a better man could be found in the State; and while doing justice to all sections, he will not fail to see that the southern end of the State is not mulcted nor "soaked," but gets a fair treatment, which is all that it asks. And voters should remember that A. B. Nye, present State Controller, and the Lincoln-Roosevelt candidate for the office today, is the same Nye who furnished the Board of Equalization with the ammunition that hit us of the south so hard last year. Vote for Mattison and Gregory, not for Nye and McElvaine.

The redivision of the State into equalization districts is the most important but not all of this redistricting business. There are the Assembly and Senate districts, the railroad districts and the Congressional districts. It is of the utmost importance that fair-minded, capable men who understand the various factors entering into this problem should be sent to the Legislature to do this redistricting.

Our own county of Los Angeles will in the redistricting of the Congressional divisions be entitled to two members of Congress. In our opinion, it would be much better for the county to have two districts within its own borders than to carve up the county in such a way as to tag on a piece here and there to some Congressional district outside of the county. It would seem to be a desirable thing to have one district wholly within the city of Los Angeles; and whatever the surplus population it should be attached to the district in the county outside of the city.

PROSPECTS OF CALIFORNIA OIL.

The dividends of California oil companies for the month of July amounted to $1,527,647.27. This rate kept up for twelve months would mean the payment to stockholders in these companies of the vast sum in one year of $18,321,767.24.

When it is remembered that the total sum paid by listed California oil companies to date, including the July payments, is $23,307,027.89, the tremendous strides the industry has made in the past few years can be realized. Of course, this latter sum does not include extra stock allotments made in lieu of cash payments.

These figures, however, are sufficient to show to the world that the oil industry of California is built upon a firm foundation, and when surrounded by the proper safeguards offers an investment that has many alluring features. True, what was regarded as a boom some months ago is not now so conspicuous; but for this condition many of the big producers offer up praises. This so-called boom found its birth in the concerted development of the Sunset-Midway field, with its complement of gushers, and there was a brief era of stock promotion that was looked upon with some degree of disfavor by many men who had been engaged in the oil game in this State for years, during which they had experienced several "lean" periods. Then came the Lakeview gusher with its daily production of over 50,000 barrels of oil, and many other big wells, and it was a short cut for production to outstrip consumption by several thousand barrels a day.

This condition sounded the death-knell to abnormal stock promotions, putting the oil industry back on a saner basis, but the unusual production and the coincident advertising served to announce to the world as nothing else could do that California is in a position to furnish fuel oil in unlimited quantities.

Everything points to the fact that the use of California oil will become more general now that it has been demonstrated that it can be produced in sufficient quantity to justify big consumers in relying upon it as a fuel, and the brains of the industry have for some time been engaged in preparing an extension of the market. The three big marketers—the Independent Producers' Agency—which works through the Union; the Standard and the Associated Oil companies—control pipe lines from the fields to the ocean, and all are now engaged in building storage to care for surplus oil. In addition there are many pipe line projects under way, including the California-Arizona Pipe Line Company, the Southern Pacific's line from the Kern fields to Mojave, the Producers' and Refiners' line projected by the Yancey crowd and the announcement just made that the Barneson interests will build a line from the Midway-Maricopa fields to Santa Barbara.

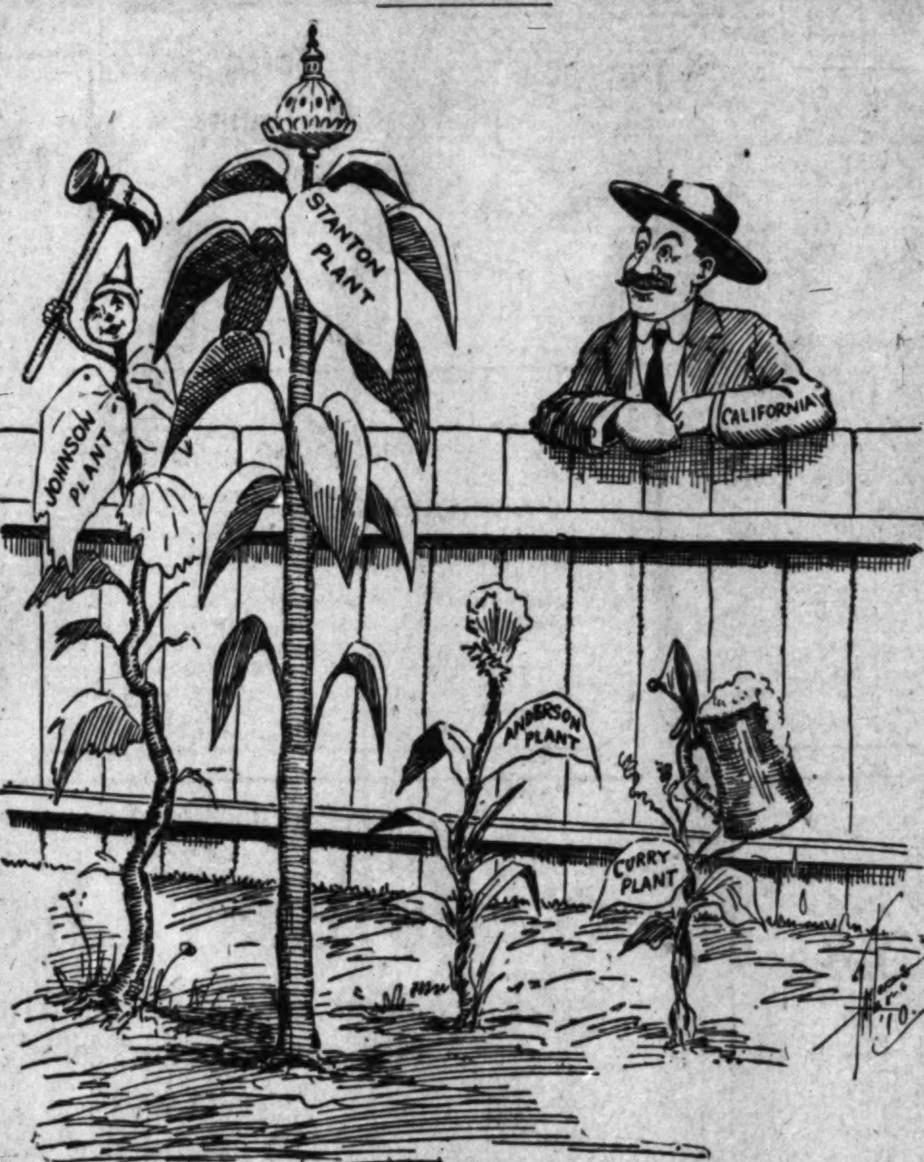
The members of the Independent Agency received more for their oil, through the Union as selling agent, in June, than they did in May, and there is no indication that the price will fall off. The one jarring note has been a slight cut made in the price of oil at San Francisco Bay by the Standard, but this has not precipitated a price war, and one is not looked for by the persons most interested.

Recent strikes have vastly increased the known oil-bearing zone of the Coalinga field, and the same is true of the Sunset and Midway districts. Good wells are being brought in in the old reliable Kern River field, and the Whittier and Fullerton fields, more contiguous to Los Angeles, are being developed and extended with gratifying results. There is no reason to fear that the enormous production of the Lakeview gusher has drained the district immediately surrounding it, since within the last two weeks two or more wells each giving forth thousands of barrels of oil a day have been brought in within one mile of the Lakeview. Almost at the same time the Santa Fé and the American Oilfields brought in gushers, with production running into the thousands of barrels, several miles from the Lakeview, showing that the gusher territory is of large extent and prolific.

There are indications that the navy is preparing to use oil as a fuel more generally than heretofore, and the same is true of other large consumers who will have to come to California to find their product. All authorities agree that oil as a fuel is clean and cheap, and now it has been demonstrated that the California marketers "can deliver the goods." However, the development of oil fields, the extension of markets, the building of storage and pipe lines, are matters that take time and are not compatible with the ideas of some "get-rich-quick" persons. Hence, when the lull comes there is the beginning of a process of elimination by which the wheat is separated from the chaff, and the industry comes into its own and continues to stand for what it is worth.

This outline of conditions will serve to show that the future looks assuring for all legitimate concerns engaged in producing oil. The heartburnings will be reserved for those who went into the business without any good excuse, and they will have nobody to blame but themselves.

THE FASTEST GROWER.



THE WOLF AND THE SCHOLARSHIPS.

The quickest way to get into the rainbow calcium glow, nowadays, seems to be to set up as a reformer. If you have been a gambler, or a boozer, or a rebater, or a frequenter of low resorts, why put on a white robe and silk socks, go into the market-place and shout aloud how exceeding great has been your reforming and how much better are you than your neighbors—and you will have no difficulty in attracting attention or gaining followers.

We notice that a religious organization, the other day, exploited as a great reformer, as a bearer of the gospel message to the sinful, a "reformed faro dealer" (so announced,) who is known to the officers of the law as one of the most dangerous crooks in the West. Why churches and political organizations choose to feature braggarts of this type so often, in lieu of modest citizens who have always led decent and helpful lives, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, we never have been able to understand.

And to what slime of depravity do these humbug "reformers" sometimes descend, gratifying their evil propensities and relying upon an easily deluded public to swallow their offenses with their pretensions!

A few days ago, one of our famous political reformers, whose whole life has been a tangled web of trickery and deceit, vented his unrestrained malice upon the boys and girls who are working for scholarships in The Times contest. The fellow is boiling so furiously with rage at the continued business triumphs of The Times and his own failures, that the aforesaid rage slopped over on these young people, whose only offense is that they are enlisted under The Times banner. That was enough. He went after them like a snarling wolf, his fangs dripping ferocity.

The Times Scholarship Contest is a business proposition. It is business for the boys and girls and business for The Times. It enables the young people to obtain an education along special lines which would not otherwise be open to them. It gives them a chance to become business men or women, artists, singers, musicians, telegraphers, stenographers, as a result of their own successful efforts. It helps them help themselves. The boys and girls are paid commissions for getting subscriptions for The Times, and are sure of this money. In addition the winners secure free scholarships in the leading institutions of Southern California, given by The Times. These contests have been conducted for ten years; and many graduates, as a result of the training they received and the special courses of education which they won, are now holding lucrative positions or are in business for themselves. One girl is earning a salary of $35 a week. Another graduate is at the head of a large business establishment, and getting rich. A singer is getting large rewards. A hundred such instances might be cited.

The Times is now conducting one of the most interesting, effective and altogether delightful and successful of these contests. Its éclat has excited the old red wolf of "reform" to make in his private organ one of his rabid attacks on these boys and girls, forty of them struggling for an education and a summer's financial profit. Who can find words or devise phrases fitting for such a malign and measly disposition, such a coarse and brutal temper, such a contemptible pettiness of mind, such a horrible depravity of heart? The moral monstrosity of it is, we believe, absolutely unique in the annals of human degradation. Its unfairness and wickedness have aroused intense indignation and rallied hundreds of new friends to the aid of the young contestants.

The result is that the boys and girls are making more money and advancing more steadily toward their scholarships; The Times, as a result of this excellent business undertaking—not by any means a purely philanthropic enterprise—is gaining more subscribers; while the old red wolf is suffering more bitterly every day from the consciousness of his own meanness.

CALIFORNIA A PIVOTAL STATE?

No living man can guess with anything like certainty what the political complexion of the next House of Representatives shall be. There will certainly be in that body a smaller majority of real Republicans than in the present Congress. There may not be any more real Democrats in the new Congress than in the old, but there will be either more Democrats or more "insurgents," unless all political signs fail. It is the same thing to real Republican interests whether it is an increase of Democratic members or an increase of "insurgent" members. They will sympathize together, work together, and fight together. Their sympathies will be anti-Republican, their work will be anti-Republican, and their battle will be against everything that is really Republican.

New York is an important State always in politics. The New York Sun has made a tabulation of the votes registered in three years in ten counties, according to the ballots cast for Assemblymen. In 1901 in these interior counties of New York there were cast 58,988 Republican votes. In 1905 there were cast 65,858 such votes, and in 1909, 65,358 of them. In the same "up-State" counties the Democratic vote in the same years was respectively 36,375, 45,999 and 61,182.

Now note that between the years 1901 and 1905 there was a natural increase in the Republican vote and a similar one in the Democratic vote. But between 1905 and 1909, while the Republican vote actually fell off, the Democratic vote jumped by about twice the number it had gained in the previous period of time.

The Sun, thinking that possibly it had selected an exceptional district of New York, went into a different part of the State, but in the interior, and analyzed the vote there in ten counties. In this second group, in 1901, the Republican vote was 51,536, in 1905 61,197, and in 1909 57,123.

In this group again the Democratic vote for the years was, respectively, 32,378, 41,290 and 51,712. Note that between 1901 and 1905 the Republican vote increased by nearly 10,000, while between 1905 and 1909 it fell off more than 4000. On the contrary, the Democratic vote in the first period increased by nearly 9000, or almost as much as the Republican vote, while in the second period it increased by considerably over 10,000, compared with a falling off of 4000 in the Republican.

A change of sentiment is apparently going on in that State in spite of the fact that the Republicans have put in office and kept in office Gov. Hughes, who is a man of exceeding high character and whose ideals are not of the stand-still kind.

It is just as well to face these facts. There is nothing gained by underestimating the strength of the enemy or blinding one's eyes to the tendencies of the time.

It may be exceedingly important this year that California should be among the States that will help to maintain a majority of the Republican party in Congress and that the Republicans we send there neither sympathize, work nor fight with the Democratic enemy. Do you see the point?

"[illegible]BYTERS," remarks the daughter of Commodore Smith, who is sued for breach of promise in [illegible] York, "letters don't mean anything—especially after they have grown [illegible]."

[illegible]'s 'Pile' Again.

[illegible] beg to be excused for ringing in [illegible] topic again; but the case of Alice [illegible]sevelt Longworth and her ciga[illegible] fills me with peevishness and a [illegible] of outrage.

[illegible] can't conceive how these women [illegible]rmers can be so cruel (I do not [illegible]tion the execrable taste' as to make [illegible] young woman a target for na[illegible], yes, world-wide criticism, be[illegible] she smokes cigarettes.

[illegible] the first place, there is no moral [illegible] why she shouldn't smoke ciga[illegible] if she wants to. There is noth[illegible] immoral or unwomanly (whatever [illegible] means) in sucking nasty, disgust[illegible] smoke into one's mouth and blow[illegible] it out. Smoking is an absolutely [illegible], sexless and senseless per[illegible]. If Alice can get any fun [illegible] of it, anything so insipid and [illegible], I say, go to it.

[illegible] the second place, the W.C.T.U. [illegible] haven't yet made such an [illegible] success of their work in [illegible] out the "saloon evil," that they [illegible] afford to be switched off on [illegible] issues.

[illegible] the third place, Mrs. Longworth [illegible] in a very exclusive circle and [illegible] would ever know about her [illegible] smoking were it not for these [illegible] women and meddlesome [illegible]paper writers (like me.) If she [illegible] scandalized and corrupted the in[illegible] young by smoking pills, it is [illegible] W.C.T.U. at whose door lies the [illegible] for the W.C.T.U. made it [illegible]blic matter.

[illegible] the fourth place, it's none of their [illegible], anyhow.

[illegible]n't it so, Nick?

[illegible] Spare Me!

[illegible] P. S. to above paragraph:

[illegible], reformer ladies, don't grab [illegible] pens and write me a lot of [illegible] letters about "saving our [illegible]" from the baleful influence of Mrs. Longworth.

[illegible] young hopeful will learn all [illegible] everything he shouldn't know [illegible] behind the coal shed at recess, [illegible] before he ever hears of such a [illegible] as Mrs. Longworth.

[illegible]how, you just put this in your [illegible] and smoke it (although, of course, [illegible] don't smoke): Any boy who has [illegible] "saved" isn't worth saving.

[illegible] can dodge and wriggle and [illegible] and try to duck around that [illegible] all your life, but you won't get [illegible] from it. The cold, awful fact [illegible] that any boy who has to be [illegible] from temptation isn't worth sav[illegible].

[illegible] Sabe!

[illegible] very old friend of the Lancer has [illegible], anxiously, to inquire if I [illegible] mean what I write in this col[illegible]. Heavens, dear girl, how do I [illegible]?

[illegible] Bright Idea!

[illegible] brilliant mind has given forth [illegible] inspiration in a letter to one of [illegible] papers: That a grocer convicted [illegible] giving short weight should be com[illegible] to display in front of his store [illegible] the period of two weeks, a large [illegible] giving the facts of his offense and [illegible] sentence by the court.

This is a dandy idea. But, in con[illegible], it must be carried to its ul[illegible] and logical conclusion. We [illegible] fairly make a mark of the [illegible] alone.

[illegible] Ladies who have figured in divorce [illegible] should be compelled, un[illegible] this interesting law, to wear a [illegible] sign: "I was the co[illegible]pondent in the Spiggins divorce [illegible]."

[illegible] back Monday morning with a headache in front and a fine, large police sign pinned across their shoulders:

"Pickled last Saturday night; $10 fine."

In the case of some of the enthusiastic automobile dealers of my acquaintance, I fear that the expanse of their anatomies would not be sufficient upon which to hang the list of their infamies.

Yoi, this was a grand idea.

Fashion Note—By Me.

If short-waisted women would wear belts the color of their shirt waists instead of the color of their skirts they would look less like tadpoles.

Bargain-Rate Flattery.

That literary old maid, the New York Independent, has published a naive confession from a fake clairvoyant. In a way, he attempts to justify himself on the ground that his fake messages from the Vasty Deep have comforted the people who came to him.

I never thought of "spook sharps" in just that light before; but I dare say it is true. I would put it on a little different ground, however.

People go to spiritualists, not so much because they want to hear messages from the Other Side, as because they want an audience while they talk about themselves.

It is cheap at $2 to have some one discuss the brighter phases of your character for half an hour. I know this to be true; I have tried it.

Flattery is worth whatever you have to pay for it. Men have sometimes given kingdoms for it. What a cinch when you can get it for $2, laid in thick slices!

I remember an old man who sold papers at the corner of First and Spring street, whose otherwise wretched life was made happy by the assurances of these "mediums" that he had a mysterious ancestor who was a prince, and that he was about to inherit the royal estates. It took all the money the old fellow could earn selling papers to keep the "spooks" enthusiastic over his prospects, but, after all, now, honestly, could he possibly have spent the money better—this poor, forlorn, friendless old man—than upon keeping up this wonderful pipe dream?

THE LANCER.

WHAT'S DOING IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 5.—From the time of the city states of Greece until now the right to vote has been deemed the highest privilege a citizen has a republic. He is not a good citizen if he does not exercise it. Mayor McCarthy would like to votesfor all the candidates at the coming primaries and as he could not do this he tactfully decided not to vote. He registered as a Union Labor man and as that party has no ticket in the field His Honor will have the pleasure of seeing everyone else vote while he stands aloof in his grandeur and cheerfully extends his sympathy to candidates who need it most.

"Big Jim" Gallagher, enjoying the simple life just over the line in British Columbia, extends his sympathy to the three lawyers committed for contempt of court because of his refusal to testify in the graft cases. Long distance sympathy is hardly a recompense for five days in jail. If "Big Jim" will only return everyone will be happy and civic virtue will once more stand on a high plane.

The primrose path of dalliance was gaily trod by Major Arnett F. Perry in the course of which he passed something like $700 worth of checks. After a brief disappearance he has returned contrite and eager to atone for his haughtiness. He'll make good the tainted paper, the men who hold it will not prosecute and the gallant warrior will go to sin no more.

With a splendid prospect of answering bigamy charges, Mrs. Eugenia Francis Claphan, who is alleged to have married six men, mafie a timely exit. Her suit for divorce has been dismissed and her many husbands are rejoicing.

Lawyer Kingenberg is a big man and Capitalist Carlton Wall is a little man but despite the physical disparity the rich man says that he gave the attorney a good beating for using bad language to the mother of Mrs. Wall. If this is true Mr. Wall deserves credit for defending his mother-in-law but Mr. Klingenberg says it is all a fairy tale as he was not beaten and he refrained from demolishing his midget opponent because of his size.

All knockers who maintain that crime is rampant here are respectfully referred to the petition of the police of the southern station for a handball court adjacent to the station. They have so little to do that they need exercise and handball appeals to them as the correct sport.

The California Nurses' Association had a successful convention here. The best methods for the care of the sick were exhaustively discussed. A feature of the meet was an interesting paper by a maiden nurse who thoughtfully declared that race suicide was the greatest evil of the times.

There were no bones broken at the big meeting of the American osteopathic association which has just closed its session here. A great deal was learned about bones and several successful operations were performed. Dr. Henry W. Forbes lectured on "Valvular Diseases of the Heart" in which he said nothing about there being any bones in that important organ despite the common knowledge that many people are hard hearted.

The city officials say that there is not enough money in the public treasury to carry on muchly needed public improvements and they propose to raise the dollar limit. The matter will have to be submitted to the people for a vote and they may see the raise and go one better by deciding that perhaps other officials might find more money in the treasury.

HOOSIERS PLAN HAND-SHAKE.

The Hoosiers have arranged a novelty for their annual picnic, which will be held at Redondo Beach on Saturday, August 13, in the shape of a "grand hand-shake." At noon all those in attendance will form two lines on the sidewalk, in front of the pavilion, casino and plunge. One line will move slowly south, the other north, counter-marching to the starting point. This will enable everybody to "see who's here," and it is expected to prove both amusing and interesting.

LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

[The Times freely publishes the views of correspondents without holding itself responsible for writers' opinions. Be brief, write plainly, state clearly. The space of 250 words, on the average, is sufficient for the point. Well-written letters are liable to be declined merely on account of their length.]

New Ideas in Home-Building.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 5, 1910.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Seeing so much progress in the building line in our city, including many fine residences, permit me to say a few words in regards to the home now built or house. Is it not time there was some one with some new ideas in this line? Here in California we build bungalows with little bits of sash windows, with a front-room window that was never made to open. We boast of our climate and sunshine and then we shut out the refreshing sunshine and air. Why not try to encourage people to build French windows in their houses or twice as large as the old-fashioned sash windows, which are not always getting out of order, but are dangerous? As soon as I am financially able, I intend to build a house with practically all windows so I can get as much of this beautiful California sunshine and air as possible. I don't believe in rearing a boxful of palefaced catarrhal individuals. I also intend that the sleeping-rooms shall always be wide open night and day, winter and summer. Let others try it, it is the finest complexion beautifier that was ever known, and nature's, not artificial. We read of people going to the country to live back to nature, but of course, we can't all live in the country, but we can at least live and sleep close to nature if the house is built as it should be.

"INSIDE" OF THE ROADS.

Report of Committee of Experts Appointed to Investigate Highway Methods Completed.

The report of the committee which was appointed to investigate the Highway Commission and the manner in which the good roads project has been handled, is understood to be completed. It is likely that it will be filed with the Board of Supervisors this week, possibly tomorrow.

The committee has investigated highway matters for several weeks and should have a thorough knowledge of all phases of it. The members have made innumerable trips over the completed roads, those in course of construction and the parts of the great chain which have remained untouched.

The investigators comprise experienced business men and engineers of high standing, who have had practical experience in road building. The Highway Commission has given them any information requested, and they have collected a great mass of figures.

If the report of the Investigating Committee is favorable to the commission and its method of improving thoroughfares, the "kickers" should be silenced. If they are shown to be incompetent, it is not unlikely that some resignations will follow.

The committee was appointed as a result of a lengthy report of the Advisory Committee to the Board of Supervisors. The men who have charge of building the goad roads were declared to be incompetent, and a dozen intimations that the commissioners were not acting for the best interests of the public were made.

The commissioners feel optimistic as to the result of the investigation. They have continually asserted that they were building roads as quickly and as cheaply as possible. They courted a thorough investigation of the great undertaking.

TROUBLE OVER THE GRAVE.

Remains of Wilmington Man Alleged to Have Been Buried Without Permit—Complaints Filed.

The death of Camillo Ygnacio at Wilmington, was the indirect cause of complaints being filed yesterday, against C. A. Lucas, an undertaker, and Sexton Thomas Fitton. They are alleged to have interred the body without having obtained the proper burial permit.

Dr. F. M. Pieronnet, Wilmington's health officer, whose duty it is to pass upon death certificates before bodies can be lowered into their graves, swore to the accusations.

The disagreement over the permit has led to some bitterness between the health officer and the undertaker and sexton. Dr. Pieronnet appeared before Deputy Dist.-Atty. Keetch several days ago and asked that steps be taken to punish the grave-digger and the embalmer.

He declared that no application was made to him for the necessary permission. The attorney advised him to consult with the men he accused and see if they had any explanation to offer. He returned to the District Attorney's office, yesterday, and declared that the sexton had appeared at his office once, but that it was after office hours and he had gone home.

The defendants tell a different story. They declare that they called several times upon the official and could not find him in. They allege that they sought to comply with the law, which commands the burial of bodies in a reasonable time and that they thought they were doing their duty, when the cause of death was not unusual and was not disputed.

The complaint was filed before Justice Steiglitz of San Pedro. The defendants will probably be taken in court tomorrow.

LOCAL WOMEN HONORED.

Named as President and Other Officers of California Auxiliary, Spanish War Veterans.

At the recent meeting of the California Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans, held in Sacramento, Los Angeles was honored by the election of the following women on the board of department officers: President, Mrs. Lois E. Rollins; secretary, Elizabeth Hockduffer; council of administration, Kate Hilton and Ida Mulqueeny. Louise Gordon of Pasadena was chosen inspector.

The new president, Mrs. Rollins, is an estimable woman and has for years been active in the work of the auxiliary. Rollins-Noble Camp, U.S.W.V., of San Bernardino, is named in part after her son, Sergt. Curtis S. Rollins, who lost his life as a member of the Seventh California Regiment, in 1908. With an energetic president at its head, the auxiliary starts the year with much enthusiasm, and is looking for a year of great prosperity.

The work of the organization is among the widows and orphans of the Spanish-American war veterans, who may be in need. They extend aid in every possible way, and have set themselves to the task of securing a pension from the government for all those who suffered the loss of their support in the service of their country.

FOR HARBOR HIGHWAY.

San Pedro and Wilmington Manifest Interest in the Proposition—Cross-Town Lines Also Favored.

The interest that San Pedro and Wilmington people are taking in the proposed great traffic highway was manifested by their sending a strong delegation to the recent meeting of the South Main Street Improvement Association. The committee was composed of Capt. Louis Hanson, F. S. Carry, D. R. Woods, G. W. Van Sickle and E. Opp, who expressed a desire to work in harmony with the association in an endeavor to bring about the improvement, and also urged the improvement of South Main street to connect with the boulevard at the city limits. A committee was appointed to take immediate action. The association also declared in favor of cross-town car lines on East Washington street, East Jefferson street, Vernon avenue and East Fifty-fourth street. A resolution was adopted asking the City Council to grant franchises on these streets to the Los Angeles Railway, at nominal cost.

THE TIMES.

Note: Notwithstanding tremendous extra sales in July, 1909, occasioned by the Elks' Convention, a substantial gain is shown in the average daily circulation of The Times this year over last. Obviously, the showing, under the circumstances, is unusual, and is convincing proof to advertisers that they are getting better value in The Times than in any other Los Angeles paper. In five years, the circulation of this paper has increased 40 per cent, or an average of over 17,000 copies per day.

The following are the sworn statements of the circulation of The Times for July, 1910:

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The City Engineer is investigating a new tract which has no streets and which has remarkable reservations as to private thoroughfares.

The authorship of a mysterious letter, and whence it came, was an enigma before Judge Hutton yesterday in the trial of the divorce action of Rev. William P. Tibbett against Sarah A. Tibbett.

Mrs. Dr. W. R. Price of Long Beach has been cited to appear in Judge Hervey's court tomorrow to testify as to the property of her husband in the action of J. M. Sewell, in which the latter is trying to collect a judgment of $7000.

The District Attorney will oppose the admission to bail of Gertrude Driggs, when her case is disposed of in Judge Davis's court tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Myrtle Del Valle, whose husband, a waiter, forced her into a life of shame, received a suspended sentence in the Police Court yesterday and promised to work as a waitress and lead a good life.

R. S. Saunders, a real estate man, was fined $5 in the Police Court yesterday for violating the traffic ordinance.

STREET STRING IN A KNOT.

CITY ENGINEER INVESTIGATING TRACT RESERVATIONS.

Finds Addition Without Streets on Record and With Only Permission to Municipality to Exercise Its Functions—Traction Franchise Is Reserved.

The City Engineer's office is inves- gating a plat recorded several weeks go of a tract in the southwestern part f the city and in which remarkable servations as to streets are made. he office is familiar with the platting streets as lots which are improved private streets in order to escape e rigid city specifications, but the servations of the tract under investi- ation are such that the advice of the ty Attorney will probably be asked.

As recorded the tract shows no reets at all. This is what aroused the ngineer's office. The lots are of un- ual length. This is explained when e reservations are examined. Strips r street purposes are reserved by e tract owner for the purpose of sup- ying gas, electricity, telephones and ter and "permission" is granted the y to enter them for this purpose. But le is not vested in the city by the orded plat. It is retained by the ct owner and is granted to each lot ner as a perpetual easement for the rposes of a street. The exact lan- ge of the reservations is as follows:

The foregoing strips are reserved private roadways and for the laying rein of sewer, water, gas and elec- conduits and the maintenance of walks and curbs thereon, for the petual and irrevocable use of the ner or owners of each of lots shown on this map to their heirs and assigns appurtenant to each of such lots. right to erect poles for the car- e of light, heat, power and tele- ne wires along the north line of 97 to 125 both inclusive, and the n line of lots 33 to 61 both inclu- , and along the west lines of lots 3, 62 to 67 both inclusive, and lots 127 and 128 is reserved to the own- of each of said lots, their heirs and gns as a perpetual and irrevocable ment appurtenant to each of said together with the perpetual right ntry thereon for the erection and ntenance thereof.

ne right to lay and maintain sew- water, gas and electric conduits for the collection of garbage in of said reserved strips, together the right of entry thereon for purposes, is hereby granted to the of Los Angeles.

here is expressly reserved to the Angeles Trust and Savings Bank right to construct, maintain and ate single or double track railroad and upon any of said reserved s of land, and to erect and main- on said parcels of land, inside the line, poles for the purpose of eying wires or other appliances ssary in the construction and op- on of such railroad, and the right served by the Los Angeles Trust Savings Bank shall at all times be nized as prior and not subject to asements hereby created in favor e owners of said lots. Nothing n shall be construed so as to re- the undersigned, its successors or ns, to obtain any franchise from ounty or municipal corporation to ruct, maintain or operate a rail- on any portion of said parcels of herein reserved as a right of way id purposes. The undersigned re- the right to convey the forego- trips or parcels to the city of Los les subject to the foregoing reser- ns.

question the engineer is to ask e City Attorney is, how is the ever to have street title there the franchise reservation con- in the grant, and perhaps ner the lot owners will ever have blic street for access to their rty. It is also pointed out that s method of platting property, er to avoid the street-improve- ordinances or the franchise reg- ns, is followed numerously, the ay in a few years have many re- which must be denied municipal ges because of privately owned which will be taxable under w. To the engineer's office the ement presents a legal enigma rd for it to solve without as- e of the legal department.

Engineer has procured a printed f the tract as used in offering s on the market. SEEK PERMITS.
ONE HUNDRED APPLICANTS.

A little more worry for the Police Commission because of the new liquor ordinance is found in an even 100 applications that were filed with Secretary McKeag up to closing time last night. To accommodate the bewildered proprietors McKeag has been keeping his office open evenings and still finds that all have not been accommodated.

Of the 100 applicants there are twelve for retail permits, all new. The Commission has but five permits to grant before reaching the maximum—200—and only one of the applicants has asked for a restaurant permit as an alternative. There are twenty-eight applicants for restaurants No. 1, which may sell only in pints or more and twenty-four for No. 2, which may sell not less than one-twentieth of a gallon.

According to the application list there are only twenty social clubs in the city, as that is the number of applicants. All have until Monday night to file with the commission or to be treated as outlaws.

Only one hotel, the Hayward, has asked a permit, which will cost $250 a month. Four wholesalers and eleven wineries and bottling establishments complete the list.

All the applications will be referred to the Chief of Police for investigation.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

EFFIE'S NOTE SEEMS MYSTERY.

HUSBAND DENIES HE EVER SAW IMPASSIONED MISSIVE.

Rivals Poe's Tale, "The Purloined Letter," and Puts in the Shade Passion Poetess's Most Lurid Effusions. Redlands Woman and Pastor Figure in Episode.

That mystic tale, "The Purloined Letter," the creation of that past-master in the art of portraying mysticism, Edgar Allen Poe, had its double in Judge Hutton's court yesterday.

An epistle signed "Effie," supposed to be Mrs. Effie Cole, was introduced by Sarah A. Tibbett of Downey to prove that her husband, Rev. W. P. Tibbett, was untrue to her. The defendant testified, however, that he had never received the missive, although it was addressed to him, and that he had never seen it until introduced in evidence.

Not only that, but it was just a bit hazy as to where the letter was obtained by the wife. She testified that she had been given the letter by her son, Ross, but his evidence was to the effect that he had received it from his sister, who was not present, and the case was continued until some day this week, when an effort will be made to clear up the mystery.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox nor any other passion poetess ever wrote such a lurid letter, and, in order to make the wife jealous, it was addressed, "My own precious husband," and countersigned, "Most lovingly, your wife." No wonder that the wife left her husband, who was then in charge of a congregation in Downey.

The action for divorce was originally brought by Rev. William P. Tibbett against Sarah A., asking for a legal separation on the ground of desertion, but the wife interposed a cross-complaint alleging that he had deserted her. Mrs. Tibbett admitted that she had left the minister, but said she was justified in her actions by the letter that was offered in evidence. Tibbett swore that he had not received any letter from Mrs. Cole, had never written her a line in his life, and had never been guilty of using affectionate language in his conversation with the woman, who is now said to be somewhere in New York State.

Mrs. Tibbett said her husband had become acquainted with Mrs. Cole while he was occupying a pastorate at Redlands, several years since. Mrs. Cole had lost her husband by death, [illegible] had called upon her to offer whatever consolation he was able in her bereavement. That was the beginning of the friendship, according to the evidence of the wife.

When Ross Tibbett was called to the stand to testify to what he knew of the mysterious letter, it was evident that he spoke with much reluctance. The mother evidently expected justification of her fears, by her son, but all the court was able to get out of him was that the letter had been given to him by his sister three years ago. He had no idea where it came from.

It was suggested by counsel for Tibbett that perhaps Mrs. Cole had put up a job to get the clergyman in hot water, but the court took no stock in that brand of argument, and ruled that the case would not be decided until the daughter could be heard from. She resides in Downey. The couple were married in Sandyville, Iowa, in 1873, and they have grown children.

The letter in question bears only the date March 17, and the given name is the same as that of the woman who is believed by the wife to have been on loving terms, to speak of nothing else, with her husband, but the last name is not there. Tibbett swears that he never saw it until produced against him, and he is justified in the statement by the evidence of others in the case. He even denies that he ever knew Mrs. Cole, except as a member of his spiritual flock at Redlands and Downey.

There seems no question but that the document is a "purloined letter," and the court will make another attempt to find out where it has been all of these years and how the wife got hold of it.

THEY'RE AFTER PRICE.
CITE HIS WIFE TO APPEAR.

A citation has been issued from Judge Hervey's court, directed to Mrs. W. R. Price of Long Beach, directing her to appear tomorrow morning and give evidence in the action brought by J. M. Sewell against Dr. W. R. Price, some months ago, that resulted in a heavy judgment being rendered against Price.

The transaction grew out of a now famous deal involving stock of the National Gold Dredging Company, Sewell alleging false pretenses on the part of Price, that resulted in Sewell putting in about $7000 in the stock of the corporation that never got beyond the lurid claims of the prospectus.

After Sewell secured the judgment he did not know what to do with it, as nothing could be found belonging to Dr. Price upon which to levy. It is true the defendant has a swell home in Long Beach, but there is a mortgage of $9000 and a homestead on that, and the other possessions of Price seemed to be in a condition of speculative prospective, so far as being able to realize on them is concerned. Creditors have been trying to locate Dr. Price's money in some of the banks recently, but so far nothing has been realized, although heavy judgments besides the Sewell verdict, are in evidence.

It is in the belief that Mrs. Price might be able to throw some light upon the treasure trove, if it exists, that she has been summoned into court. The transaction covering the fine home of Dr. Price in Long Beach will be involved in the legal quest. Meanwhile Dr. Helm is also wondering what she will do with her judgments secured in the courts of Judges James and Monroe against the smooth defendant.

COUNTER AFFIDAVITS.
IN CASE OF MRS. DRIGGS.

It was expected that the application of Gertrude Driggs to be admitted to bail pending her appeal to the higher courts, would be disposed of in Judge Davis's court yesterday, but on account of the absence of deputy District Attorney W. J. Ford, the matter went over until tomorrow morning. Accompanying the petition in behalf of the woman, are the affidavits of Drs. D. C. Barber, H. C. Brainerd and F. H. Garrett, all declaring that in their opinion Mrs. Driggs would be seriously injured as to her health if compelled to remain in the County Jail until her case is disposed of by the Appellate Court. Dr. Brainerd declares that the woman is suffering from myocarditis with hypertrophy, whatever that is, and that the constant noise caused by the riveting of the new bars being placed in the county jail is a menace to her health. Counter affidavits will be offered by physicians representing the office of the District Attorney, tending to show that Mrs. Driggs will not suffer by reason of her continued confinement. Whether the District Attorney will go beyond that in opposing the bond is not known. It is understood that so far as the Charnock heirs are concerned that they will offer no objection to either the bail or the admission of Mrs. Driggs to probation. With her conviction and the clearing of the memory of "Uncle John Charnock" they will be content.

Mrs. Driggs was admitted to $3500 bail when convicted about a year ago for the first time, but it was not ordered until after the higher court had given her a new trial.

WANTS THE STOCK.
OR ALLEGED VALUE OF SHARES.

An action was begun in the Superior Court yesterday by J. P. Nichols against Ayres for the recovery of 1000 shares of the capital stock of the Trujillo Mining Company, or their alleged value $4000, setting out that he has been made the victim of a fraud.

It is alleged that in May, 1909, Nichols discovered that the Trujillo Mining Company was desirous of making a good financial proposition to a party with from $5000 to $7000 cash to assist in developing a mining enterprise.

The plaintiff being a mining man, says he entered into an agreement with Ayres by which they would together make an investment in the mining company, and the plaintiff was able to propose to Ayres that if he would put up $7000, the company would issue to him 10,000 shares of the capital stock as bonus stock, and would also return the money from the dividends that would be declared.

Nichols alleges that he made an investigation of the property of the company at the request of Ayres, the agreement being that the defendant was to transfer 2500 shares of stock of the company, who accepted the $7000 of Ayers and transferred to him the 10,000 shares as agreed upon. Ayers then transferred 1500 shares to Nichols, but has so far refused to turn over the additional 1000 shares, and it is declared in the petition that he has recently sold the stock, including the 1000 shares that Nichols claims, to a stranger. Judgment for either the shares or $4000, said to be their value is asked by the plaintiff.

The cases of C. I. Lowery, burglary, and Robert N. Trauger, forgery, were postponed until next Saturday. They are all applicants for probation.

INJUNCTION WANTED. Charles A. Warren and other plaintiffs went into court yesterday in a complaint against the Automatic Display Company, et al., asking that the defendants be enjoined from collecting an assessment on the stock of the corporation, and paying a note issued to William H. THE INFERIOR COURTS.

BASE HUSBAND SULKY IN JAIL.

WIFE TO BECOME WAITRESS AND LEAD GOOD LIFE.

Man Who Forces Spouse Into a Shameless Life, and Arrested in Raid, Will Have Uncompromising Witness Against Him—Landlady, Who Fought Officers, Smirks.

Mrs. Myrtle Del Valle, who was arrested Friday night in a raid on the lodging-house at No. 516 1-2 South Main street, and whose story of the wrong she suffered at the hands of her husband, excited the sympathy of Police Captain Lehnhausen, pleaded guilty before Police Judge Rose yesterday. She was given a suspended sentence of $25 fine or twenty-five days in jail.

From letters found in her pocket and statements made by her to Captain Lehnhausen, it seems that Del Valle, a waiter, forced her into a life of shame and that he put her in the house where she was arrested. Del Valle was arrested shortly after the raid.

He sat in the dock, sulkily, through the proceedings, but was not arraigned yesterday. His case was crowded off the calender by the rush of business caused by the numerous arrests of labor pickets and lodging-house keepers, who are delinquent in the payment of their licenses. It is understood that she will appear against her husband. When she left the courtroom, Mrs. Del Valle said she would get a job as a waitress and lead a proper life.

Mrs. W. H. Cornell, the lodging-house keeper at the South-Main street house, was arraigned before Police Judge Rose on three charges. She was released under a cash bail of $210, to plead to all three charges at 11 o'clock next Saturday.

Mrs. Cornell is the woman who, with her daughters, fought the police so fiercely until she was overpowered and handcuffed. At the time of her arrest, she was released under a cash bail of $110. When she appeared in court yesterday morning accompanied by Attorney Byron C. Hanna, of the law office of Davis & Rush, who asked for time to plead, she discovered that she was charged with retailing liquor without a license, failing to keep a proper register in a lodging-house, and keeping a house of ill fame. The bail was fixed by the court at $100 on the first offense, $10 on the second and $100 on the third.

Attorney Hanna objected strenuously to the court raising the ante, as it were, $100 on the original bail, but the magistrate explained that the bail named in each case represented the minimum fine usually assessed in such offenses when proven, and there was no change.

Mrs. Cornell, primped up and in her Sunday best, was nothing like the virago who kicked and clawed at the police when she was arrested. She was in the best of humor and smiled amiably at court and counsel throughout the proceedings.

Leona Blanchard, one of the women caught in Mrs. Cornell's house, when called next considerably dismayed the young attorney for the defense by snapping out a plea of guilty to the charge of vagrancy.

The lawyer was at her side in an instant, however, protesting strenuously

BOSSISM.

LISSNER LOOKS PARKER-LIKE.

WELLBORN'S INTIMATION AT CITY CLUB MEETING.

Little Boss Breaks in With Suggestions About Charter Tinkering and Is Handed a Jolt by Spunky Little Police Commissioner—Commission Plan Doomed.

Boss Lissner, following a discussion of municipal government before the City Club yesterday, advocated the placing of responsibility in the hands of experts rather than putting it in the hands of the people, "who can know nothing about expert subjects." Lissner cited President Hadley of Yale as his authority for the soundness of this doctrine and read from his utterances.

"That," said Charles Wellborn, hotly, whose address started the discussion, "is not a new doctrine. It has been the doctrine of Walter Parker for many years."

With a laugh on Lissner the discussion ended.

Wellborn is a member of the Police Commission and of the Charter Revision Commission. His address answered the question: "Shall Los Angeles have a new charter or shall the present one be amended?" Wellborn's answer, in the concrete, was "amend." It did not suit President Finlayson of the club, who is also a member of the charter tinkering outfit, as he is stanch for the commission form, so successful in Des Moines, Grand Junction, Waco and other metropolises of the country. After both had spoken Lissner burst in with his advice and drew a deep gaff-stroke from Wellborn.

Wellborn's address indicates the attitude of the chosen seven who are revising the charter. He said at the outset, which was last February, the question was decided whether a new charter could be proposed and adopted and if so whether the commission plan should be chosen. He said a majority decided that in the negative and went ahead revising the present monstrosity, but reducing the number of elective officers at any one election to not more than ten. This is the way it is to be done: In Presidential years a Mayor, City Attorney, City Auditor and City Assessor, and four Councilmen and four members of the Board of Education, each of the two latter to serve four years. In "off" years the same is to be repeated with the exception that five Councilmen and three members of the Board of Education are to be chosen. This will give new official blood every two years and reduce the size of the ballot by half, at least, although the list figures more than twelve.

Whenever he spoke of the commission plan he deprecated it. He said it seemed to have no uniformity of method or numbers and that about the only result seemed to have been that better men were chosen. He said they named boards and bureaus and the like just the same. He always spoke of his ideas as those of the "majority" of the tinkering seven.

Finlayson alluded to the policy of amending as providing a "crazyquilt" charter. Incidentally he revealed the fact that the "minority" is composed of himself and Dr. John R. Haynes and that they had been pretty well set down on through the committees named by J. A. Anderson, chief tinkerer. While he is stanch for the commission system he thought the amendment process was progress and education for a real commission government.

It was at this stage that Lissner rose to say what should be done. He proposed that a new charter be prepared and submitted and disputed Wellborn's statement that there is not time enough to do this before the Legislature meets. Lissner thought it could be done and said:

"There will certainly be at least two more elections this year. I don't know what they will be about, but I have no doubt there will be. Let us have two boards of freeholders named and submitted. One board will represent the new charter idea, whether commission form or another and the other board the policy of amending. The action of the voters will determine which course ought to be pursued."

He declared he did not see any reason why a government at which only one man would be elected was not possible. Modestly, he did not suggest the one man.

It was at this point that Wellborn made the Walter Parker comparison that terminated the luncheon with hilarity at the cost of a red face for Lissner.

TOO WARM?

REED MAKES HIS SLIP-OUT.

Metal Strike "Organizer" Is Here no Longer.

San Francisco Employers Are Ready for Fray.

Authorities of Northern City Back Up Unions.

Stewart Reed, right-hand man of Sam Gompers and apostle of discontent, who came down here to show the metal workers how to run the business of their employers, has folded his tents and faded away. The employers still conduct their own affairs.

Reed left last week with the avowed intention of making a flying trip to Portland. Now his dupes are realizing that he has no intention of coming back, and that they will have to get themselves out of the trouble into which he got them as best they can.

It was Reed who ordered the strike of the metal trades and it was Reed who passed out the guff which induced the workmen to sacrifice their good wages for the privilege of being allowed to join the army of the unemployed. Many were the benefits which were to accrue to them from striking, but so far the benefits have proved to be very intangible.

In making his slip-out Reed followed the precedent set by Potzel, the man who organized the brewers' strike and then jumped town when he saw that things were not going as he had expected. In both cases the foolish dupes were left most decidedly in the soup.

The metal trades strike is petering out in the same way that the brewers' strike went to pieces. The iron plants are running with practically full forces and on no building has work been stopped, though a temporary shortage of riveters has delayed some of the construction work.

NORTHERN EMPLOYERS TRIUMPH

That firmness in meeting the exorbitant demands of the lawless labor unions is all that is needed in order to win the victory for law and order, is being learned now by San Francisco employers. On Wednesday morning the striking hodcarriers capitulated unconditionally rather than have non-union men put in their places. This has given San Francisco building contractors renewed hope and at the same time has had a chastening effect upon those agitators who have been trying to "organize" this city.

The determined stand which the San Francisco building contractors have taken is nowhere better illustrated than in the following open letter issued last week by the Masons' and Builders' Association of San Francisco:

"The situation between the striking hodcarriers and their employers at the present time is such that it seems to demand a statement from the employers to the general public in regard to the controversy.

"The causes which have led up to this strike could only be covered in a complete history of the relations between the Building Trades Council and the employing contractors of this city covering the past ten or fifteen years. Raise after raise in wages has been demanded and granted by the contractors. Rules and regulations seriously affecting the employers' interests have been passed by the different unions without the formality of consulting the men most interested.

"An example of this sort of legislation is found in the rule recently adopted by the Cement Workers' Union, which went into effect July 1, 1910. This rule provides that a man must be notified at least four hours in advance of the time which he is to be laid off, also that no man shall be paid for a fraction of a day less than four hours. In plain words it means that if on account of unforeseen accident or circumstances, a gang of men report on a job and are unable to go to work, they must be paid for one-half day's time even if the contractor through no fault of his own is deprived of their services.

OUTPUT LIMITED.

"Another and more pernicious rule is that of the hodcarriers which limits the work of a member of the union to the running of ten barrels of lime per day although a capable man is able to run off upward of fifteen barrels. Members of the union have been fined for the violation of this rule.

"Regulations such as the above, if allowed to go into general practice would have a ruinous effect upon the building business.

"The demand of the hodcarriers and hoisting engineers for an eight-hour day went into effect on Monday, July 25. The employers' associations declined to grant the demand and as a result the hodcarriers and hoisting engineers went out on a strike and the building business of San Francisco is practically at a standstill.

"Employers contend that it is not possible to work bricklayers and plasterers eight hours per day unless the hodcarriers and hoisting engineers precede them at least twenty minutes in the morning and ten minutes at noon, in order to prepare material with which to commence work.

"This contention of the employers was admitted by the hodcarriers and hoisting engineers committees at a conference held before the Building Trades Council shortly before the strike was declared. The most feasible solution suggested at that conference was that the men be paid double time for the additional half hour, which solution was entirely satisfactory to the hodcarriers. Another suggestion dismissed by the employers as impracticable, was that half of the gang start at twenty minutes to eight and ten minutes to one, and quit at four-thirty, the other half working the regular eight hours.

"The question finally resolved itself into a simple demand for an increase in wages. This the employers have flatly refused to grant, owing to the already excessive scale paid to building mechanics in this city.

"Abnormal conditions immediately following the fire caused an abnormal increase in the wages paid to mechanics in all branches of the building business, and although the building industry has long since returned to its normal channel there has been no offer on the part of the labor unions to accept a wage scale consistent with the conditions as they are at present.

DECIDED TO FIGHT.

"The contractors, harassed beyond further endurance and driven into the last ditch, has unanimously decided to fight. In this resolve they are firmly backed up by the material dealers who have themselves suffered in no small degree.

"We ask and think we are entitled to receive the support of all public-spirited citizens in the battle which we are waging for the betterment of conditions in San Francisco. There is no need to repeat here the story of our waning industries. It has been told many times and you know it well. The fate of the metal trades is a matter of hisbuilding industry of San Francisco to suffer the same fate?"

The letter was signed by the members of the Strike Committee of the Masons and Builders' Association, Charles A. Day, J. E. Steere, Thomas W. Butcher, James S. Fennell, Charles Wright, J. J. Connolly, A. H. Bergstrom, E. J. Brandon and M. H. Carrick.

BUILDERS EXCHANGE ACTS.

On July 30 the Builders' Exchange of San Francisco passed the following resolutions:

"Be it resolved, That the Builders' Exchange in special session assembled this thirtieth day of July, 1910, do deplore the tendency on the part of the union men of this city to impose certain onerous conditions upon the men who have been their friends under all circumstances; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Builders' Exchange indorse the stand taken in this strike by the employers and that we request all of the members to use their influence to induce owners, architects and general contractors not to attempt to force subcontractors to complete any contracts they may have under way at the present time, pending a settlement of this trouble in a manner which will give the employer and the material man a living chance in the future."

At the meeting at which the above resolutions were passed, was read a communication from the Board of Public Works threatening to remove all material in front of unfinished buildings from the street and ordering all temporary sidewalks lowered to street level under penalty of having the material removed and the sidewalks lowered by the city at the expense of the contractor.

President S. H. Hunt of the Builders' Exchange in a communication to the members of the exchange pointed out that this threat of the Board of Public Works constituted an alliance of that public body with the labor unions.

DANGEROUS LEGISLATION.

The remarkable stand taken by the San Francisco Board of Public Works is nowhere better illustrated than in the action taken last week when the Holmes Lime Company and the Union Lime Company declined to deliver material to union contractors. The unions made a demand upon the Board of Public Works that the spur track franchises of the offending companies be revoked. The Board of Public Works immediately recommended that such action be taken.

This is just the power which Lissner's spur track franchise would place in the hands of the Council of this city. The proposed ordinance makes the life of a spur track franchise ten years, but allows the Council to revoke it at any time.

IOWA SUMMER OUTING.

Big Bunch Expected to Attend the Gathering at Long Beach Next Saturday.

The annual summer outing of the Iowa Association of Southern California, which every year draws an attendance of from 20,000 to 30,000 former Iowans to its winter picnic in Eastlake Park, will be held at Alamitos Park, Long Beach, on Saturday, August 13. It is hardly to be expected that the summer crowd will be as large as that in the winter, but with about 100,000 "Suckers" to draw from, it is safe to look for one of the largest State gatherings ever held at the beach. Special cars on the Pacific Electric Railway will start from Sixth and Los Angeles streets, running direct to the park, which is one mile east of the Long Beach pier. All persons attending are required to take lunch baskets, and free coffee and lemonade will be furnished to all who wear the official button.

Addresses will be made by Robert J. Burdette, Judge Wilbur, Judge Willis, Judge Houser, Judge Bordwell, and a number of other speakers, and there will be a programme of music and recitations.

FAMOUS ASTHMA REMEDY.

"I was suffering greatly from hay fever, but after taking the first two doses of Ascatco I have been freed from the malady entirely. I have the greatest faith in this drug, and am urging all my friends who are sufferers from hay fever to give it a trial." —Ordo S. Barrett, South Bend, Ind.

Ascatco is the remedy which so effectively combats asthma, bronchitis and all respiratory troubles. Used a preventive of hay fever it should be taken some weeks in advance of the expected attack, enabling the hay fever season to be passed without distress. This is the experience of thousands of former sufferers who now rely upon it for complete immunity. Climatic change is unnecessary if Ascatco is used.

Ascatco may be procured, in two sizes, at 50c and $2, of The Owl Drug Co. and other druggists. Be sure to obtain a free sample which will be sent by mail by the Ascatco Laboratory, 32 West 25th St., New York City, to all who write for it.

HEAD NOISES?

300 Treatments FREE

Your Head Noises can be cured. You do not need to suffer with those wearing—annoying sounds in your head. You have thought at times they would drive you crazy, if they did not stop.

Perhaps your hearing is already failing. Even if it is still good, you have the added burden of knowing that these Head Noises are only the signals of approaching Deafness. The whistle of the locomotive does not indicate any plainer the approach of the train, than Head Noises indicate the approach of Deafness.

You may only have the Noises in the head occasionally, or when you have a cold, but you are in danger all the same. You need immediate treatment.

Deafness Specialist Sproule has studied and perfected a method of treatment which has done wonders for many, many people troubled with Head Noises. This treatment has, in thousands of cases, stopped the sounds and left the head clear as a bell.

GIVEN AWAY

300 of these treatments are being offered Free. If you want one, write today. You may try for yourself the method of this great Specialist. You will see it is scientific, and why it has cured, where others failed.

Deafness Specialist Sproule wants to help all who suffer from these fierce Head Noises. He knows what intense misery those sounds of escaping steam—that bell ringing in the ear—that singing of crickets or insects—the humming—the puffing—the buzzing—the distant roaring—that dull heavy throbbing—means. He therefore offers treatment, FREE, to all who write at once. His treatment has cured thousands upon thousands. In place of those roaring noises, there is a perfect quietness, in which every natural sound is heard quickly and distinctly.

Just sit down and write a post card or letter request asking for a treatment—Free—for Head Noises. Sign your name and address, and send it off NOW. The treatment will come to you by return mail, and will cost you nothing. Don't delay—send NOW. Write DEAFNESS SPECIALIST SPROULE, Clergyman's Son's Testimonial of Tuberculosis Cure.

To neglect a cold, bronchitis, lung trouble or consumption is dangerous. We all know how prone people are to deny they have Consumption. It is a flattering disease, and the sufferer is filled with bright hopes of improvement. Call Consumption by its own dread name—and then—take Eckman's Alterative, because it is effective in Tuberculosis. No one need doubt about it—there is plenty of evidence from live witnesses. Investigate the following:

AMENIA, N. Y., July 9, 1909.

Gentlemen: Prior to February, 1908, I was located in Rochester, N. Y., suffering with LaGrippe, which developed into Tuberculosis. My physician gave me one month to live. I was having terrible night sweats and mid-day chills and losing flesh rapidly, having gone from 155 to 135 pounds. I coughed and raised continually and became so weak that walking a few feet exhausted me. On my return home, my regular physician gave me little encouragement. My father, who is a clergyman, heard of Eckman's Alterative and induced me to take it. The night sweats and chills disappeared, my cough became easier and gradually diminished and in a few days I developed an appetite the first in months. I am now in perfect health, back to 155 lbs. I feel certain that I owe my life to Eckman's Alterative.

(Signed) E. H. COWLES.

Eckman's Alterative is good for all Throat and Lung troubles, and is on sale in Los Angeles by The Owl Drug Stores and other Druggists. It can also be obtained at, or procured by your local Druggists. Ask for Booklet of Cured Cases or write for Evidence to the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa.

summer suitor is sometimes pelled by his financial affairs affairs de coeur. He grows so to the island that he outstays welcome, but his allowance. only recourse is to dive for A charming young athlete who prepare for California, was in this impecunious state. His family was coming over on the evening steamer and he was certain of a rescue later on, but breakfast was an imperative necessity.

"Who is that good-looking diver there?" said a lady on the steamer, and straightway she almost lost her breath; it was her cherished son and heir reduced to diving for his living.

"Well, mother, if you don't want me to dive, you would better give me enough money to stay," was the reply of the designing youth. He stayed.

A few of the summer suitors on the island seem to be very careless with their money. They are always "dropping" it.

"I wonder where they drop it?" said one gentle unsuspecting lady, "not in the ocean, surely, and some one would find it on land."

Her son had "dropped" $20 the evening before, and she could not solve the problem presented. He was more fortunate, however, than another luckless youth who droped $200 in the same careless manner.

Lillian Bell declares that "a man under 35 is good for a two-step." The summer suitor at Avalon is sometimes better at the high jump or pole vault, for he is not a particularly graceful dancer. Sometimes he holds his partner as though she were made of glass and might break if he let her go, and then again he grasps her with a do-or-die determination which imparts a strained expression to his countenance and a Grecian bend to his back.

A few shining exceptions there are who dance beautifully, and perhaps the others have not had the proper chance this season, for the "turkey run" has been barred, the barn dance has died an unnatural death and "Harvard," which is the fad of the moment at Santa Barbara, has not crossed the channel to Catalina Island.

Alas, the summer girl is a capricious creature, she does not like the ladylike suitor, and she remarked the other day, anent a certain glass of fashion and mould of form:

"I don't like to dance with Miss M——; I'd smell of violets for a week."

Now, wasn't that the very refinement of cruelty?

THE NAUTICAL SUITORS.

As there are no airships or automobiles on the island, the greatest asset any summer suitor can possess is a boat. Whenever an enticing breeze springs up, watch-caps are donned, sails hoisted and whole fleets of trim craft scurry forth for an afternoon's cruise. Or perhaps a moonlight trip in swift-skimming motorboats is the most effective method employed by Island suitors.

There are a number of fascinating sailboats anchored in the harbor at present; the "Seabird," belonging to Howard Wright of Pasadena, has a jolly party on board and leaves this afternoon for Ensenada. The "Winsome" has spent the last week in Avalon waters, carrying a merry crew. One of the most popular pleasure boats returned to the bay when the Shirley Wards brought over their motorboat, the "Primerosa." Chandler Ward will take a party to the isthmus in his boat this afternoon. George and Herbert Richardson of Pasadena are delightful hosts, and are often seen cruising around the bay.

Another well-known favorite among sailing craft is the "Vixen," with her crew, including Elliot Bandini, a fascinating young navigator; Charles Yale, one of the ardent tennis devotees, and Julius Schatzel. Elliot Bandidi is also the proud possessor of a genuine Cremona violin, which occupies much of his time, when not sailing or otherwise engaged. Romantic adventures make up the history of this rare instrument, which was brought over by a Spanish officer, who accompanied the early padres to California.

The yawl "Genevive," belonging to Cecil Borden, is resplendent with many colored flags and bright awnings, not to mention her phonograph, installed by one of the music-loving crew. Some of the records played by this phonograph are operatic selections, and have created unusual excitement among fisher folk anchored near by, who have not learned to distinguish between a real siren and a near-Loreli. Louis Tolhurst is the music lover on board the 'Genevive;' other members of the crew are Cecil Borden, Ross Langton, Arnold Praeger and Harry Borden. Musical appreciation is closely allied with nautical feats this season, for a young violinist of true artistic ability is George Nelson, another type of summer suitor, whose music has inspired many soulful romances.

HER SUMMER TROPHY.

To commend himself to the summer girl, the suitor must have some variety of frat pin, or at least, one of those ornamental fobs with the Greek letters, commonly known as a trunk check, which she can confiscate as one of the summer's trophies.

Fred Brainerd, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Brainerd, has one of the coveted pins, and also one of the most desired of trunk checks. He still had them in his possession at the last account. His home high up on the hill toward Sugarloaf, decked with gay lanterns and gayer still with the jollity which reigns within, is headquarters for fraternity brothers and sorority sisters of the Stanford persuasion. He has been entertaining a house party, including Miss Hall and Miss Loftus, David Schindler, Kappa Sigma, from Nevada, and Hudson Hibbard, a Delta Upsilon of California. The party was augmented yesterday by the arrival of Miss Bertha Lull, Linford Lull, Stanford Sigma Nu, and Harvey Mudd, Stanford and Columbia.

A jolly bunch of Kappa Sigmas are having a house party on Clarisso avenue. They are Roland McNeely, Albert Scholl, Bert Ball, Brenton Carr, Wilmot Wickersham, Willis Boyle, of the Colorado School of Mines; Carl Crandall and Allen Crary. Just a short block away on Catalina avenue is a rival house of Zetas, with Louis Cass, Elton Brown, Sydney Ellis, Robert Davis, Donald Cass and Jack and Perry Howard.

California is represented at Catalina at present by a delightful set of Phi Kappa Sigmas. They are L. D. Baker, Gault Ingram Stuart and Dick Ingram of Mexico; Ellis and Howard Taylor; Vernor Lawson, Harry Rogers of tennis fame; Ivan Hall, who was captain of the 'varsity one year at California, and Everett Ball, who is now a member of the athletic team. A fine group of frat brothers from California are the Psi Upsilons, David Brant, Roy Silent, Paul Bulkley and Leo Stahl.

A group of circulating S.A.E.'s from the frat house at California are Herbert Smith of San Francisco; Robert Simpson, Peter Freeman of San Francisco, and Jack Barnett of England. The latter is the son of the British Ambassador to Chile, and he and his brother are receiving their education in America.

So many summer suitors, from so many different colleges! There are J. B. Banning, Jr., a true blue, Yale Boola variety, and young Hancock Banning, Jr., from the historic old Virginia Military Academy. A former V.M.I. cadet is at the Metropole, Dudley Harvey-Elder from Whittier, who is a running mate of Ben Williams of Pasadena while on the island. They are past grand masters of the gentle art of queening.

Among the attractive summer suitors are Jack and Perry Howard from the University of Michigan; Charles Finney of Los Angeles, who has won great athletic distinction at Cornell; Roland Seeley, Arthur Wachter of Boone's; Roy and Harold Bayly of Stanford; "Dutch" Gillelen, Dick Vickery, Ben Ward of the Poly High; Elwood Hamilton, Bud Houser, Beverly Randolph of the Hollywood High School; Walter and Edgar Finney and Jack Vallely of Harvard Military Academy; Paul Maguire, Robert Brant, Willis Boyle and Louis Boyle, Virgil Baker, James Dunham of Belmont; Arnold Salisbury of Throop; Arthur Bobrick, Paul Hammond, Leslie Brigham, Tom Cullin, Don Dawson, Kenyon T. Lee of L. A. High; Alfred Heineman, Andrew Taylor, W. W. Rogers, Lloyd Morrison, A. Werner Lawson.

A number of summer suitors gave a delightful launch party to the isthmus with a dinner and dance, last Tuesday. The hosts were: Roland McNeely, Louis Boyle, Ben Weston, Arthur Wachter, Don Cass, Willis Boyle, Leslie Brigham, Albert Scholl, Alvin Frank, Justice Beach, Edgar Manning, Richard Vickery, Vernon McClurg, Harry Kimbel, Frank Cleary, Brenton Carr, Ben Ward, W. W. Vickery, Bob Huston, Asa Call, Virgil Baker, Jack Halley and Edgar Finney. Their guests were: The Misses Francis Hall, Gladys Lindsay, Ruth Holmes, Florence Baker, Lois Baker, Beatrice Baker, Miss Henry, Marie McClurg, Ella Woods, Gladys McDonald, Ruth Grant, Mabel Hunt, Irma Taggert, Vivian Bassett, Edith Myers, Miss Folks, Gladys Pollard, Tessie Lewis, Ruth Myers, Miss Cooper, Gladys Cahen and Ileen Stephens. The party was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Baird.

A few of the many suitors at the Metropole are: F. C. Catron, H. A. Fitzgerald, Ben Lester, John Cambe, A. C. McElvery, Dr. H. S. Stone, Cliff Reumon, Richard Grey, John Bentz, A. E. Reynolds, F. A. Catron, M. S. Clauncy, O. H. Marven, W. S. Ballard, H. C. Formon, A. B. Seeley, W. M. Lentz, H. L. Beake, J. A. McGinn, I. M. Ransam, E. L. Waggoner, R. L. Perkins and Dr. Allen.

THE City and the Country are bound together by the telephone line.

The farmer and his family use the rural telephone constantly, calling up each other and the market town on all sorts of matters and for all sorts of supplies and information.

City people also find the rural telephone of great advantage. A traveler from his room in the hotel talks with the farm folks miles away. Without the telephone he could not reach them.

The farmer himself may travel far and still talk home over the Long Distance Lines of the Bell System.

OUR CONSULS SAY.

Though Brazil imported $3,700,000 worth of coal in 1909, only $238,000 worth of it was American, though that was $219,000 worth more than in 1908. This increased share, though still far too small, shows that American coal can meet competition in Brazil with Welsh coal on a broad, marked basis. That this has been done in the face of adverse local conditions, particularly in Rio de Janeiro, where most of the coal is sold, shows what can be done there with American coal if America exporters set their minds to it, in spite of the strong British influence (railways, ships, etc.,) prevailing there. Price and quality are the chief factors in the case.

Nursery stock imported into British Columbia is most rigidly inspected for San José scale, etc. About 30,000 trees and plants were recently condemned and burnt up.

Liberia, Africa, is well adapted to sugar cane, which flourishes along the St. Paul, Cavalla, and other rivers, some of it twenty and thirty feet in length, bent over and taking root again. Along the banks of Liberian rivers are thousands of acres of land that could be profitably utilized for sugar cane. During the Civil War Liberia shipped large quantities of brown sugar to the United States. In this, as in other productions, Liberia is a rich land of "lapsed opportunities." Sugar is still made on a small scale.

Higher cost of living has struck Malaysia also. Bacon costs 39 cents a pound; butter, 37 cents; beef, 17 cents; chickens, 19 cents, and so on.

In Germany, permanent offices and salesrooms for American goods, managed by Americans, are a succes, when they carry a full stock of goods.

In spite of the enormous amount of capital invested in the municipally-owned gas, street railway, electric light and water departments of populous Birmingham, Eng., the profit to the city for the year ended March 31, 1910, is only the comparatively trifling sum of $146,000.

Japan's camphor monopoly produces an income of $1,982,966 for year ended March 31, 1910, against a loss of $1,000,000 in 1908.

Grain elevators are needed at the fast-growing port of Karachi, India. Shipments of Indian wheat for the 1909-10 season will reach 35,000,000 bushels, and not an elevator there. It now takes at least five days to load a 5000-ton vessel.

The fine fighting bulls of Mexico are being fed on English walnuts. Loads are taken there in Spanish ships.

There are practically no openings in the Tahiti Islands for Americans, in spite of all the writing up the islands have received. The natives are averse to selling property derived from a long line of ancestors. Only one real estate agency exists in the colony of one hundred islands.

Porto Rico raises less than 200 pounds of coffee per acre, against 800 pounds in Brazil and 800 pounds in Costa Rica, reports Special Agent John M. Turner. The coffee lands of Porto Rico are owned today by wealthy persons or firms. It is no longer the "poor man's crop." In 1909 the crop was about 30,000,000 pounds and it will be less this year. But little of the great hurricane damage of 1899 has been repaired and but few trees planted since. Porto Rico coffee, if properly made, is delicious, but in Porto Rico it is roasted to a burnt black color, giving it a too pronounced coffee flavor, not pleasing to Americans, hence its failure to gain popularity here.

The official Journal of Commerce and Industry in St. Petersburg has established, with the consent of the Russian Minister of Finance, a bureau to supply information concerning the commerce, industries, and agriculture of Russia to all inquiring firms, foreign as well as Russian. The fee for a single inquiry is 3 rubles ($1.54.) Yearly subscribers get a discount. Address the Journal Konnogwardeiski Boulevard, 19, St. Petersburg.

Cotton is to be cultivated in Brazil under American expert supervision. As Brazil has large areas suitable to cotton production, this step is of considerable significance. The Brazilian Minister of Agriculture is pushing it.

Spain's beet-sugar production this season (1909-10) was 84,650 tons, or 11,493 tons less than in 1908-9.

Our consulate at Aleppo, Syria, wants trade journals regarding American agricultural implements and machinery, boots and shoes, coal, copper, cotton, cotton goods, cotton seed products, laces and embroideries (hand-made,) leather, wool and woolen manufactures. Proper foreign postage, please!

WEALTHY OIL BROKER HERE.

James Shields Murphy, who for some years has been a familiar figure in financial circles in this city and San Francisco, in connection with oil investments, has now become a permanent resident of Los Angeles, and has opened a brokerage office in room 425, Citizens' National Bank building. He is a gentleman of pleasing personality, and it is little wonder that he has been a money maker. He began as a newspaper reporter in Boston, then became a publisher, and finally an oil capitalist. He holds large interests in many companies, and is counted wealthy by those who know of his earnings in oil since coming to California eight years ago.

RAILROAD INTERESTS.

The reduction of traffic has recently caused the Pennsylvania Railroad to lay off a number of freight crews. Orders were also given to store twenty-four engines on the middle division and twenty others on the Philadelphia division. In order to further curtail expenses, the big locomotive shops at Reading were ordered to be operated on thirty-two hours a week instead of forty hours. A few months ago the shops were working forty-eight hours.

It is estimated that a hundred millions is involved in the rate reduction recently ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Omaha tunnel, so called, on the Iron Mountain Railroad is being lined with vitrified brick at an expense of $50,000. When this tunnel was bored in 1903 it was left rough, and from time to time accidents have been but narrowly averted on this account. For that reason the company has decided to pave it throughout, bottom, overhead and sides, with the best brick obtainable. This work will be completed before the end of the year.

At the Purdue University Laboratory tests are being made of a spark-arresting device for locomotives with results which attest the efficiency of the new front-end construction and promise success for the invention. In a twenty-minute run under full steam pressure and forced draft not one spark was seen, but later in the smoke box nearly a bushel of cinders as fine as wheat grains was found stored up.

The State Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner of New York has begun action against the New York Central and Delaware and Hudson Railroad companies to recover $2,503,200 in penalties and $151,000 in actual damages growing out of the forest fires in 1908 on State lands in the Adirondacks. It is alleged that the fires were due to negligence in the operation of locomotives. The State is seeking to recover from the Delaware and Hudson Company $1,400,200 in penalties at the rate of $10 a tree destroyed by the fires between Saranac Lake and Lake Placid, in the vicinity of Haystack Mountain and Mackenzie Pond. The actual damages sued for in this case amount to $94,000. Four actions have been begun against the New York Central. Two are for damages in Township 5, Herkimer county, near Beaver Creek, the penalties amounting to $570,000 and the actual damages to $30,000. The other two are for damages in Franklin county, near Turtle and Hoel ponds, the penalties amounting to $523,000 and the actual damage to $27,000.

CHANGE.

TERRELL TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

TEXAN LEAVES DEMOCRATS; JOINS REPUBLICAN CAUSE.

Indications Point to His Nomination by Acclamation — Wealthy Lawyer and Stockman Is an Apt Speaker—Believes He Will Cut Down Usual Majority, at Least.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

AUSTIN (Texas) Aug. 3.—J. O. Terrell of San Antonio will be nominated for Governor of Texas by acclamation by the Republicans at their State convention to be held at Dallas August 9. This is the present programme as mapped out by Cecil A. Lyon, chairman of the Republican State Executive Committee, and other leaders of the party. Mr. Terrell has agreed to accept the nomination if it is tendered him by the convention and to make an active campaign for the office. He is a wealthy and well-known lawyer and stock farmer. He has been a life-long Democrat until recently when he quit that party and joined the Republicans.

J. O. Terrell,
prospective Republican nominee for Governor of Texas.

Mr. Lyon believes that the existing division and dissension that exist in the ranks of the Democratic party in Texas over the prohibition question make it certain that with such a man as Mr. Terrell in the field for Governor the usual big Democratic majority in this State will be greatly reduced. He even claims a chance for Republican success.

It is pointed out that of the 600,000 voters in Texas less than 375,000 Democratic votes were cast in the recent primaries. The Republican leaders expect that thousands of men who participated in the Democratic primaries will vote for the Republican candidate for Governor at the general election.

Mr. Terrell will make the race on an anti-prohibition platform. It is evident at this time that the Prohibitionists will be in control of the State Democratic convention, which meets at Galveston August 10, and that that party will make a platform declaring in favor of submitting a constitutional amendment providing for State-wide and, on his representation, the court allowed Leona to withdraw her plea and set the time to plead for Saturday, as the same time as that of Mrs. Cornell.

RESENTS SCRUTINY.

IT HAPPENED TO GALLAGHER.

H. Gallagher, a young workingman, who, while in his cups, was offended by the scrutiny of a policeman and expressed his displeasure too violently, was sent to jail for fifteen days by Police Judge Rose yesterday morning on a charge of disturbing the peace.

Patrolman McComas, the arresting officer, testified that the defendant slightly resembled the description of a burglar which had been furnished by headquarters. The reeling man saw the officer looking at him and resented the examination in vulgar language, shocking the passersby, and McComas put him in jail.

ALL THE RAGE.

JURY TRIALS CLOG COURT.

The monopolizing of the Police Court calendar by labor pickets, who made it a point to clog the courts with demands for jury trials, was a hard jolt yesterday morning to Harry Kaiser, Emmett Wicks, N. Murray and John Stokes. They were arrested Friday at No. 518 South Spring street, on a charge of "shooting craps."

The defendants had their hearts set on a trial by jury, but when they were arraigned, Police Judge Rose informed them that, if they insisted on a jury trial they must either remain in jail or leave their money tied up until November 22. The prospect was too dismal for the alleged "crap shooters," and they asked for a trial by the court, which was set for Monday at 11 o'clock.

"FIVE AND FIVE."

THAT AND NOTHING MORE.

R. S. Saunders, a real estate man residing at No. 1823 Cambria street, with offices in the Wright-Callender building, was in the Police Court yesterday morning, among several offenders against the traffic ordinance. Saunders was charged with leaving his automobile standing at the curb on Broadway longer than allowed by law and he pleaded guilty.

"Five dollars or five days," said Police Judge Rose.

"Why, Your Honor, can't I get out of that jail sentence?" exclaimed the defendant in dismay. It took quite a bit of explanation on the part of the court to make him understand that the sentence was "five or five," and not "five and five." Saunders finally heaved a deep sigh of relief, said he understood and paid the fine.

A Field of Shrimps.

Edward H. Crump, mayor of Memphis, praised, in a recent address, those charities that send slum children to the country in the hot weather.

"The pale, lean urchins of the slums" said Mayor Crump, "show in quaint ways how strange they are to the country and its charms.

"Thus a little country weeker, on leaving the train at Green Willows, ran ahead of his companions over the meadows. He soon came running back again, shouting excitedly:

"'Hey, fellers, come here, quick! Here's a field of shrimps!'

"The field to which he pointed was planted in wheat."—[Baltimore American.

UNSIGHTLY ERUPTION ON FACE AND HEAD

Afflicted for Months—Burned and Itched—Used Cuticura and He was Cured in Three Weeks—Not Even a Scar Left.

"As a grateful mother, I feel it my duty to thank you for the cure of my little son who was afflicted for about eight months with sores all over his head, back of his neck and nearly all his face. We tried all kinds of remedies without any relief. We even employed a good physician and I am sure he tried his very best to cure my poor suffering little boy. But, alas! instead of getting better he went for the worse. His head was literally covered with scabs and ugly sores and his cries kept us awake throughout the long night. I had to keep his hands in gloves to prevent his scratching his head, as he was doubtless suffering from a burning and itching sensation, and was constantly trying to put his hands where it hurt.

"At last when he was about three years old, we saw an advertisement of Cuticura and I decided to try the virtues of the Cuticura Remedies. I bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. I used them according to directions and I am happy to tell you the little sufferer was cured in less than three weeks. This was over a year ago and now his head is covered with a fine growth of luxuriant hair. Strange to say, all those unsightly sores did not even leave a scar. Mrs. G. O. Couvillon, Plaucheville, La., February 26, 1910."

The suffering which Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have alleviated among skin-tortured, disfigured infants, children and adults have led to their adoption in countless homes as the purest, sweetest and most economical treatment for eczemas, and other itching, burning humors of the skin and scalp. A single set is often sufficient.

Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the civilized world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston. Mailed free, 32-page Cuticura Book, "How to Care for and Treat the Skin and Scalp."

Think This Liquor Question Over Carefully

You can put a barrel together again after all the hoops have fallen off and the staves are gaping, and it will still be a barrel. But if the hoops had been tightened when they first became loose, it would have been a more perfect barrel.

BY A. G. E. MORGAN.

DAILY, men physically and mentally weak, financially and socially ruined through drink, are brought to the Gatlin Institute for treatment. Each one leaves in three days sound in body and mind as far as the results of drinking—alcoholic poisoning—are concerned, with no more craving, desire or nerve-demand for liquor than one who had never tasted it.

After they are cured, these men have to go out into the world and take up life's battle where they left off when they became drink's victim. With a past history of unreliability and failure, they find the struggle to re-establish themselves in the confidence of people worth while very difficult—yet most of them succeed.

Now, drinking has, can have, but one end—mental, physical, moral and financial destruction. The families and friends of drinking men surely realize that fact—a million precedent cases of liquor drinking testify to it. Then, why—O why—wait until the drinker has lost all and is in the gutter before having him cured—before offering him a helping hand—before bringing him to the only place where he can be cured to stay cured—the Gatlin Institute?

At once—NOW—is the time to save him! Tighten up the hoops today.

The Gatlin treatment, in THREE DAYS, will not only cure him of the drink habit, but will renew him in body and mind—will make a new man of him—will bring back that old, kind disposition that he had before he drank. The Gatlin treatment will do all this—and more—in THREE DAYS. If it fails to do so—if it fails to cure him to your entire satisfaction and to his satisfaction—under the legal contract executed in each case, the Gatlin Institute must immediately refund the fee paid and treatment costs nothing. The financial standing of the Gatlin Institute is of the highest and its owners are men of known integrity.

Do not accept the drinker's excuse for not being cured that he is afraid of treatment. Those rumors of "bad after effects" and the like were first put into circulation when the old hypodermic injection methods of treatment were new, and are dying out as that method of treatment becomes more and more obsolete.

With the Gatlin treatment there are no hypodermic injections, no poisonous drugs, no withdrawal of liquor, no pain or suffering, no disagreeable features—so harmless that a child could take it.

The Gatlin Home treatment for those who cannot come to the institute for three days will prove effective if simple directions are followed.

Books of particulars, copies of contracts to cure and other information may be had by calling at, or writing

His retention in the so- led "graft" prosecution was an ac- nt in itself, and if a fat enough had been tendered to him he would e accepted a retainer on the other just as readily as he did on the eckels end of the fight. This is not uess. When he lived in Sacramento trained with the George Clark ma- ne, which was able to exist only ough the grace of the division su- intendent of the Southern Pacific pany, Jack Wright, now dead; and Hiram Johnson was anything but achine man throughout his life e his father,) until now, it is not wn to his old friends and asso- es. He renounced and denounced Espee affiliation when his father defeated for Congress—alleging t the railroad did not come through perly in his father's behalf. He ld have taken a very different nd in State politics this year if e had been any chance for him et a regular nomination.

hen there is Meyer Lissner, your coln-Roosevelt leader down South. ner once lived in Alameda coun- where he ran a jewelry store for umber of years. If he ever voted ept with the "machine" up here it not of record. He served as a hine worker for years, and was for it. As a business man he was a success, nor did he ever achieve minence as a politician. But Ala- is county went on just the same.

nother very prominent man among leaguers is Chester Rowell, who always a "regular" until ten years o ago the Southern Pacific Com- y took away the transportation the Fresno Republican had been he habit of receiving from the rail- . He worked with the regulars in gress, where he was a minute clerk omething, and had to be a regular old his job. Since coming to Cali- ia he has been a candidate for ral offices, but has not been elect- and although the Republican, of ch he was editor, was the leading ublican paper of his part of the e, he was turned down when he ted to go to the national conven- as a delegate. Since that event as been particularly sore, and dat- from that minute the insurgency ue was born in his brain. Rowell the reputation of having been edu- d in Germany, and, under his di- ion German "ground ideas" of tics are being advanced by the ue of which he is chairman.

ALWAYS SEEKING OFFICE.

nother leaguer is Doctor Pardee, Mayor of Oakland and once Gov- r of California. Pardee has an itch office and his paper, the Oakland uirer, edited by a Socialist named nison, tries to help him whenever it but its idea of help consists of ing a weekly letter on politics sup- d to be written by Pardee, and as a mass of abuse of everything and ybody, it is of no help one way or the other. Pardee came into prominence as a politician when as Mayor of Oakland he made a grand-stand play at tearing down the fence around the Southern Pacific wharf at the foot of Broadway, Oakland. The consequence of his action was to bring on a lawsuit that resulted in the title of the Southern Pacific Company being confirmed to most of the water front of the town across the bay. He was a regular again until he lost the nomination for Governor in an open convention, when he went on the war path against the organization. For four years he fought and fought and then, at the last moment, when another convention was about to place in nomination a Governor, Pardee, after giving his word of honor that he would not trade with the Gage forces—which were admittedly "machine"—deliberately made a deal with Gage and the machine by which he was nominated. He was elected, but so rank had been the deal, that he was given only a couple of thousand majority and Lane's friends still claim that Lane was counted out by crooked work in Pardee's behalf. During his whole career as Governor he never did a thing to oppose the Southern Pacific Company or any other corporation, and it is significant that his manager, Charles Spear, whom he appointed a harbor commissioner at this port, tried to put his own brother-in-law in charge of the valuable stationery and candy concession in the State building at the foot of Market street. That manager, by the way, who is still close to Pardee, is now manager for Anderson's campaign in Alameda county. Pardee's present grievance is that he wants to be United States Senator and cannot get the support of the party for the place.

SULKY BUT INSURGENT.

Two other leaguers are Col. Edward A. Forbes of Marysville and Charles M. Belshaw of this city—who also claims a residence in Contra Costa county, where his father once lived. They are sulking in their tents just now, Forbes being in Europe and Belshaw in retirement. Forbes wanted the nomination for Governor once, but it was pointed out to him that a man who could not be elected District Attorney in his own county was hardly likely to be chosen for Governor by the voters of California. He has a string of newspapers, but they are not of sufficient importance to make an impression, as they are chiefly directed toward preventing interference with dredger mining in Oroville and other parts of the North. Forbes is not only a large owner in these dredgers, but is also attorney for Hammon and other millionaires who own the majority of the stock.

Belshaw wants to be Governor, but he was Senator for several terms and was as persistent a logroller as any other experienced man at Sacramento. This brought him into voting on several occasions in a way that he would find it hard to explain from an antirailroad point of view. He was a boss in his own county and ran politics with a high hand until he was overthrown.

OUT OF OFFICE, UNHAPPY.

The other leaguers are not of great importance, one way or the other. Deitrich, the secretary of the league, comes from a family of Democrats that was once wealthy, but the jute business with San Quentin died out when Gov. Gage insisted on open sale of the bags, and since that time there has not been much profit for wholesalers in it. Deitrich now lives near Palo Alto, principally, his associates believe, on the salary received as league secretary. He was a clerk in the State Senate at the last session and occupied a desk there Pillsbury, another member of the committee, was in charge of the publicity for the Republican State Central Committee four years ago, and was well paid for his work. As that committee was admittedly organized, he drew pay from the organization. After his retirement, he blossomed out as a roaster of the regulars. He is insubordinate and is kept in his place only through the dominating influence of Chester Rowell, president of the league.

DEMOCRAT FOR JOHNSON.

The principal support given to the league in the Sacramento Valley comes from the Sacramento Bee, a paper that has showed itself to be Democratic, and, which has for years resorted to vulgar abuse of everybody to whom it is opposed with the idea of terrorizing the opposition. It is a common scold and has a comparatively small following. The other support given to Johnson comes from Edward Leake, a lifelong Democrat, editor of the Woodland Democrat. Leake was a clerk to the late Dr. Mathews when the doctor was Democratic leader in the Assembly, and everybody who knew the doctor knew that he consulted his friend, W. H. Mills of the Southern Pacific, on all matters of importance.

BELL ON THE RAILROADS.

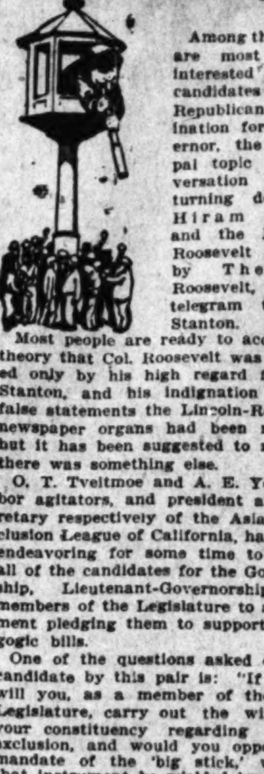
So much for the Lincoln-Roosevelt leaguers. The Democrats are even more amusing to the politicians. Bell, the candidate for Governor on an antirailroad platform, was counsel for a railway from Napa into Lake county, the backers of which were the representatives of a transcontinental line. He is a joiner of all sorts and belongs to so many fraternities that it must keep him poor paying his monthly dues. Max Popper, who came out of retirement in Santa Barbara to "help" Bell win, is the same old Popper who went to Sacramento in 1893 as chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee and forced a railway tax bill through the Legislature that resulted in depriving the State of several millions of dollars and forced some counties to pay back thousands that they had received from the company. He was the business partner of Chris Buckley, once a disreputable boss of this city, in the street-cleaning contract.

THE UNSPEAKABLE LAWLOR.

Judge Lawlor, who is a Democratic candidate for the Supreme bench, is the same Judge Lawlor whose conduct in the Calhoun matter this week has made even Democrats sick of him. He never had a real case in his life and had been admitted to the bar only a few months when Gov. Budd made him a Superior judge of this county. He handled the money for the silverites in the first Bryan campaign in this State, receiving personally the contribution of Charles D. Lane and then deserting the Democrats bodily for the Lane headquarters. He would have nothing to do with his old associates until the campaign was over.

It is a pretty lot of candidates that has been sprung by the Lincoln-Roosevelt League, the Democrats, and the Union Labor element in this city, which is training with the organization forces. Of the two candidates put forward in the name of Union Labor, McGowan for Attorney-General, and Bemiss for Clerk of the Supreme Court, McGowan was defeated for District Attorney in this union-labor ridden town, while Bemiss, selected to run for the Clerk of the Supreme Court that upholds the law, was a union picket in the big lumber strike here, alternating with present Detective Sergeant George McLaughlin in watching the firm of Hooper, Pilcher & Company, and trying to terrorize peaceful workers. Since then he has been a janitor and manager of the Federated Trades Building Association. On the Democratic side, Walter MacArthur, candidate for Congress against Julius Kahn in the Fourth District, is another union labor strike agent and frequent speaker at meetings in aid of strikers and against men who refuse to be coerced into joining the unions.

THE POLITICAL WATCH TOWER



Among those who are most deeply interested in the candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, the principal topic of conversation is the turning down of Hiram Johnson and the Lincoln-Roosevelt League by Theodore Roosevelt, in his telegram to Phil Stanton.

Most people are ready to accept the theory that Col. Roosevelt was actuated only by his high regard for Phil Stanton, and his indignation at the false statements the Lincoln-Roosevelt newspaper organs had been making; but it has been suggested to me that there was something else.

O. T. Tveitmoe and A. E. Yoell, labor agitators, and president and secretary respectively of the Asiatic Exclusion League of California, have been endeavoring for some time to tie up all of the candidates for the Governorship, Lieutenant-Governorship and members of the Legislature to a statement pledging them to support demagogic bills.

One of the questions asked of each candidate by this pair is: "If elected will you, as a member of the State Legislature, carry out the wishes of your constituency regarding Asiatic exclusion, and would you oppose the mandate of the 'big stick,' whether that instrument be wielded by a chief executive, or by representatives of the interests opposed to Asiatic exclusion?"

Theodore Roosevelt was aware of the fact that the same measures that caused him so much trouble at the last session of the Legislature will come up at the coming session, forced by Tveitmoe and Yoell; and it is not unreasonable to presume that when he said that he "appreciated the position of Hiram Johnson in this campaign," he had pictured to himself a situation in the California Legislature at the coming session, when Grove L. Johnson would have presented a measure similar to the one presented at the last session; when the Legislature, with no Phil Stanton to hold it in check, would have passed the obnoxious measure, and Hiram Johnson, as Governor, would be called upon to sign the measure his father had put through!

Theodore Roosevelt may have thought that "blood is thicker than water," as Grove L. Johnson, himself, said to reporters in San Francisco, when they asked him why he attended a meeting where his son Hiram spoke.

Theodore Roosevelt knows the danger to the nation that lurks in the efforts of Tveitmoe and Yoell, backed by Grove L. Johnson and A. M. Drew, in the California Legislature, and therefore he may have turned down Hiram Johnson because of this.

Oh, Mr. T. Woolwine, where is that roar?

At the beginning of the campaign Thomas and the newspapers which support him hinted with dark and direful meaning that Mr. Woolwine intended to "open up" on Capt. Fredericks in a way that would be something dreadful to hear. Tempus has continued to fugit and Tommy hasn't opened up yet. Only a week is left for opening.

The truth is, Fredericks is regarded by both sides as a sure winner now. The unqualified and outspoken support of the Anti-Saloon League has knocked the breath out of the reformers who were searching for some weak place in his record to attack.

Candidates for the county offices on the L.-R. ticket are peeved.

They assert that the Good Government Organization, trailing after Marshal Stimson in his tin pants, has not manifested that glow of enthusiasm which was expected. If they win, then they are a "Lincoln-Roosevelt victory." If they lose, they are to be stoned out of the city gates.

It is alleged that the Lincoln-Roosevelt newspaper organs won't even write the news of their campaigns; they have to write it themselves.

They are ordered around by Lissner like a lot of roustabouts and told that they can do this and can't do that and all the political support they get is the privilege of paying their own campaign expenses.

Reports from every part of Southern California are coming in to the Stanton campaign headquarters every hour of the day, and the tenor of all encouraging to the committee of citizens who are working night and day to nominate Southern California's candidate for the Governship.

From Riverside, yesterday came a telegram from a friend and supporter of Stanton there, who said: "The voters have at last awakened to the importance of a Governor from the South, and are flocking to Stanton's standard by dozens. An impartial canvass made by friends of Mr. Stanton in Redlands, San Bernardino, Colton and Riverside shows great gains. The seed has germinated, and is bearing fruit. Johnson spoke here yesterday to a slim audience, gathered by drum corps. The people remarked that he spoke the same old slander, with its absence of ideas, and the meeting was a frost, and the candidate felt it. I think his forces are crumbling, and going to Stanton. You may consider Anderson eliminated, and Curry not in it. Stanton's record, and the necessity for a Governor from the South is the right slogan."

A Stanton supporter in Rivera, who has conducted a personal canvass of the voters there, sent a complete list to Stanton headquarters yesterday, together with a personal statement from each one, and the expressions of nine-tenths of them were in favor of Stanton. Johnson will get no votes in Rivera, and Curry is not heard of.

The report from Chino was particularly encouraging. The writer says: "You asked me to give you an honest opinion about the situation around Chino. I will say that it is very favorable to Stanton. Every person with whom I have talked, both in Chino and in Ontario, have signified their intention of voting for Mr. Stanton."

The Stanton Citizens' Campaign Committee is receiving reports daily from hundreds of workers throughout the State, and while all of them are not so favorable as those quoted, taken as a whole yesterday reports indicated clearly that Hiram Johnson's candidacy has taken a tremendous slump in all parts of the State, and that Stanton is gaining everywhere. In Southern California Stanton's gains are wonderful. The effect of the hundreds of thousands of circulars sent out by the committee telling the voters why their taxes were raised last year, and how a Governor from the South, and he alone can help the situation. The opinion seems to be almost universal now that Stanton has the best chance of election of any of the candidates.

One of the things that helped to impress the people of the entire State with the fact that Stanton is leading in the race for the Republican nomination for Governor was the significant declaration of Secretary Will Davis, of the Republican State Central Committee. No man in the State has his finger more firmly on the pulse of the people that Secretary Davis, who receives reports on the situation from all sections of the State continually. In San Francisco, on August 2, Secretary Davis said in an interview with one of the papers there:

"It is my belief that Phil Stanton will get away with the nomination for Governor."

Mr. Davis based his prediction on the following, which he gave as his view of the situation, after carefully going over the whole situation: "Los Angeles will give Stanton a huge majority. The people of the city and county feel that to turn down their favorite son would be to cast discredit upon the entire south. A similar feeling extends in a more or less marked degree to the Mexican line. I expect to see Stanton come up to the Tehachepi with something like from 20,000 to 25,000 plurality. If he does that how can he be beaten? Anderson, Curry and Johnson will cut each other up north of the Techachepi, and if they run about even Stanton will be the nominee. That's exactly what I am figuring on."

Secretary Anderson also said that the telegram of Theodore Roosevelt to Stanton, in which he gave the lie to the Johnson papers, that were saying that Pinchot came to California under Roosevelt's direction, knocked holes in Johnson's campaign. The people had been led to believe that by supporting Johnson they were following Roosevelt, and now they know it was all gammon.

Assemblyman James Feeley of Oakland, who was elected on a Lincoln-Roosevelt ticket two years ago, but who is now a strong Stanton supporter, in an interview in one of the San Francisco newspapers, said: "Stanton will poll 25 per cent. of the Republican vote of Alameda county, and from the reports we hear we think he will get 65 per cent. of the vote south of the Tehachepi. Stanton's candidacy is making big gains in the upper Sacramento Valley, and in the San Joaquin. His fight for clean government and the fact that he killed lobbying on the floor of the House, thereby putting the Southern Pacific political machine practically out of business without the aid of Hiram Johnson, is recognized throughout California."

Francis V. Keesling of San Francisco, candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant- has returned to the north, active campaign of Southern nia, during which he visited Riverside, San Bernardino, bara and Orange counties.

The newspapers of Southern nia have for the most part Keesling's candidacy. While in the southern part of the Keesling was present at a the meetings held in the candidacy of Philip A. Governor, and spoke briefly. forceful speaker, and has a personality that wins him port.

This "ignoration" of the become more pointed than I understand that this fact that some of Works's about Col. Roosevelt have the place where they will the most interest.

The noonday meetings Stanton is holding, and little journeys to surrounding are doing his campaign a good. Stanton's name is and the hundreds of working ranchers he has met during week are all converted into tic boosters for the Southern nia candidate.

The slogan, "A vote for boost for Southern California well with all classes. Every izes that one of the things helped to make Southern what it is, is the fact that the people of Southern Cal may be depended upon to gether.

REAT SERVICES OF STANTON TO PEOPLE OF SOUTHLAND.

illiam Mulholland and W. B. Mathews Testify to His Effective Work in Behalf of Owens River Enterprise.

HE GREAT service that Hon. Philip A. Stanton, candidate for the Republican nomination for ernor, has rendered the people of Angeles and Southern California, ing his eight years as a member he Legislature, is amply illustrated he following statement by W. B. hews, attorney for the Los An- s Aqueduct Commission, and Wil- Mulholland, chief engineer of that t project:

he people of Los Angeles are un- lasting obligations to P. A. Stan- candidate for the Republican ination for Governor, for im- ant services in the State Legis- re, in aid of the Owens River educt project. As these services , for the most part, rendered di- ly under our observation, it seems ming on our part, and due to Mr. ton, that we should refer to them this time, when his qualifications the high office he seeks are be- weighed by his fellow citizens.

he success of the aqueduct work been due, in a large measure, to wise and capable management of Board of Public Works. This rd is invested with power formerly cised by the City Council. It was ted by an amendment to the city rter, which was ratified by the rs of the city in 1904. When this ndment was presented to the Leg- ture for approval, it met with op- tion so strong that for several ks it seemed destined to defeat. fight for the amendment was ed in the hands of Mr. Stanton, a member of the Legislature, he, with his usual effectiveness in body, succeeded in having it ap- ved. Other members of the Los eles county delegation supported amendment, but to Mr. Stanton, e than any other Legislator, was the final approval of the measure. gain, in the preparation for un- aking the construction of the educt, it was found that the ex- ng bond act was lacking in features ntial to the successful financing so large a project. Accordingly, ndments were prepared by Messrs. on and Hubbard, expert bond at- neys of New York City, and were ed in the hands of Mr. Stanton carried through the Legislature. this he was likewise successful, much difficulty, due to lack of eciation on the part of members other sections of the State of need of the changes desired.

hen, at the same session of the Legislature, at which the bond act was amended, Mr. Stanton, at the instance of the aqueduct officials, presented a bill, which would allow the city to establish and operate a cement plant in connection with the aqueduct construction. This measure was fought by representatives of private corporations engaged in cement making, and they succeeded in enlisting the support of a sufficient number of members to seriously threaten its passage, but the efforts of Mr. Stanton in behalf of the bill, which were both strenuous and untiring, finally resulted in its adoption.

"It was chiefly due to the skill and persistence of Mr. Stanton, acting at the request of city officials in charge of the aqueduct, that the Legislature enacted by a law granting municipalities rights of way for waterworks over State lands, and the right to take unappropriated waters for municipal uses; also the law prohibiting saloons in the vicinity of public works under construction. Both of these measures were fought through two sessions of the Legislature before finally passed and approved. The latter law has been of incalculable benefit to the city on the aqueduct work, protecting its laboring forces from the demoralizing influences of the desert saloon.

"In the closing hours of the last Legislature, an exigency arose in the affairs of the city involving the office of Mayor, and calculated to throw doubt upon the execution of the aqueduct securities. The existing law made the signature of the Mayor necessary. The situation was wired to Speaker Stanton, and he, in instant response to the need of the city, placed an amendatory bill before the Legislature, procured a two-thirds vote in favor of its consideration, and then brought about the passage of the bill just in time to anticipate the motion of final adjournment.

"On June 24, 1907, the City Council of Los Angeles, in appreciation of the faithful and effective services of the legislative delegation from Los Angeles county, in furtherance of the plans of the city to provide a water supply from the Owens River Valley, adopted the following resolution:

"'Resolved, that the Council of the City of Los Angeles expresses its recognition for the efficient service rendered by said delegation in aid of the Owens River water project and declares its high appreciation thereof and extends thanks therefor to each and all of said members, and especially Hon. P. A. Stanton, who displayed conspicuous skill and energy against opposition encountered in the Assembly to some of the measures herein referred to.'

"In our opinion, this record of faithful and efficient service on the part of Mr. Stanton should not be forgotten or overlooked by the voters of this city in expressing their choice for Governor. The platform on which he is running is safe, sound and wholesome, and is in line with the prevailing sentiments of the people of this State. He undertakes, if elected, to use his best efforts to carry that platform into effect, and the people of this city, in considering the question whether he can be relied on to fulfill his promises, should and doubtless will take into account his splendid work, as a member of the Legislature, in behalf of the Los Angeles aqueduct.

Respectfully,
"W. B. MATHEWS,
"WILLIAM MULHOLLAND.
"August 6, 1910."

It is certain that in the immediate future it will be necessary to secure further original legislation of great importance to enable us to carry on the vast public enterprises in which we are now engaged, and others soon to be inaugurated. It is, therefore, of the utmost importance to all the people of Southern California that Mr. Stanton be nominated and elected the next Governor of the State.

Under no circumstances will Mr. Stanton return to the Legislature. It is possible that a number of new members will be elected who have had little or no experience in legislative matters. But with Mr. Stanton in the Governor's chair, we can rest assured that our vital interests will be properly looked after.

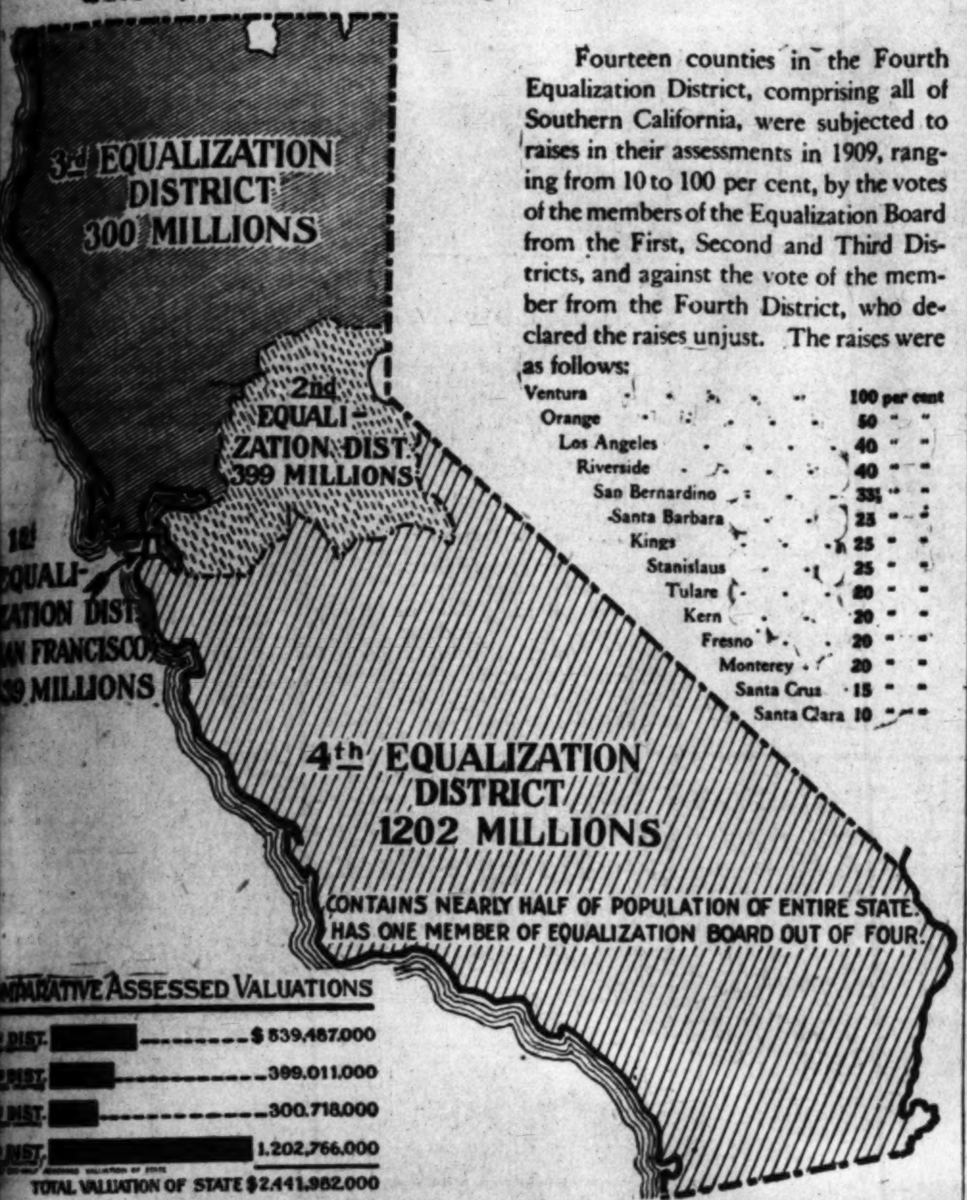
MR. TAXPAYER, WAKE UP! You Are Vitally Interested in THE NEXT GOVERNOR

The figures in red ink on your last tax receipt, considered in connection with the map of California presented below, and the statements herewith, form a strong argument in favor of a Southern California man for Governor



3rd EQUALIZATION DISTRICT 300 MILLIONS
2nd EQUALIZATION DIST. 399 MILLIONS

4th EQUALIZATION DISTRICT 1202 MILLIONS

DIST. 399.011.000

TOTAL VALUATION OF STATE $2.441.982.000

Fourteen counties in the Fourth Equalization District, comprising all of Southern California, were subjected to raises in their assessments in 1909, ranging from 10 to 100 per cent, by the votes of the members of the Equalization Board from the First, Second and Third Districts, and against the vote of the member from the Fourth District, who declared the raises unjust. The raises were as follows:

Ventura	100 per cent
Orange	50 " "
Los Angeles	40 " "
Riverside	40 " "
San Bernardino	33⅓ " "
Santa Barbara	25 " "
Kings	25 " "
Stanislaus	25 " "
Tulare	20 " "
Kern	20 " "
Fresno	20 " "
Monterey	20 " "
Santa Clara	10 " "

[illegible]e above map of California shows clearly the inequality of the present proportions of the four equalization dis[illegible] of California. All of Southern California and nearly all of Central California, is contained within the boun[illegible] of the Fourth Equalization District. As each of the four districts furnishes but one member of the Board [illegible]ization, all of that vast territory comprising the Fourth District, with more than one-half of the area of the [illegible] about one-half of the population and nearly one-half of the assessed wealth, has but one man to represent it, [illegible] the remaining portion of the State has three.

[illegible] unequal and unjust representation resulted last year in a raise in the taxes of every property owner in the [illegible] District, and that this raise, which took $600,000 out of Los Angeles county alone, was unjust and un[illegible] shown by the fact that it was brought about with the votes of the three members of the board of the [illegible] districts and against the protest of the member from Southern California, representing the Fourth District, who not only voted against the raises, but declared them to be unequal and unjust. As a further evidence of the unfairness of this tax raise, the record shows that the State Comptroller (who is ex-officio a member of the board) also voted against it.

The remedy for this gross inequality is a reformation of the equalization districts of the State on a basis that will be just and fair to all. No candidate for Governor except Mr. Stanton has suggested this. He has promised that if elected Governor he will use all of his power, in all legitimate ways, to bring this about, to the end that all taxes may be levied throughout the entire State on an equitable bases. Thus, and thus only, can a repetition of the outrage perpetrated last year be prevented. No doubt at the next session of the Legislature there will be a redistricting of the State for taxation equalization purposes. We of Southern California know that if Mr. Stanton is the Governor we will get what is fair and right in this matter.

Whatever be the new districts established they will stand for a period of ten years—until the next Federal census.

Is this matter not of more importance to you, Mr. Taxpayer of Southern California, than any other that has been presented to you during this campaign?

In fact, where is there any other issue of importance to you other than one that is based on mere sentiment?

Get out your last tax receipt and note the figures in red ink. Read this letter; go over the map carefully, and think the matter out for yourself. Then consider if it will not be better for you to vote for a Southern California man for Governor. Consider your material interests and bring into consideration the pride you must have in the fair land you call "home."

Consider what Philip A. Stanton has already done for you, and all the people who live in Southern California, and ask yourself if you want to trade it for something some man whose interests are in Northern California says he is going to do. Judge by what Mr. Stanton has accomplished in the past whether or not your interests will be in safe hands during the next four years, if you help to elect him.

You cannot afford to vote for any Northern California man for Governor in the present crisis. Vote for Philip A. Stanton and Southern California. There is where your interests lie.

Why Southern California Should Name the Next Governor

ASIDE from the ample fitness of Mr. Stanton for the high office there are most excellent business reasons why every Southern Californian, having the great and growing interests of this part of the State at heart, should not only favor, but should exert every effort to have him nominated and elected. Some of the principal of these reasons follow:

POWER OF THE GOVERNOR.

The Governor is a powerful factor in the government of the State. He has the veto power, and his influence upon legislation is no less important than that of the Legislature itself.

REDISTRICTING THE LEGISLATURE

Within the term of the next Governor the State will be redistricted as to Assembly, Senatorial and Congressional Districts, and (if Stanton is Governor) as to equalization districts upon the basis of the census of 1910.

The importance to Southern California of the form that this redistricting will take cannot be overestimated. Under the constitution of the State there can be but forty Senatorial Districts, with forty Senators, and eighty Assembly Districts, with eighty Assemblymen. Necessarily with the phenomenally rapid growth of Southern California the redistricting should result in a greatly increased representation in the Legislature from this part of the State.

On the basis of the census of 1900 our representation is now numerically weak in the Legislature, we having but nine Senators, from Santa Barbara to the Mexican line, as against 31 north of Tehachapi, and but 16 Assemblymen as against 64 in the north, and in securing a just apportionment of Senators and Assemblymen under the new census we may need the powerful backing of the Governor, who may veto any bill that fails to meet with his ideas of justice.

THE EQUALIZATION DISTRICTS

The matter of redistricting is made even more pointed by a glance at the Equalization Districts as now constituted. Our weakness was illustrated to our cost last year when the assessments of Ventura county were doubled by the Board of Equalization; those of Los Angeles county were increased 40 per cent. and other southern counties were advanced by the State Board of Equalization, as we think, unreasonably. In equity the territory covered by the Fourth district should embrace two districts and two members of the board. With a strong man as Governor, such as we know Mr. Stanton to be, we might anticipate that no redistricting bill that failed to be just to his part of the State would meet his approval, nor would he consent to be, nor would we desire him to be unjust to any other part of the State. All that we desire is exact justice for Southern California, and that can wrong no other section, but he is the only candidate who has declared himself in favor of such a redistricting.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA PARTY SERVICES

The claim of the South to the Republican nomination for Governor this year is strengthened by the fact that the South elected both of the last two Republican nominees for Governor, after they had been defeated so far as the remainder of the State is concerned.

FITNESS OF MR. STANTON

As to Mr. Stanton's personality and fitness for the place, most of us have known "Phil" Stanton from his boyhood. He came here a poor lad without advantages or "pull" of any kind, and what he is today he has made by his own sterling merits and his indomitable will. He has emphatically "made good" in every relation in life in which he has been placed, and we claim that he is the peer of every one of his competitors in their most meritorious characteristics. He has served eight years in the General Assembly, advancing steadily from one position to another until he became chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and then Speaker.

We claim that he is a practical reformer, and not a rainbow chaser, and that his name and influence are connected with all the principal reform measures that have been enacted during the past eight years, including the anti-race track law and the direct primary act.

He is a good financier and publicist. Mr. Stanton is the author of the present California banking law, which is recognized by bankers as one of the best in operation in the United States.

His experience in State affairs is very valuable to the people, being founded on the making of the laws which executive officers, like the Secretary of State, must execute.

SERVICES TO HIS CONSTITUENTS.

Mr. Stanton has "helped out" in so many matters of deep interest to Los Angeles that it would be difficult to enumerate them. Among them, however, may be mentioned the Owens river aqueduct, the consolidation of Los Angeles with Wilmington and San Pedro, the securing of the armory for the National Guard and the establishment of the new Agricultural Park.

THE IMMINENT DANGER TO CALIFORNIA.

[illegible] at the assembly of the Iowa Republicans, Senator Cummins said:

"There is not a Republican anywhere who does not yield to the protective system unreserved and unwavering allegiance. Aldrich, Lodge, Hale, Cannon, Payne and Dalzell may be its sincere and earnest advocates, but in zeal for its reputation and in the eloquence of its defense they cannot surpass Nelson, Clapp, Beveridge, La Follette, Dolliver and Bristow."

August 4 the Chicago News printed telegrams from seventy Republican [illegible] of the Middle West, every one of whom declared that "they will [illegible] Congress to take up a new tariff bill in 1912." The Chicago paper [illegible] Congressman Murdock of Kansas and then Senator Cummins of [illegible] as follows:

"Congressman Murdock of Kansas says that it is now perfectly plain that a new tariff law will be considered by Congress next winter, and that by two years from now a revision of the tariff law will be under consideration by Congress. Congressman Murdock expresses himself as in favor of cutting down the tariff along the line."

"Senator Cummins of Iowa expresses himself as in favor of a new tariff bill in 1912, and says that the next bill will be the nearest to free trade this country has ever had. He cites the duty on wool[illegible] and on citrus fruits as worthy of heavy reductions."

On July 31 the insurgent Republicans in the State of Colorado held a [illegible] at Colorado Springs and made up a declaration of principles which they have mailed to all Republican voters in the State they can reach, asking approval of these sentiments, which are practically their platform. Here [illegible] these Colorado Springs insurgents ask the Republicans of their State [illegible] for:

"The platform condemns Taft for all that he has done to carry out the Roosevelt policies, declares war on Cannonism and demands that the Tariff Commission have full power to revise or amend the Payne law. It asserts that the initiative, referendum and recall, [illegible] ballot, election of Senators by direct vote, the primary and railway regulation are Republican measures and urges all [illegible] legislators to vote for them at the extra session called [illegible] pass them as Democratic measures."

What Senator Cummins said as to the defense of the protective tariff [illegible] by his insurgent colleagues would be perfectly true if put in the [illegible]. When the Dingley tariff act was under consideration in Congress [illegible] the most thoroughgoing advocates of the highest of tariffs was Mr. [illegible]. At different times others of these have also expressed them[illegible] emphatically as in favor of the Dingley tariff bill.

[illegible] it is an incontrovertible proposition that the Payne tariff is a gen[illegible] material reduction from the Dingley tariff. This is shown by a com[illegible] of the two schedules where the act now in force reduces over 600 [illegible] the bill. This is further shown by the Treasury Department's pub[illegible] of the imports during the ten months that the Payne act has been [illegible]. The value of imports free of duty is greater than under any [illegible] tariff bill in recent years. The average duty collected on all imports [illegible], and the average duty collected on dutiable imports also shows a [illegible] per cent. than in any of the previous tariff bills for years past.

Cummins and many other insurgents voted against the Payne bill on its passage, and they are exceedingly hostile to the Republicans who voted [illegible] bill and toward the President for signing it. These insurgent Re[illegible] acting together with their free-trade allies among other things got [illegible] put on the free list. The effects of this removal of duty from hides [illegible] enable foreign shippers to get the original prices for their hides plus [illegible] they used to pay to the United States government, to permit English [illegible]cturers of leather, including shoes, to ship their products into the [illegible] States because of the lower duties on products of leather, and to [illegible] the price of products of leather, including shoes, to all the people of [illegible] States.

[illegible] insurgent Republicans are free-traders at heart, just as much as [illegible] Democrats. Note what Cummins says above, that the tariff [illegible] revised during the existence of the Congress to be chosen next [illegible], that it will be the nearest to a free-trade schedule ever known [illegible] United States, and that among other things citrus fruits are bound [illegible] the knife to the very heart, cutting the protective tariff off these [illegible] products.

[illegible] you let the insurgents, the make-believes, fool you you will have your[illegible] thank for it. We have warned you, rising up early and lying down [illegible] do it. We are not garbling their statements nor putting words into [illegible]. We are quoting exactly what they say for themselves. As [illegible] you elect an insurgent to Congress or choose a State Legislator who [illegible] for Works for United States Senator, you will elect a man who [illegible] with his kind when Congress meets in a bitter, hostile attack [illegible] all the Republicans who voted for the [illegible] for high duties on the products of his constituents (because that is ward politics and the wretched trick of the ward political heeler) he will join with others like himself and with Democrats from all over the country in a general attack upon the protective principle as a whole, and the result will be just as it was in Iowa, where Cummins himself stood for a duty on hides, just as it was in Wisconsin, where La Follette stood for higher duties on wood and its products, because that was ward politics and the trick of the ward heeler; yet the result will be the same as in Iowa, where the duty was taken off of hides, and as in Wisconsin, where the duty was lowered on timber and its products.

If you want to do this thing to California, by all means do it. It won't make a bit of difference to you whether the man who represents you in the United States Senate be an outright Democrat or a bogus Republican, like Works. You will get a revision of the tariff in the next two years; and if you are misrepresented in Washington, the knife will be thrust into the very vitals of the protection you now enjoy upon oranges and lemons, upon raisins, walnuts, olives and upon every other product of the soil of the State and upon every other product of the manufactures of the State.

And you, Mr. Wage-earner, may think that it is nothing to you whether the duty is taken off of oranges and the other California products or not. You are just as much mistaken as the producer who votes for the Lililsized Republican or the Bryanized Democrat. If the duty is lowered on lemons and oranges and other California products and the bars are taken down admitting Sicily lemons, Southern Italian oranges, Spanish raisins and other foreign products, your wages will go down from the handsome level at which they are now toward the low level of labor abroad in just the exact proportion that the protective duty is taken off the products from the cultivation of which or the making of which you earn your living.

To defeat the Lincoln-Roosevelt free-traders, to defeat these insurgent pretenders, to defeat these false Republicans and to choose a body of genuinely Republican lawmakers is vital to the prosperity of California. If a Legislature favorable to Works, or to any candidate sharing his views, be chosen, it will be a disaster to California almost immeasureable.

CAMPAIGN METHODS.

however, involves a curious problem in politics. If Johnson is nominated it is certainly a fact, as shown by his San Francisco experience, that he will be less popular on election day than on primary election day. The more the State hears of him the less they will like him.

What will the voters do on election day to Johnson?

T. BELL.

There is a long-legged young man in Napa who has his own answer to this psychological problem. This is Theodore Bell. Theodore, the Democrat, has but one campaign method—to wait.

He confidently expects that if Johnson is nominated, the real Republicans of the State will turn in disgust from Johnson to support him.

If Stanton is nominated (or any of the others) Bell expects that Johnson's people will support him, through spite. In any case, Bell expects to be elected Governor, and without working for the job.

Reserving the candidate supported by The Times for the last, we come to Phil Stanton.

STANTON.

Stanton has a different way of campaigning from any of the others. To begin with, he is his own campaign manager, and about everything else. Stanton has spent less money and had more fun than any of the other candidates. He has had simply a corking time running for office.

At present when the fight is becoming tense and bitter and the city is full of candidates, Stanton is just beginning to experience the real joy of living. He likes opposition.

When he automobiles into a town for the first time, some of his old friends of Legislature days usually come out to see him.

"I'll take you," says his friend, "around to see some of the men here who are strong for you."

"No; hold on," says Phil. "That's no use. I want to meet the worst enemy I have in town."

"Well, he's the druggist over on the corner; he's a hot Johnson man," says the Stanton booster. "I'll go find some one to introduce you."

"Well—ahem—I am not on very good terms with him myself. We have had some pretty hot arguments about you, Phil, and I guess he's pretty sore."

"Then you are just the one to introduce me," says Stanton. And off they go to beard the irate druggist in his den. In about nine and a half cases out of ten, Stanton turns the enemy into a booster.

Stanton is a typical "man's man." He whops out straight from the shoulder. He doesn't eat dirt to get votes.

"It doesn't matter whether you like me personally or not," he says to the Johnson booster. "If I get to be Governor, it won't matter whom I like or whom I don't. It will be up to me to do my duty. Well it's up to you now. Southern California must have the Governor. We've got to have it. Our business interests demand it. Well I am the one running from Southern California. All the rest are northern men. It's up to you to vote for me."

One of the strongest Stanton boosters in Southern California was, in the beginning, an anti-Stanton man and was turned after a vigorous outspoken talk from the candidate himself.

In one town visited by Stanton on his auto tour, there was one particularly bitter Johnson man. Phil had but a short time to stay and asked to be introduced to his enemy. The man couldn't be found, although they searched high and low. At last it was learned that he was in a Turkish bath establishment.

"We'll go after him," said Stanton. They motored around to the bathhouse, but found that the anti-Stanton man was in the "hot room."

"All right; take me into the hot room," said Stanton.

To the great amusement of the bathhouse people, he plunged into the stifling room whose sole tenant was the Johnson man, his middle tastefully decorated with a towel. Between gasps for breath, Stanton introduced himself.

When he had stated his case, the man held out his dripping hand. "Say, partner," he said, "I was a pretty hot Johnson man, but any man who comes into a joint like this to explain State taxes to me, gets my vote. From now on, you can put me down for a Stanton booster." He has made good his word, and then some.

Stanton began his campaign with a rapid tour of California in an automobile, making speeches and meeting people. This was in the nature of a political vaccination to prevent the vot-[illegible] fevers. He has now returned and is going over some of the ground more carefully.

During these last two weeks of the campaign he is paying particular attention to the city vote, for in Los Angeles the fight will practically be won or lost.

Where Anderson contents himself with going to the private offices of some one of the big wholesalers to solicit his influence, Stanton goes through the establishment from top to bottom, seeing the men as well as the boss.

His hold upon the working men is tremendous. He doesn't give away free cigars and he doesn't give away hot air. He meets these working men as one man comes to another on an important business proposition. His attitude has been appreciated. It is an insult to ask a man for his vote and hand him a cigar.

A Times reprter recently accompanied Stanton on a trip through the wholesale district of Los Angeles. Eighty-five workmen were met. Two or three were Democrats; two or three were non-committal—probably Curry men. Every one of the others were frankly and avowedly for Stanton.

Down in dimly-lighted basements big fellows with leather aprons would wipe off their fists and shake Phil's hand.

"I'm working for you out in my neighborhood," one would say. "My brother, he lives down in San Pedro. He is working for you, too."

Stanton carried with him a lot of circulars showing how Southern California got the worst of it in the last tax levy, and how a Governor from the South is needed at Sacramento to guard our interests. It is a fair, straightforward and convincing document.

In every case, the man to whom this was handed carefully folded it up and put it in his pocket.

The boss up in the office would at first glance at it casually; then dive into it earnestly and at length fold it up and put it in his desk to read. The workmen would put in in their jeans, after glancing at it.

"I want to take that home and study it out, Mr. Stanton," they would say.

This circular, by the way, is simply a corker as a vote getter. The logic of it is unanswerable and the point is seen at a glance.

Stanton is having it printed as an advertisement in all the country papers; the bill posting companies are distributing 250,000 at private residences throughout this State.

Stanton's fairness as a campaigner is a refreshing contrast to Johnson's unfairness.

During this trip through the wholesale districts, one prominent business man confessed that he had just returned from a long trip through Europe and didn't know a thing about this campaign. He asked for information.

No clearer, fairer summary of the events and issues of this campaign has ever been told than the account Stanton gave him. When he referred, during that narrative, to Johnson, it was in handsome terms.

Stanton has fewer iron-bound rules of campaigning than any of the other candidates. Sometimes he makes speeches from his automobile; sometimes he makes a dash down to Sonoratown to address a club of foreign-born voters. Sometimes he goes, by invitation, to a nifty club dinner.

It is all good fun to him. He never gets discouraged; his feet never get cold. Men tell him he is a sure winner, and others tell him he is a sure loser. He takes it all with a grin. As a shrewd, keen politician no other candidate is in his class for a moment.

During the closing days of the campaign, it is a fact that Johnson men will not deny that Stanton is making the most rapid strides of any candidate. The voters are beginning to realize that the reason for having a [illegible]ernor's chair is not sentimental, but a matter of cold, hard business sense and stern necessity.

FOR THE SENATE.

These campaigners and campaign methods here discussed only apply, of course, to the candidates for Governor. There are a raft of other fights quite as interesting in their way.

There are prospects that the campaign of the United States Senator candidates may develop dramatic interest. At present, it resembles a trial heat by E. A. Meserve.

Judge Works is lost somewhere in the back stretch, and Mr. Spalding is a pathetic object with an open check book and a look of bewilderment. He has written to the sporting editors to say he always made good baseballs, etc.

FRUIT GROWERS ONTO HIRAM.

JOHNSON UNPOPULAR IN THE ORANGE DISTRICTS.

Vainly Trying to Explain Away the Ill Results of His Former Visit. San Bernardino "Sun" Sizes Him Up and Points to His Record as a Hireling.

[From the San Bernardino Sun.]

Voters of the southland can have their choice. They have Hiram Johnson as a rambunctious insurgent six weeks ago, in sympathy with the men who voted against giving citrus growers an additional half cent per pound protection on their lemons, or they can have him as he was last night, "an exponent of the protective tariff," declaring that he favors "all the tariff necessary to the orchardists of the south." Or they can take the other horn of the dilemma, and not have him at all, which seems to be about what will happen to Hiram Johnson in Southern California.

It certainly was with the voice of prophecy that The Sun yesterday morning forecasted what had brought the Lincoln-Roosevelt nominee back into this Republican stronghold.

Hiram Johnson has been brought back into Southern California because his former declarations have raised a torrent of disapproval. He is now here to eat the words he uttered six or eight weeks ago, and instead of whooping it up for the Congressional insurgents who voted against California's interests, he is here to promise that he stands for all the protection that Southern California's citrus interests demand.

So said The Sun yesterday morning and last night verified every word of it.

Mr. Johnson said he was still preaching the same doctrine, but he didn't preach it. Instead, he declared for that which, in the very nature of the case, is directly opposite. For when he says he favors all the tariff that the orchardists of the south need, he belies the impassioned pledge he made six weeks before. There is no common ground between insurgency in Congress and high protection on what California produces, and Hiram Johnson merely insults our intelligence when he tries to make it appear that they are counterpart.

Not only so, but when Mr. Johnson declares that newspapers—meaning the Sun, for it was the first to make it—which make this charge, are pliant tools of William H. Herrin, he is merely substituting denunciation in the hope that it may be taken for ar-[illegible] the tariff issue by brandishing the E pee branding iron. He will not qui orchardists, jealous of their interest by asserting that newspapers whic uncovered his attitude wear the rai road collar. It is Hiram Johnso which has been driven against th wall, and not the "machine." It the Lincoln-Roosevelt candidate who now dodging the issue, and not th Sun.

And he dodged by simply climbi over the fence, getting on the popul side of an unpopular question, and d ing it with the ease with which h would sell his services in any cas to the first man who needed them an had the money. Hiram Johnson ha not been a criminal lawyer to no pu pose. Any side of every question look good to him, if it promises to win. H can denounce the railroad with th same vehemence and the same el quence that he summoned to brin about the conviction of Abe Ruef, an he can smooth things over for the o chardists with the same skill wit which he minimized the crimes of Da zell Brown, the San Francisco ban wrecker who stole a million and ruine thousands, whom Hiram Johnson's in fluence or ability was able to get o with a prison term of eighteen month —most of which was passed in Sa Francisco, and who breathes the a of freedom today, although it is les than four years since he wrecked th California Trust Company.

For who is this reformer of reform ers who now makes a railroad hireli of every man who looks facts in th face in this campaign? He helped co vict Abe Ruef, yes, and for a fee $11,000 paid him in the San Francisc graft cases by Rudolph Spreckels.

He defended J. Dalzell Brown, wh was the arch financier in the bigges crash that California has known sinc the McDonalds pulled down the wrec of the Pacific Bank about their head and Hiram Johnson sold his service to help the thief escape his just pu ishment.

When Dr. Burke, an old reprobat charged with the most serious mor sins that can be urged against a ma and the worst professional transgres sions that are laid at the door of physician, was arrested for trying t blow the woman and her child int eternity, who did he send for to de fend him but this same Hiram John son, who accepted the employment?

Yet this same man whose service have been for sale to defend any cri inal with the price, is now seeking th people of the State of California employ him to help rid the State o railroad and machine rule. Hone bright, Mr. Lincoln-Rooseveiter, no that you know something of the re ord, how much do you think it woul cost the Southern Pacific to get hi if it wanted him?

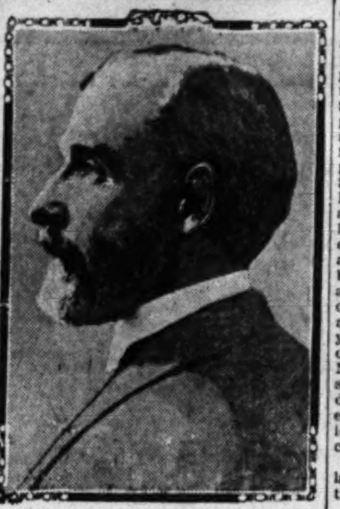
RECLAIMING DRY LANDS.

Government Has Already Spent Sixty-one Millions.

But Every Penny of It Will Be Paid Back in Time.

Frederick H. Newell Talks of Settlers and Farms.



Frederick H. Newell.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—On the second Sunday after Theodore Roosevelt became President of the United States he held a conference at the home of his sister in this city with Frederick Haynes Newell.

For thirteen years Newell had been measuring the rivers and studying the dry lands of the West. Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada, and George Maxwell, a lawyer in Chicago, had persistently and intelligently agitated the question of government water for the government's deserts. Everybody said that something should be done, but bills failed in Congress because of disputes concerning objects and methods. There were figures and details at the historic meeting on Sunday, but the poetry of the mighty project was the argument that turned Roosevelt, the President, into Roosevelt the prophet. Every river was to be a unit standing by itself and was to be developed to the fullest extent in its service to mankind. At its source were trees that must be saved from destruction. Along its course were swamps that should be drained and arid lands that should be irrigated. Ships would carry freight on its surface. Mills could be built along its banks. The waste of roaring waters, caught and held amid the mountains and forests, would be harnessed and used to the best advantage as they gently flowed onward to the Pacific Ocean or the Gulf of Mexico. Floods, then, would be no more. Dry beds would disappear. Sage brush and cacti would give place to wheat fields and orchards. Rattlesnakes would make room for men and women. And thus began the conservation policy of Theodore Roosevelt.

Born at Bradford, Pa., forty-eight years ago, Mr. Newell was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology as a mining engineer at the age of twenty-three. Modest, courteous and resolute, understanding his work from personal investigation in the field, where he has camped out and lived on the trail for weeks at a time, he has the support and respect of members of Congress from the West and of the imaginative and progressive men who have labored for years to reclaim the dry lands that are now being made to blossom like old-fashioned flower gardens.

The father of Mr. Newell was a civil engineer and a contractor. He built a branch of the Erie Railroad from Salamanca, N. Y., to Bradford, taking the track finally because he could not get pay for his work by any other procedure.

BORROWS SCYTHE TO MOW WEEDS.

"The roadbed was overgrown with weeds," Mr. Newell said to me, "and my father, reduced to poverty, had to borrow a scythe with which to cut them down. He mowed the right of way for fifteen miles—the length of the line—and then borrowed an old flat car, on which he placed a borrowed stationary engine, belting it to the axle.

"Having equipped the road with rolling stock, he operated it for some time, being engineer, fireman, brakeman, conductor, and proprietor. The fare from Bradford to Salamanca was 50 cents. Revenue was also obtained from freight. Ultimately the Erie company paid the debt and elected father a member of its board of directors. I early learned the use of tools and to be resourceful in devising ways of meeting unexpected situations. Many a time my father was without a penny in his pocket. Money might be due him, but he couldn't get it. So I was brought up in the school of shifts and expedients, and the lessons I learned in my youth have helped me often in my present business."

"How many irrigation projects have been completed by the government, and how much land has been reclaimed?" I asked Mr. Newell.

"About twenty-five projects in fourteen States are either in operation or under way of construction, and most of them are returning revenue to the government. In all, 900,000 acres of land has been given water, and half of it is in actual use—that is, crops are being grown on ground that was a desert until recently. When all the projects are finished some 3,000,000 acres will have been reclaimed and put to the plow."

"How much money has the government spent?"

MONEY WILL BE RETURNED.

"At the end of this year the total expenditures will amount to $61,391,000, all of which will be returned in course of time by the owners of the land that has been irrigated. I suppose $10,000,000 annually will be appropriated by Congress during the next decade. How much will be spent altogether cannot be estimated. The city of Washington is being built. There is no way of telling the cost of the completed city. Work will go on indefinitely. It will be so, I dare say, with the irrigation undertakings of the national government."

"The money, you say, will come back?"

"Every dollar of it will be repaid, unless the laws are changed. Irrigation projects had engaged the capital and skill of private companies for many years. There were regions, however, where the work to be done was so enormous and costly that it could not be attempted by men acting alone or in companies. An irrigation enterprise must get on a revenue basis quickly or the interest on the bonds, piling up with mathematical certainty, will throw it into bankruptcy.

"Some of us believed in what was known as the national policy of development. Other men thought the public lands or their proceeds should be given to the States, and that the States should work independently. Representative in Congress, and George H. Maxwell, organizer of the National Irrigation Association, were of the opinion that the government should do the work. Many bills were introduced in Congress and conventions were held in different parts of the country to stir and educate public sentiment, but nothing tangible was accomplished until after Mr. Roosevelt became President. He signed the great reclamation act on June 17, 1902.

HOW MONEY IS REPAID.

"As a concrete illustration of the method by which the government obtains the repayment of the money spent for irrigation enterprises, let me tell you what was done in the case of the Salt River project in Arizona. We estimated that 220,000 acres of land could be reclaimed, or, in other words, that water would be provided for that area of dry lands. The cost of the dam, ditches and so on, we learned would amount to $45 an acre. So, following the law, the land owned by the government was given to homesteaders free of cost, but was taxed $4.50 an acre annually for a period of ten years. No interest was charged. Each farm was limited to 160 acres.

"An association of land owners was organized, in which there were 220,000 votes, or one vote to each acre benefited by the project. A man with twenty acres, therefore, had twenty votes; one with 160 acres had 160 votes. Men owning more than 160 acres within the zone of irrigation had to sell the surplus or go without water. Broadly, that is the course followed everywhere. When the ten annual payments have been made the land owners will take over the dam, lake and ditches, and manage and maintain them under the rules approved by the Secretary of the Interior, but the title to the property will remain with the government.

"Further, to illustrate what the government is doing constructively, let me add that the Salt River dam is 280 feet high and 1080 feet long; that the reservoir is 25½ square miles in area; that the canals are 264 miles long in the aggregate; that up to the beginning of this year $7,050,000 had been spent on the enterprise, and that the irrigated lands are now valued at from $100 to $750 an acre."

WATER IS CONSERVED.

"Ordinarily, where does the water came from?" I inquired.

"It falls to the earth during storms high up in the mountains. The water rushes down into the dry beds of the valleys, doing great damage, and, sweeping on, soon leaves the beds as dry as before. We conserve the water by erecting dams in the mountains and by creating artificial lakes that are sometimes twenty-five miles long. Then when crops are growing in the valleys below, we let water through the spillways from time to time as it is needed."

"By what method is the water applied to the lands?"

"Many of the stream beds in the mountains have a fall of ten feet to the mile. Water, consequently, sweeps downward with a roar and soon disappears. We go back, let us say, for ten miles and build a dam across the bed of the stream. Next, we dig a canal from the dam running down the mountain and off into the valley, but we give it a fall of only one foot to the mile, which would make the canal, you see, nine feet higher at a distance of one mile below the dam than is the bed of the old stream. At a distance of ten miles from the dam the canal, therefore, is ninety feet higher than the natural course of the stream. The water, held back by the dam, is let into the main canal and flows to the valley, where smaller canals take it to the farms and the growing crops.

WHAT HE CAN CULTIVATE.

"A man, for example, owns land or obtains government land in a region that is to be irrigated. We investigate and decide on the size of the farm units, taking into consideration the quality of the soil, the distance from railways and so forth. In some places we limit a farm to twenty acres, in other places to forty acres, or to eighty acres or even to 160 acres. The theory is that no man shall have more land than he can cultivate; that he must not plant forty acres and then let forty other acres go to weeds. Well, land having been bought from a private owner or acquired from the government, the settler clears it of sagebrush or cottonwood undergrowth, which is hard pioneer work.

"Usually, five acres are cleared the first year. The ground is leveled by a drag made of logs or an old steel rail from a railroad near at hand. If there are depressions they must be filled. Water will not run up hill, and, therefore, the land must be level, or nearly so. Generally, water is brought to a corner of a farm that may be slightly higher than the rest of the land. From that point it is let in upon the crops, running down the furrows of corn or sugar beets or the little grooves that have been left at the planting of alfalfa seed or wheat. Too much water will ruin a crop. Water, consequently, must be applied intelligently. Beets, when they are gathering sugar from the soil, sun and air, do not require much moisture. In short, agriculture by irrigation demands scientific knowledge, good management, and constant watchfulness. Moreover, with the coming of water comes pests to feed upon and destroy the orchards and the fields."

SOME MONEY IS NEEDED.

"Can a man without money take up a farm and meet with financial success?"

"Now and then some man has prospered, even though he hadn't a cent at the start, but money—say, $2000 in hand—is needed in almost every case. A settler should have two teams of horses and the necessary farm implements, besides the required shelter for himself and his live stock. The first year nothing is obtained from the land—it is being cleared—and the farmer must have bread and meat at dear prices and his horses must be fed. I know of a young wood polisher in Buffalo, N. Y., who arrived at Sidney, Mont., with $50 in his pocket. He went to work, saved his money, and now, at the end of three years, has 160 acres of land under fence, a house, and a barn and nine horses.

"James O'Herin, a tenant farmer in Maine, went to the State of Washington eight years ago with $500. He obtained a homestead in 1905, and sold it for $10,000. The money was invested in a ranch, and O'Herin is now worth about $20,000. Robert McCormick, a Minnesota lumber jack, had 75 cents when he landed at Zillah, Wash., ten years ago. He worked as a laborer for a time, and then took up twenty-five acres of sage brush and planted it in fruit. His yearly income is $2000 net. But all the men I have named were exceptional in their industry, intelligence and pluck.

OTHER SUCCESSFUL ONES.

"The case of J. O. Shadbolt, a dry goods merchant in Minnesota, proves that money will make money almost anywhere in irrigated regions if prudently invested and carefully managed. Four years ago he bought forty-one acres of bearing fruit trees near Wapat, Wash.—apples, peaches, plums, pears and cherries. He paid $18,500 for the land, which was the equivalent of $450 an acre, and spent $2500 for improvements. His friends predicted his ruin financially. In two years he refused $50,000 for his orchards. His profits in three seasons amounted to $40,000. H. M. Gilbert moved from Illinois to Washington twelve years ago and bought twenty acres of fruit land for $1600. Four consecutive crops of winesap apples paid him $1274 an acre each year, and six crops of Elberta peaches brought him $1000 an acre annually. His original investment of $1600 has grown until it has reached a marketable value of $80,000. I give you the names and locations of some of the men who have succeeded," Mr. Newell went on to say, "that the possibility of irrigated lands may be understood by the public and that the economic value of the conservation policy of the government may be appreciated."

"How deep is the soil of the arid lands, and will it ever need to be fertilized?" I asked.

"In some places it is ten feet, in others it is fifty feet, and in still others it is too deep conveniently to measure. But the land, contrary to the universal opinion, must be fertilized, just the same as other land. Men come to me and say that the productivity of the Nile Valley is maintained year after year simply by the overflow of the Nile River. It is true that the Nile spreads a good deal of mud over the surface of the earth, but several of the soil elements are lacking and the farms of the Egyptians are fertilized with manure, dead animals and even with mummies.

SOIL NEEDS INVIGORATING.

"The storm waters of our mountains contain some of the necessary soil chemicals and irrigation helps to enrich the land, but water does not supply the necessary nitrifying elements, either in wet or dry localities. It is customary, therefore, to plant a field in beets, potatoes, corn or wheat for a time and then to sow it to alfalfa, and after harvesting a number of crops to plow the alfalfa under. The roots of alfalfa are rich in niter, and thus the soil is balanced and kept from being impoverished."

"What crops are the most profitable?"

"Alfalfa is the best crop in money, and is used to fatten cattle. Sugar beets bring in a large return, but, of course, a sugar mill must be in the vicinity. Fruits pay handsomely when there are transportation facilities. Wheat isn't largely profitable because the irrigated area of each land owner is limited, and the cost of the crop, all things considered, is high."

"Has the government any farms to give away?"

"Yes, about 600 of them, in the States of Montana, Oregon, South Dakota and Wyoming. The farms vary in size from twenty acres to eighty acres apiece. The water rights will cost the settlers from $30 to $60 an acre, or from $3 to $6 an acre annually for ten years—after that there will be no expense except for maintenance, and it will be little more than nominal."

THE SCOTCH KING OF COCOS ISLANDS.

[London Daily Mail.]

The death occurred at Ventnor yesterday of the King of the Cocos Keeling Islands—George Clunies Ross, who had come to England from his coral island domain in the South Indian Ocean in search of health.

The connection of the Ross family with these remote islands, which are under British protection and are situated about 700 miles from Java, forms a romance of adventure which might have been taken from a chapter by Stevenson. It was in the Cocos Islands that Darwin studied the formation of coral reefs, and at the time of the great naturalist's visit in 1827, the first of the Ross dynasty—June Clunies Roses, a Scotsman and a British naval officer—had made his home there. The second of the house, his son, took up the rule in 1854, and was succeeded by George Clunies Ross (who died yesterday,) at the age of 30, in 1871.

George Clunies Ross was a man preeminent in courage, capacity and tenderness, and his island home, of which he was the proprietor as well as the chief, is a veritable Utopia. Coined money is unknown there, for the parchment notes of George Ross are the sole medium of exchange; crime hardly exists, and, without police or military, perfect order prevails.

WAS A BENEVOLENT DESPOT.

Mr. Ross was the most benevolent of despots, with the power of life and death over 600 or 700 subjects. His domain was an enchanted land, where the rats climb trees and nibble the cocoanuts, where the giant land crab scuttles to and fro brandishing claws of such formidable character that it can "nip through wire netting as easily as can a man with cutting pliers, can tear up tin with ease, and break with its great pincers the wooden bars of a cage that would serve to imprison a large wild animal."

As to the rats—thereby hangs a story. Until a few years ago not a rat was seen in Cocos. But a ship was wrecked off the islands and the rats swam ashore. They increased at such a rate that they became a nuisance and caused a tremendous loss by spoiling the buds of the cocoanut, which are extremely tender, and are spoiled immediately anything touches them. The King of the Cocos Islands, therefore, endeavored to exterminate the rodents, and at last he imported cats. But the cats did not do their work at all. The trouble of catching the rats was apparently too much for them, and finding a delicious shellfish on the shores which they liked much better, they, within a short time, became large and wild, and, in fact, a tremendous nuisance, so much so that now the islanders have not only the trouble of rats, but also of cats.

SHARK-INFESTED COASTS.

One of the most interesting facts about the Cocos Islands is that at their highest point they are only eight feet above sea level. The principal island, taking its name from the proprietors, is known as Ross Island, and contains Malay villages. The waters surrounding the islands abound in sharks six to twelve feet in length. The principal export of the islands is copra, the dried kernel of the cocoanut, and it is from this product that the Ross family have amassed their great wealth.

As a young man George Clunies Ross studied engineering at Glasgow, returning to the islands in 1864. He had alarge family, of whom several sons and daughters were at his bedside when he died. Mr. Ross's grandmother was an English woman, and his mother was a Malay. He himself married a Eurasian. There are no white women in the islands.

MORE WATER PRESSURE.

The Union Hollywood Water Company will resume its high pressure service this morning. This has been interrupted for about ten days by the installation of improvements, which are now completed, and ample pressure is promised to run the washing machines Monday. The large reservoir at Franklin and Maubert streets is full, and pressure is to be uninterrupted. This affects the entire western section of the city toward and including Hollywood.

King and the Queen of Italy represented as perfect types of middle-class household. When to Milan they go to the royal but instead of living in the apartments and bringing a large of servants, they occupy only rooms, have their meals sent in the Ristorante Cova, and order dishes brought up at the same and placed on a sideboard, dismiss their servants, shut and wait upon themselves. DISCIPLINING THE BRAIN.

To Make It Attend to Business It Must Be Taught by Sheer Will.

In the matter of its own special activities the brain is usually undisciplined and unreliable, writes Arnold Bennett in T. P.'s London Weekly. We never know what it will do next. We give it some work to do, say, as we are walking along the street to the office. Perhaps it has to devise some scheme for making £150 suffice for £200, or perhaps it has to plan out the heads of a very important letter. We meet a pretty woman, and away that undisciplined, sagacious brain runs after her, dropping the scheme or the draft letter, and amusing, itself with aspirations or regrets for half an hour, an hour, sometimes a day.

To teach a child obedience you tell it to do something, and you see that that something is done. The same with the brain. Here is the foundation of an efficient life and the antidote for the tendency to make a fool of oneself. It is marvellously simple. Say to your brain: "From 9 o'clock to 9:30 this morning you must dwell without ceasing on a particular topic which I will give you." Now, it doesn't matter what this topic is—the point is to control and invigorate the brain by exercise—but you may just as well give it a useful topic to think over as a futile one. You might give it this: "My brain is my servant. I am not the plaything of my brain." Let it concentrate on these statements for thirty minutes. "What?" you say. "Is this the way to an efficient life? Why, there's nothing in it!" Simple as it may appear, this is the way, and it is the only way. As for there being nothing in it, try it. I guarantee that you will fail to keep your brain concentrated on the given idea for thirty seconds—let alone thirty minutes. You will find your brain conducting itself in a manner which would be comic were it not tragic. Your first experiments will result in disheartening failure, for to exact from the brain, at will and by will, concentration on a given idea for even so short a period as half an hour is an exceedingly difficult feat—and a fatiguing! It needs perseverance. It needs a terrible obstinacy on the part of the will. That brain of yours will be hopping about all over the place, and every time it hops you must bring it back by force to its original position. You must absolutely compel it to ignore every idea except the one which you have selected for its attention. You cannot hope to triumph all at once. But you can hope to triumph. There is no royal road to the control of the brain. There is no patent dodge about it, and no complicated function which a plain person may not comprehend. It is simply a question of: "I will, I will, and I will." The more regularly concentration is practised, the more firmly will the imagination grasp the effects of it, both direct and indirect. After but a few days of honest trying in the exercise which I have indicated, you will perceive its influence. You will grow accustomed to the idea, at first strange in its novelty, of the brain being external to the supreme force which is you, and in subjection to that force. You will, as a not very distant possibility, see yourself in possession of the power to switch your brain on and off in a particular subject as you switch electricity on and off in a particular room. The brain will get used to the straight paths of obedience.

BARNUMESQUE.

CALCIUM ON THE MAJESTIC.

COLOSSAL LIST OF ATTRACTIONS NOW ANNOUNCED.

Shubert-Cort-Morosco Combination Has Full Year in Prospect at Pretty Broadway Playhouse—Long List of Stars and Some Rare Novelties Are Promised.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

This way, Mr. Electrician—turn your "spot" on the Majestic theater, for this year it is a house of colossal possibility.

John Cort, the most interesting single figure in the theatrical world today, prevailed upon Oliver Morosco to build a theater when he—Cort—was a third-rate power in the syndicate. Mr. Morosco prevailed upon Mr. Hamburger, and for his friend, Cort, he at last secured a beautiful house. Cort wasn't himself sure, half the time, just what was going to be seen upon its stage. Its first season shows ran from mediocre to worse. Bigger men laughed at Cort. But he and Morosco were still good friends. Both of them believed that they would come out on top some day.

A few months ago—the landslide.

Cort became the man of the hour in American theatrical affairs. Lesser managers and producers flocked around the Shubert banner, of which Cort had become chief defendant, like a drove of frightened sheep. The very foundations of syndicate security seemed tottering.

And Cort was still Morosco's friend. The Majestic is a very beautiful theater, of just the right size, and of the most modern design.

Morosco, intimate friend of Charles Frohman, David Belasco, Abe Erlanger and others of the dyed-in-the-wool syndicate stripe, thus becomes a Shubert manager.

Odd position, isn't it? To date, he is the only man on record who has succeeded absolutely in transporting aqua on both shoulders without spilling any of it.

The list of Majestic bookings is something overwhelming.

The house will open, early in September, with "The Lottery Man," Rida Johnson Young's farcial newspaper story.

The rest of Morosco's list, here announced for the first time, includes:

"Mme. X."
Margaret Anglin.
Walker Whiteside in "The Melting Pot."
Bertha Kalich.
Wilton Lackaye.
Viola Allen.
Mary Mannering.

Arnold Daly.
Twelve more shows not yet named.

And most interesting of all to music-lovers, Henry W. Savage's production of "The Girl of the Golden West," Puccini opera which is to have its premier at the Metropolitan Operahouse in December, Savage's output shortly to follow.

Now there is of course no certainty on any one show, just as there is no certainty on any bookings that are made far in advance. But if a good percentage of the attractions named come to the Coast, the Shuberts will have an amazing year, truly.

Mr. Morosco will leave tonight, meeting Cort in San Francisco tomorrow worning to perfect the final arrangements.

The "Geisha" circuit—odd name, that—is already in line for the independents between here and San Francisco and the Garrick theater in San Diego has reverted to the open-door policy.

Which means that, whereas it was formerly an exclusive Klaw & Erlanger institution, it is now open to all comers. Manager J. M. Dodge is booking Shubert shows under Morosco direction.

Mr. Morosco is so worried about the Majestic outlook that he is going out into the hills for the next three weeks in an endeavor to forget the misery of having absolutely no attraction for the coming year.

The status of the Auditorium is at present in the air.

On Mr. Behymer's return from New York, where he is now foregathering with the great and the near-great in music and drama, he will probably be able to shed an illumination on this dim problem.

That there will be certain productions of size presented at the Auditorium is a foregone conclusion, for its stage is eminently adapted to big things, such as Lew Fields's huge "Midnight Sons" production, which might or might not be transferred. But the better adaptability of the smaller Majestic audience-chamber, with its sharp accountics, to the "intimate" play none can deny.

And the Auditorium will more than ever be the home of the best in music.

Rare Collection.

When Franz Liszt made his last will and testament he appointed the Princess Caroline Sayn-Wittgenstein his heiress-general, who at her death in turn bequeathed his property to her daughter, the Princess Hohenlohe, now living in Weimar. Of those of his possessions that were in Hungary—they comprise various costly gifts, souvenirs, statuettes, gold and silver goblets, and so forth, valued collectively at $60,000—the master made no disposition. For many years this collection has been carefully guarded in the Budapest National Museum, but now the near relations of Liszt living in Hungary, headed by his grand-nephew, Karl Liszt, a workman in a firearms factory, and Magdalena, Anna, Katharina and Therese Liszt, have laid claim to it, and, according to the Neues Weiner Tagblatt, their rights have received recognition. It is now probable that the Hungarian government will buy the collection outright from these heirs

John Cort
Lee Shubert
Oliver Morosco

Three Men Whose Faces You Should Know, for they are the ones most ivtally concerned in giving to Los Angeles a great new series of shows—if plans do miscarry, the greatest Los Angeles has ever seen. They are Lee Shubert, head of the Independents; Joh Cort, the most interesting figure in the theatrical world today, and the individual who swung to Shubert the balance of power, and Oliver Morosco, who leased the Majestic Theater from Messrs. Hamburger for Cor his friend and ally. This was when Cort was a second-rate power in the syndicate, but it will continue Cort house now that that person has become a great Independent.

THE WEEK.

"JOHN GANTON" AT BELASCO.

WILLIAM YERANCE TO BE SEEN IN FAWCETT PART.

"Little Johnny Jones" Will Continue at the Burbank—Fanny Rice Comes to the Orpheum—New Melodrama at the Grand—Promising Bill at the Los Angeles.

"The Great John Ganton" will have the first stock production at the Belasco Theater Monday night, with William Yerance in the role of John Ganton, and the other members of the organization in the contributing parts. "The Great John Ganton" served George Fawcett for starring purposes last year, and the play was given under Shubert management at the Auditorium.

"The Great John Ganton" was made over for stage purposes by Hartley Manners from Arthur Jerome Eddy's novel, "Ganton & Co.," and the Belasco players have had the benefit of Mr. Eddy's personal assistance in preparing the play for its local production.

John Ganton is the biggest of the Chicago stock yards operators. He is a hard-headed business man, whose belief is that business should and must come before everything else, and even when the happiness of his son is in question, this unyielding, all-conquering businessman puts the dollars and cents column before his eyes and can see nothing else. Ganton is said to be a well-drawn character sketch of one of the biggest meat packers in the world, although Mr. Eddy, the author, confesses that he had no one man in mind when writing the book. Ganton is just typical, perhaps, of the big business men of Chicago, who have been brought up to regard the maxim that "Business is business" as vastly better than the Golden Rule or anything of the sort.

"The Great John Ganton" will afford the Belasco company splendid chances for some effective acting. Mr. Yerance should give a capital performance of the dominating figure of the play, while Mr. Vivian, as Allen Borlan, an honest, upright, young business competitor of Ganton, will have better opportunities for strong work than have come to him for a long time. Charles Ruggles will be seen as Ganton's son; Frank Camp will have the part of "Larry" Delaney, a Board of Trade operator; Mr. Andrews will be seen in the role of a faithful private secretary; Mr. Giblyn will find good opportunities as Jack Wilton, a young married man, whose wife is none too careful of her associates; Florence Oakley will be seen as May Keating; Adele Farrington as her married sister, Mrs. Jack Wilton; Helene Sullivan as Hester Ganton, while Emma Lowry, a newcomer to the Belasco, will make her local stage début in an important part.

Following "The Great John Ganton," the Belasco company will present for the first time in this city Lillian Russell's play of last season, "The Widow's Might," with Florence Oakley in the role created by the "queen of the American stage." Rosina Henley, the new ingenue of the Belasco organization, will make her first appearance in "The Widow's Might."

For the week beginning Monday Matinée, August 8, the Orpheum promises again one of its rounded and well-selected series of acts which of late have proved so satisfying to its capacity houses.

Marion Murray, featured last season as one of the Murray Sisters, is the new headliner, offering, with the support of a company, a diverting farce, "The Prima Donna's Honeymoon." In this, Miss Murray portrays a singer, who, true to the class, has many fads. Her husband is not one who believes in these oddities, and the plot, worked out to a funny conclusion, not only shows a happy denouement, but there is opportunity also for Miss Murray to sing. She is a stunning-looking girl.

Signor Travato comes simply billed as the eccentric violinist, but when it is added that he "stopped the show" three times on his opening in San Francisco, it will be realized that something extraordinary may be expected. Travato is a Filipino, and he handles his violin as a 'cello is ordinarily held. From his very extensive repertoire, he plays as the mood strikes him, in most original fashion, combining rag time and the classics in one selection, strangely blended.

Jolly Fanny Rice, veteran of the musical comedy days, comes with her "Miniature Mimic Stage." This is somewhat remindful of the old Punch and Judy puppet show, though, of course, with modern improvements. Many of her concepts are charming, while others are the broadest travesty.

Aubrey Pringle and George Whiting, two clever entertainers and singers, have a skit which they call "Breaking into Vaudeville."

Remaining another week are Loie Fuller's "Ballet of Light," Will Cressy and Blanche Dayne, in Mr. Cressy's newest, "One Night Only;" Gruber's elephant and trained horses, and the Morati Opera Company in a new arrangement of their "Mardi Gras in Paris," with new songs, while the motion pictures will show the "White Squadron" of the Elks at the recent annual gathering in Detroit.

"Little Johnny Jones," George M. Cohan's musical comedy, will be given another week at the Burbank, beginning with the matinée today. This production has been one of the surprises of the season, as the members of the Burbank company were not suspected of the possession of such talent for this line of entertainment.

Percy Bronson, always popular in Los Angeles, jumped back into favor as Johnny Jones, and his spirited singing and dancing in the "Yankee Doodle Boy" and "Give My Regards to Broadway" numbers kept the show going at top speed. Miss Marjorie Rambeau displayed another unexpected turn of versatility. Her songs were encored half a dozen times each.

Another surprise was Peter Lang, big comedian, who also proved to be a singer of unusual attainments. His "Brown October Ale" is one of the favorite numbers of the show. There is an unusually large chorus, which keeps the lively affair full of color.

Harmon MacGregor, Ethel Von Waldron, Myrtle Vane, Frederick Gilbert, Jack Belgrave, Louise Royce, Willis Marks, David Landau and all the rest of the Burbankers are seen in full force in the jolly combination of music, fun and pretty stage pictures.

"Wife for Wife," John A. Stevens's melodrama of the South, will be the offering of the Girton Stock Company for one week starting with the regular matinee on Sunday.

Its story is of the days when slavery was at its height in the South, and deals partly with the question of slavery, although a feud between two prominent Southern families also plays an important part in its plot. Human interest is the one dominating feature of "Wife for Wife."

There is plenty of comedy throughout the play, and the love interest is by no means forgotten. It is replete with exciting dramatic situations, and every act has a well-drawn climax of a sensational nature. One of the particularly thrilling scenes of "Wife for Wife" is the big fight with knives in the third act. This will be given in a most realistic manner, and not on the order of the usual "stage" fight.

Mss Iva Shepard, who made her first appearance as leading woman last week, and whose success in the role of Belle Diamond was instant, will this week have an even better opportunity to display her ability as an emotional actress. She will be seen in the part of Edith Walton, while George Webb should find chances for good work in the role of Edward Walton, a Southern gentleman of the antebellum days.

Chester Stevens, Gertrude Claire, Frank McQuarrie, Margaret France, Joseph De Grasse, J. Lindley Phipps and the other members of the company have all been well cast, and the scenic production promises to reveal one of the most picturesque series of stage settings that has yet been seen on the Grand stage.

Following "Wife for Wife," Manager Girton will offer the spectacular melodrama, "The Fatal Scar."

Willard and Bond, "the men behind the fun," will head the new Los Angeles Theater bill opening with the usual matinee on Monday. The coming programme promises to be even better than that of last week.

Willard and Bond will offer a funny sketch called "The Battle of Bunco Hill." This act comes with the reputation of being one of the most genuine funmakers that has ever traveled this circuit. Another exceptionally entertaining act on the new bill will be the Moneta Five, who, with their musical offering, have thoroughly established themselves. They are skilled instrumentalists and all possess singing voices which they combine in their lyric act, "An Evening at Home."

Neil McKinley, "artistic syncopist" of song, will also appear on the new bill.

Harry Springold and Marie Girard will also offer the protean military incident, "The Revielle." This is a story of an incident which took place in a Virginia town during the Civil War. In this Mr. Springold plays three distinct characters, remarkable for the rapidity of change as well as for keen differentiation from one another.

Others on the new bill will be the smile-extractors Fitzgerald and Odell, with their new drolleries, and William Bovis and Flo Darley, a duo of foreign musical comedy stars, in their diverting oddity "Married," featuring Miss Darley's impersonation of various types of women. Exclusive of these six new acts will be the new comedy motion pictures.

The widow of Ambroise Thomas, the composer of "Mignon," "Hamlet," and several other operas, died in New York recently.

To the Puccini-saturated New Yorker, for whom the music world is bounded by the four walls of an opera-house, it seems almost incredible that the city which plumes itself on being the music center of the world has not yet heard "La Boheme." This aching void in Berlin's education in the Italians is to be ministered to next season, however, by Hans Gregor. Maria Labia as Mimi, Director Gregor predicts, will be as potent a drawing card for the Komische Oper as she was as Tosca, and perhaps even rival her German popularity as Marta in "Tiefland." Otto Marak, the Bohemian tenor, will be the Berlin Rudolph. Later in the winter Miss Labia will create the principal role in Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari's "The Madonna's Jewels," and she may be the Psyche in Maurice Levy's opera named after that character, which is also to be introduced. First of the season's novelties will be Wendlandt's "Das Vergessene Ich," and after "La Boheme" is launched, Gounod's comic opera, "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," based on Moliere's farce of the same name, will be given for the first time in Germany.

The Stalled Motor.

A small, quiet, but sorrowful if not disgusted looking man sat by the side of a medium-sized automobile that was drawn out of the road as a large touring car came along driven by a man with an interrogatory aspect. The man in the touring car had seen that auto every time he passed that day, so he slowed up and leaned over:

"How long have you been here?"

"Several hours."

"Can't you find out what the matter is?"

"No."

"Inlet valve all right?"

"Yes."

"Trouble with spark plug?"

"Think not."

"How are your batteries?"

"O. K."

"Haven't got a short circuit, have you?"

"Oh, no."

"How's your commutator?"

"Great."

"Perhaps your worm gear is clogged."

"No; all clear."

"Got any gasoline in your tank?"

"Plenty."

"How about your circulation? Cylinder isn't bound, is it?"

"No, sir."

"Tires seem all right."

"Never better."

"Well, maybe your vibrator isn't adjusted."

"That's all right."

"Have you looked at your carburetor?"

"Yes."

"How about the cam shaft?"

"Grand."

"Have you tightened your connecting rods, examined your clutches and gone over the differentials?"

"Yes, yes."

Then the man in the touring car paused a moment and then, looking at the stranger by the roadside, said at last: "What's the matter with that machine of yours?"

"There isn't anything the matter with this machine; but since noon my wife has been in that house over there kissing her sister's first baby good-by. When she gets through, if you are not more than a thousand miles away and will leave your address, I will telephone or cable you the glad news."—[New York Press.

YAW CONCERT AT LONG BEACH.

THURSDAY EVENING AFFAIR UNDER EBELL AUSPICES.

Henry Ohlmeyer's Coronado Programmes Reflect Caliber of Band and Diversity of Director's Taste. Good Bill Promised at Levy's for the Week—General News.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Ellen Beach Yaw will be heard in recital at Long Beach Thursday evening, under the auspices of the Ebell Club—which will devote the net proceeds of the affair to founding the entertainment fund for the Interstate and International Federation which meets in Long Beach next spring.

Miss Yaw will be assisted by Mr. Plowe and Mrs. Newman.

She, herself, will vouchsafe two melodies of her own composition—"Cradle Song" and "Rose Child." In addition she will sing "Ah, Fors e lui," from "Traviata," the Proch Variations, Reinicke's "Spring Song," the mad scene from "Hamlet," and several other works.

Mr. Plowe will be heard in two solos, and in a duet with Mrs. Newman.

Henry Ohlmeyer's programmes for the week—at Coronado—are very promising, and reflect the caliber of his unusual band, and the diversity of the director's taste.

Tonight "Pagliacci" and "Carmen" will form the principal part of the programme. Franz Helle is the soloist.

Wednesday evening will be "Spanish night," with Helle again the soloist, and works by Lacome, Rosas, Flegier, Wochs and Gomez under discussion.

Florence Drake LeRoy will be soloist at the Ohlmeyer octette concert Thursday afternoon, singing Biehl's "Song of the Soul." Schubert's "Roasmunde," the Leybach Fifth Nocturne, Bendix's "In Beauty's Power," Delibes's "Naila" intermezzo and a fantasia from "Lohengrin" will be played.

Friday is "classic night," and an extraordinary programme will be offered, including the long Luigini "Ballet Russe," in five parts, and the Tschaikowsky "1812" overture. Miss LeRoy will be heard, as will Otto Jacobs, euphonium soloist.

Marguerite Jarman, clever young Los Angeles contralto, has accepted a special engagement of a week with the Bevani opera company in Oakland. Miss Jarman, who is of great beauty and statutesque proportions, will sing Amneris.

James W. Pierce, local pianist, and a pupil of Thilo Becker, is on his way to Europe for extended study, either with Harold Bauer, in Paris, or Leopold Godowsky, in Berlin.

Mr. Pierce comes from a prominent Los Angeles family, and as he is a young artist of already brilliant attainments, his family and friends hold high hopes of an illustrious future.

Singing varied to suit every taste will be the offering at Levy's Cafe chantant during the coming week, opening with the usual afternoon tea from 4 to 6.

Five newcomers are scheduled, starting with La Solita, Spanish dancer whose recent success on the Orpheum has earned for her a thirty weeks' booking with that firm at the close of her four weeks in this city. It is not usual that a dancer of any ability possesses also a voice that is true in quality, but in the instance of Mlle. Solita her voice is rich and pure. Her dances are all costumed elegantly and the combination of singing and dancing makes a most pleasing act.

The many friends that Suzanne Rocamora has made for herself since her first appearance here two weeks ago will regret to learn of her departure at the close of the present week, when she will join the Orpheum circuit, in Portland, for twenty weeks. For her last appearances here she has promised the latest New York hits, and different gowns.

There have been all kinds of combinations for trios presented at Levy's Cafe chantant since its opening, grand opera and popular ballad singers, baritones, sopranos and tenors; contraltos, sopranos and baritones; but the funniest and most entertaining are Rogers, Stewart & Elwood, comediennes of the first rank—real funny men with good voices.

"The Male Melba" is a very good billing for Bob Albright as far as his singing is concerned.

Another artist of reputation has joined the Bristol Pier Café company. She is La Belle Larke, soprano, who was with "Woodland" and "The Girl From Kay's" during her stage career. Miss Larke has accepted a contract for one week's engagement at the seaside hosterly and will render eight compositions at each performance, including the Saturday and Sunday matinees.

Another feature of the bill will be the appearance of Miss Carol Garland, contralto, whose work has made her a decided favorite.

"Happy" Van Alen, the popular song artist, a new dancer direct from New York, and other artists will round out the new bill. A number of late compositions, never before heard on the Coast, will be rendered by singers also. The Lancaster Ladies' Orchestra will feature several novel renditions.

Jay Plowe,

distinguished flutist, recently of Berlin, who will appear as solo support of Ellen Beach Yaw in her Long Beach concert, this week.

GOUNOD MANUSCRIPTS.

Series, Signed, Recently Sold at Auction at Sotheby's in London.

A series of musical manuscripts by Charles Gounod, the author of "Faust" and "Romeo et Juliette," were in a recent auction sale at Sotheby's, London. They are almost all signed by him.

Included in them are the "Hymn to St. Cecelia," violin solo, with accompaniment of harps, wind instruments and double bass, dedicated to "Mon ami Alard;" "Le Vin des Gaulois et la Danse de l'Epée," a Breton legend; "Ave Verum," in C major, soprano solo, choir and orchestra; "The Seven Last Words, Being the Office for Good Friday," choir without accompaniment, dedicated to Archbishop Libour of Paris; "O Salutaris Hostia," in A flat, solo for soprano or tenor, with choir and accompaniment of orchestra or organ; "O Salutaris," by Dugué, setting by Gounod, for four voices, and "O Felix Anima," by Carissimi, setting for three voices; "Laudate Dominum," for two voices and choir of children, with accompaniment of organ and double bass; "Adoro Te," for four voices, without accompaniment; "Pater Noster," choir without accompaniment; "Veni Creator," for four male voices, without accompaniment.

There was also a manuscript book containing the scores of thirty-seven chants, etc., written by Gounod for children. Included in this were a setting of La Fontaine's "La Cigale et la Fourmi," for four male voices, dedicated to A. Lelyon, president of a Paris choral society, and a carol for Christmas Eve., "Dans cette Etable," founded on an eighteenth century air.

OPEN-AIR SCHOOLS.

The Youngsters of Chicago Enjoy the New School Even During Zero Weather.

The Chicago educational system has originated a new verb—"to humidify." The meaning is simple: all hot air, before entering the schoolroom, is passed through jets of water or of steam, says Burton J. Hendrick, in McClure's Magazine. It now picks up its moisture in "humidifying" chambers in the basement, instead of in the throats and nasal passages of the children and teachers.

Principal Watt, head of one of the schools in the stock yards district, has gone even further. In the lower grades of his school he began the experiment, last winter, of abolishing heat altogether. In these rooms he has adopted a new educational motto: "Less instruction and more oxygen." In keeping with this, these little children no longer sit together at desks, with folded hands. The desks have been removed, kindergarten chairs have been brought in, and the pupils given the utmost freedom of movement. In cold winter weather they wear their wraps and hats—and these are their only source of heat. In zero weather, they sit at their table in front of open, "drafty" windows. Their fingers do not get so numb that they cannot write on the blackboards and physical discomfort is unknown.

One day last winter when the thermometer registered 10 below zero, a woman school visitor came into one of these cold rooms. She was horrified at what she described as "cruelty." But the children simply grinned. They enjoy the change immensely and have nick-named the old hot-air place the "hospital rooms," because there are so many sick children in them. The parents likewise are enthusiastic.

There are reasons in plenty for this attitude. Colds, glandular troubles, the normal afflictions of school life, have virtually disappeared, and the mentality of the children has responded to the change. By Christmas practically all of the children in the cold air rooms had finished their year's work! They were learning to read and write almost unconsciously.

Home of the Ptarmigan.

Of all our mountain birds, the ptarmigan alone remains on the mountain tops in winter as well as in summer, and when all other bird life has been compelled by the severity of the weather to descend to more sheltered quarters the hardy ptarmigan seems almost to revel in the Arctic conditions and scorns to leave his storm-swept strongholds, says Seton Gordon in The Field. For this reason he is of special interest to the ornithologist, and a day at his haunts is always worth the labors of an arduous climb, for the ptarmigan rarely descends even during the heaviest snowstorms below the level of 2500 hundred feet.

Places were marked with beautiful hand-painted hearts, each guest being presented with a unique remembrance of Miss Lewis's engagement in the novelty of a small suit case filled with rice, tagged "E. H. L." and "H. E. J." It would seem from this ingenious idea as though the hostess was stealing a rice shower on her guests.

Mrs. J. Vance Lewis, of Washington, D. D., mother of the hostess, took pleasure in making known to those present the forthcoming event of her daughter's wedding to Harry Earl Jones, of Maine, but now residing in this city. Baker Electrics

It is significant that the Bevel Gear Shaft Drive Baker Electric is today the only electric motor car which cannot be purchased at a cut price.

Rigid maintenance of price is the measure of our faith in our product—and in the discrimination of the motoring public. Cuts and concessions by other makers are the measure of the effect of Baker popularity on the demand for cars of lesser worth.

The success of the Baker Bevel Gear Shaft Drive is rendering all other types obsolete. Prices are being reduced accordingly. But the Bevel Gear Shaft Drive Baker Electric is still the biggest value obtainable. In the long run, it saves you many times the small difference in first cost.

It gives you the greatest speed, the greatest mileage, the greatest comfort, the longest and most economical service. It is the world's best electric, and is in addition the only electric that you can buy now with the absolute assurance that it will be up-to-date next year.

GOOD-BYE TO SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Lady Will Send Free to Any Sufferer the Secret Which Cured Her.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else failed.

This simple remedy, a harmless, soluble liquid, enabled me permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end all embarrassment. It is simple, safe, sure and can be used privately at home, without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable any other sufferer to achieve the same happy results as I did. All I ask is a two-cent stamp for repy. Address Caroline Osgood, 747 S., Vaughan Bldg., Providence, R. I.

No artist paints ever the dead face of man—
hy copies he Nature's corpse only?
aint me a picture with morn's purple

int me the first dewdrop tears of the night
d in the rapture of silence;
int me the prayer of the trees as they stand

Hallett's.

erbert H. Hallett, who came from w York a few months ago, has just ened a small picture gallery on the rth floor of the Blanchard building. Although all the pictures in Mr. Hallett's collection are by foreign painters, has great faith in American art, d especially in the art of Southern lifornia, and it is his intention to ndle the best canvases of our own s Angeles artists. Another pet heme of his is to open another gally where one-man shows will be held gularly, about a dozen representative s being exhibited. The exhibitll all be California painters.

little new gallery is charming tful, its walls and hangings bed red. I passed a very pleasr or two there the other day, re are some impressions of the s I lingered over:

t Watson's "Highland Cattle" a family group of five shaggy n bovines, two cows, a bull and iring calves. They are lingerside a sky-reflecting pool. Purher shows in patches through ddle distance. The blue sky is -flecked, and mists are rising over tant mountains. Another highture is the landscape, "Land s and Heather," by Charles t. This, also, has a pool in the round, with deer instead of cat- The mists floating over the distant are exquisitely rendered, the sun ing behind them in subdued splen-

From an oil by Robert Watson.

. Hallett has many Dutch pictures, scapes and genres. "In the Forest arbizon" is one of the best of the scapes. Its painter is Theophile de k, whose brush work is described ancher in his "Promenades of an ressionist" as "fat and rich." This s shows us a circle of gray stones d slender birches, and beyond is y sky, from which the light is The landscape is cool and wet the rain. A. M. Gorter's "Landin Holland" has a cloudy sky, een and pale yellow. It has a tream in the foreground, and is al in color and feeling. The us pleasantly moist.

g the genres is a "Dutch In-" by B. J. Blommers—a delightpainted picture, which shows us al supper hour and the woman g man and child. The interior is nd gray, and in vivid contrast unlight shines through the winnd open door. There is a charmtimacy about the scene. Even intime (to use the French phrase) feeling of "Mother and Child," ert Pieters, in which a woman g apples while her little towdaughter, a grave mimic in nd expression, is making clothes er doll. The picture is suave in g, juicy in color. Another pleasly is J. H. S. Kever's "Arranghe Flowers," a young peasant seated before a table. J. Mira's t in Algiers" sparkles with color, and light—it is like a jewel box on a wall.

of the most beautiful pictures in Hallett's collection (to my way of ing, that is) is W. Baird's "St. and's, Southern France," sheep landscape, in which one is as well as the other—and both done reably well, surely, directly, simply. are red sheep and white, the red g delightful color notes in the cape. I wish we had sheep of peculiar brick color here; they harmonize perfectly with Cala's summer hills.

Some of the most attractive exhibits were examples of domestic architecture, in which field special progress has been made in Southern California.

The exhibition was particularly strong in color work, special note being made of European sketches by Arthur Roland Kelly, and a perspective rendered in color of the Huntington residence designed by Myron Hunt and Elmer Gray. There were numerous fine drawings executed by architects which would grace a gallery for black and white in any modern collection. In addition to these, fifty drawings and etchings by Joseph Pennell attracted much attention.

A striking feature of the exhibition was the work in plaster; models for the facade of the Throop Polytechnic Institute of Pasadena, by Alexander Stirling Calder.

One entire section of the exhibition was devoted to original drawings and studies by the well-known mural painter, Edwin Howland Blashfield, and this was a continual source of pleasure to the hundreds who daily availed themselves of the privilege of viewing the display. The themes, typifying, as many of them did, the spirit and history of the Western States, made these splendid examples of a great art particularly interesting to residents of California.

Appreciation of the Blashfield pictures was shown in a substantial manner. Three single figures were purchased by the Los Angeles Public Library, the "Head of a Girl" by the Los Angeles High School, and two of the groups by the Fine Arts League.

The next convention of the Architectural League of the Pacific Coast will be held in Los Angeles during the autumn of the present year.—[Henrietta Housh in Art and Progress.

ART NOTES.

Several students have enrolled and are preparing for the examinations for the scholarship founded by the Julian Academy of Paris in the Los Angeles School of Art and Design. These scholarships include a year's free tuition at the Los Angeles School of Art and Design in painting from life, and in anatomy and perspective, and also a year free of cost at the Julian Academy in any branch of art taught in that school. These scholarships are open to any art student in Southern California. It is intendel to hold examinations in December and in June.

Carl Oscar Borg, who has been holding an exhibition in San Francisco, and who recently returned, is about to leave for Spain, where he will gather materials for illustrations for a book on the Alhambra. These, which will be in color, are to be somewhat in the manner of Jules Guerin's pictures of Egypt.

Six large landscapes from the brush of Granville Redmond were sold to a Los Angeles picture lover during the past week from the Kanst gallery. The paintings are all from sketches made in and near Pacific Park, Cal.

The California Art Club met last night at the studio of Putnam & Valentine, No. 206 North Spring street. Mr. Putnam is a member of the club.

Mrs. L. E. Garden-Macleod will spend August and September in her new bungalow, "Wee Biggin," at Redondo. Wee biggin is Scotch for small abiding place. She will come to Los Angeles only for small special life classes.

ENGLISH HOLIDAYS.

Sports Once Popular Remains So—Pedestrianism Is a Common Vacation Pastime.

[aHrper's Weekly:] A diversion which hardly exists in America, but which still holds its own in England, is the walking or bicycling tour. England is not a country given to sudden crazes in the matter of sports. There are seasons, of course, in which some game like ping-pong or diabolo carries everything before it for the moment and is then as suddenly dropped. But, on the whole, a sport that has once become popular in England remains so. Bicycling is a case in point. My American friends are astounded to hear that more cycles are being sold in England than ever. They are not perhaps as fashionable as they once were, and the days when cycling in Battersea Park competed with riding in Rotten Row have long gone by. But as the vehicle of the masses the cycle still predominates, and the whole country is a network of cycling clubs whose members organize successive tours of a fortnight or three weeks throughout the summer months. The English again have always been great pedestrians, and many thousands of them devote their vacation to tramping the Welsh hills or the lake district or Devonshire or some other of the almost countless regions that in England offer one a combination of faultless roads, beautiful scenery, and historic associations. Touring by caravan is not so popular a pastime, but is still not uncommon, and those who once take to it declare that it knocks all other forms of holiday-making on the head. And besides all this there are the joys of motoring for those who can afford them, while even a tenth-rate resort boasts its golf links, its tennis courts, and its cricket club.

English as She Is Wrote.

This is a sample of "English as she is wrote," by a German firm which wishes to tell Americans how to use a new mechanical salt cellar:

"It is necessary, that is emploid only a salt-table very fine milled and very dried. Another salt is to pound and to dry previously than in this case it is forming masses (crumbs.) It is necessary that the salt cellar is not placed humid and is not touched with hands wets. By a good and rational use the cellar is functonning blameless and is of a unlimited durability. The cellar is the best."—[Judge's Library.

STAMPS FOR POSTAL BANKS.

Special Design Will Be Used to Keep Tab on the Postal Savings Mail.

[Chicago Record-Herald.] A new postage stamp has been ordered printed. It will be used by postmasters in connection with postal savings banks. Instead of using the ordinary franked or penalty envelope for official postal savings bank mail, special stamps will be issued, enabling the postal authorities to accurately record the expense of transmitting postal savings bank mail. It is the purpose of the law that the postal savings banks should be self-supporting, pay interest to depositors, all clerk hire and mail transportation.

Until the postal savings bank system has been installed the new stamps will be used only on the official mail of the board of trustees. The stamp will be about the size of the present 2-cent stamp, will be printed in a dark color and will bear the inscription "U. S. Postal Savings, Official Mail, 2 Cents." The first issue will be 500,000.

Are You Paying Custom Tailor Prices for Extra Sizes
Most women who wear larger sizes than a 44, have hitherto been compelled to pay Custom tailor prices. For a long period past the Broadway has been making a feature of extra size garments, and women are learning that this is the headquarters for garments measuring from 44 to 56 bust measure. New fall styles are daily arirving.

A group of 200 garments representing values that will fairly take the city by storm. Summer styles have steadily been giving way to the advanced models for Fall and now on the very threshold of the Fall season and in spite of the fact that the garment situation is in a critical state, comes this almost startling news of a purchase of 200 Fall garments to be featured at $12.50.

Mannish mixtures that fashion says are to be among the most favored materials for Fall. These in the new grays, browns and greens.

Wide shadow stripes and herringbone effects. Black and blue serges and basket weave woolens.

Coats are 32 inches and all are satin lined. It's the fit and finish of the garments and the general air of good taste about them that puts them far above the average suits at much higher price. We predict that 200 of these garments will fairly take wings. Remember, we have all sizes in this lot.

$15 to $25 Cloth Suits $12.50
Side by side with the offering of the new Fall garments at $12.50 we'll give you the opportunity of buying spring and summer styles that are bearing the tickets of $15, $17.50, $19.50 and $25.

The last of a great summer stock including French serges, cream serges, diagonals and worsteds in models that are practical in every way as far as style goes for Fall wear. Colors are black, blue, gray, brown, green, etc. The garments are perfect, the styles are exceptionally correct and the range of sizes is complete, taking in the full assortment, although you may not fine every size of every style.

PERSONALITIES.

J. P. MORGAN BUILDS CASTLE FOR PROTEGE.

Homer A. Norris.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, July 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan, because of his love for music and his personal friendship for Homer A. Norris, composer and organist and choirmaster of St. George's Episcopal Church, Stuyvesant square, is building for that musician a stone castle high up on a crag of the Orange Mountains, facing Greenwood Lake. The structure will cost more than $20,000, and will be paid for entirely by Mr. Morgan.

The financier has made this present to Mr. Norris to enable the composer to take himself away from St. George's, with his many duties there, and spend a few days at any and all times of the year composing new music. Mr. Morgan thinks the spot is an ideal one. He feels that the singing of birds, the ripple of water, the chirp of the cricket, the swaying of the branches and the music of the wind playing among the leaves of the wild forest will be much more conducive to the production of sweet songs than the daily grind of city life in and around Mr. Norris's studio in East Sixteenth street.

HEREABOUTS.

COL. WILLIAM M. PALMER, for many years an attaché of the U. S. Senate, was one of the interesting guests of the week at the Van Nuys. Col. Palmer, who won his title during the Civil War, is an "old timer," and knows almost everyone in or about either of the two Federal legislative bodies. He is so full of reminiscences that two or three large volumes could not contain them all. He has been secretary to various Senators, among them the late Senator Sewell of New Jersey, the late Senator Hanna, Senator Dryden of New Jersey and Senator Hopkins of Illinois. His present trip to the Coast is one of pleasure, a vacation of several months after years of hard work. He is on his way to Santa Barbara, where he will visit Mrs. McCalla, widow of the late admiral, and after that he will continue up the Coast to Seattle. Speaking of the insurgents of the Senate, Col. Palmer ridiculed the idea that they are a permanent fixture there. "Why," he said, "as far back as I can remember there were insurgents in the Senate. They flare up like a bon-fire and in a short time die out. The present Senators who head the insurgent movement are a real nuisance. They are repeaters on the floor. Every movement against their policy was blocked in order that they gain time. They actually made the session last an entire month longer than necessary." While in the army during the Civil War, Col Palmer served under Gen. William J. Palmer in the Fifteenth Troop of Pennsylvania Cavalry. At the battle of Mossey Creek, (Tenn.) Col. Palmer was wounded by a bullet, and after the fight taken prisoner. The bullet and a part of his hip bone were removed in a Southern prison and he carries them about in a small leather case, treasuring them as he would a medal for bravery.

There are always a number of people in the lobby of a large downtown hotel. The Alexandria is one of the places where the leading men of the city often congregate for a few minutes to talk with friends from far away. In the past three or four days the seats in the lobby have been more than well filled. Two out of every three of the people waiting were there to see the same man. "We haven't had half as many people in to see the political leaders, the biggest drummers of the country or the stars of some great company as we have had to see Pantages," said Clerk Sibbald. And that is true. The name of A. Pantages strikes terror into the heart of the pages. "I've yelled that name so many times through the lobby, in the barber shop, in the cafe or dining room, that I'm hoarse," said one of the pages. "Guess Pantages must know everybody in town." The real secret of the matter, however, lies in the fact that Pantages will soon open his new vaudeville house here. Knowing this full well, there are daily attempts to secure from the theatrical man some concession in the new theater. There are bill posters, programme advertisers, printers, theater managers, treasurers, head ushers and assistants, ladies' maids, stage carpenters and electricians all looking for a chance to stick their finger in the pie. Some of them get to see the busy theatrical man, but the majority of them wait day in and day out and will probably be waiting still when the new Broadway theater throws open its doors next month.

Capt. J. R. Mellen is at the Nadeau. It isn't the first time that Capt. Mellen has registered there. He was one of the first to ever inscribe his name on the books of the house, and has been coming ever since its inception. The interesting thing at this time in the captain's signature lies in the fact that he has just brought it back with him from New York and other great cities of the east. "I started boating on the Colorado River forty-seven years ago. That was the time, or shortly after the time, I came across the Rockies, and in all the years following, until the present, I have never been back. And since I've been back," said the old captain, "I don't care ever to try the trip again. The West, the Pacific Coast States, hold me tight and after all is said and done, I guess they are the best States. They talk about the heat of the desert and of Arizona and California, but I never experienced a day in all the time I spent on the Colorado that could compare with the heat they had in the big cities in the East. Why, out here you get a chance to breathe new air, which, even if it is hot, is clean. In the towns the heat you get is not only mixed with the smells of a big city, but carries with it disease. In Chiciga I saw the people sleeping out in the parks, on the front steps and anywhere to get just a little more of the moving air than they could get in the house, and at that they died. I'm going back to the Colorado," said the sun-browned veteran, "and I'm going to stay there until I won't need any more air, with maybe an occasional trip to Los Angeles thrown in. This is all the big town I care to see," and the riverman wandered from the hotel down the street in search of some of his old friends.

The East is interested in the great oil fields of Southern California. Ask Elmer Jones of Bakersfield, who is spending a few days at the Hollenbeck after a trip of several months through all of the large cities of the East. "Our wonderful oil strikes have been noticed in all of the great papers of the country. Many papers have printed pictures of the great gushers and have created the desire of the public throughout the country to see for themselves the development of oil properties in this part of the world. Every train coming through from the East is carrying substantial business men to investigate the possibilities of investment in oil properties. Even England and Germany are sending over bankers and oil experts to view the fields, and at the present time some of the foreign companies have immense holdings in the Midway, Maricopa, Coalinga and Bakersfield districts. Wherever I traveled I found people waiting to speak to me of the opportunities in oil in the Southwest, and naturally I could do dothing more than tell them the truth, which to a great many was unbelievable for the simple reason that it was incomprehensible. They could not stretch their imagination to the extent of believing in an oil well that has flowed as high as 40,000 barrels a day." Mr. Jones was one of the pioneers in the Bakersfield district, and is at present an extensive operator in the newer fields.

While many city-bred people may laugh at the moving picture show, scorn it for the legitimate theatrical performances, there are hundreds of others who can get no better amusement. This is particularly true of the little towns where there are no amusements of any kind to speak of. The moving pictures have brought to them the big events of the day even more than the newspapers. They have enacted the air flights, the great fires, have reproduced scenes from every country of the world and taught many of the unlettered things they could never have learned in other ways. C. M. Applestell of San Francisco spoke of these things at the Hayward, where he has been spending a few days of the past week after a trip through Imperial Valley. He is owner of a long circuit of small theaters in small towns. "They can't have first-class theatrical amusements in hundreds of places, and the moving pictures are filling the want," he said. "The country people are just as enthusiastic about the moving pictures as the city people are about the highest-salaried vaudeville artist that ever came to town. Ask them."

SCIENTISTS.

CHARLES W. FITZGERALD, naturalist and explorer, who believes that the story of the jaguar fishing with its tail is not a nature fake, sailed yesterday by the Roal Mail liner Atrato for Trinidad to prove the faith by moving pictures and photographs. Mr. Fitzgerald says he has seen a jaguar fish. It lets its tail drag in the water a bit and waits for a fish to appear. Then its wriggles the tail and the fish bites. The jaguar turns swiftly and harpoons the fish with a claw. Mr. Fitzgerald expects to get other good pictures of wild animal life on the Orinoco, including some of the marvelous snakes and alligators for which the river is famed in books.

R. S. Woglum of the Department of Agriculture has just been sent to Spain to study the general subject of citrus fruit growing and handling. While there he will also study the white fly that has made serious inroads on fruit crops of Florida and the Gulf States.

After he is through in Spain he will go to India, which is the place of origin of the white fly, and try to find its parasites or the natural enemy that holds it in check.

E. G. Smythe of the Department of Agriculture has gone to Smyrna to see what can be done to eliminate a proportion of the worms that accompany importations of figs from that country. Under the pure food law these importations had to be excluded, but upon the evidence of importers the order was relaxed, but endeavors are to be made to eliminate the worms that have heretofore accompanied the importations of Smyrna figs.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Adams of Washington, D. C., have returned from a scientific trip to San Domingo, and have brought back with them fine specimens of the Solenodon, the rare antediluvian ancestor of the rodent family. Three of the solenodons have been placed in the Bronx Joological Park, New York, and the other two are at the National Zoological Garden, Washington. They are the first of their species to survive a long sea voyage in captivity, and are an acquisition of importance to the two parks.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

THE American colony at Heidelburg has decided to erect a statue of Mark Twain in that city as it was there that he conceived the idea of writing "A Tramp Abroad." The necessary funds for the statue have already been subscribed.

When Gov. Hughes takes oath as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court next October, he will be in a position to draw something more than $5443 in accumulated salary, dating from May 2, when he was confirmed by the Senate. It will be formally and solemnly tendered him as his legitimate salary. But officials here do not believe he will take the accumulated money because he has during the same period been receiving $10,000 a year as Governor of New York, with house rent thrown in for good measure.

Mr. William J. Calhoun, minister to China, has no valet. He is a man who, beginning life as a farmer boy, always has "washed his own face and put on his own clothes," and he has no intention of changing his habits now to make a personal impression on Chinese dignitaries. His wife has no maid. Mrs. Calhoun married a strong, simple American because she liked that kind, and her habits have continued to conform to his.

Rev. Sir Charles Dunbar, Bart., has come to the United States seeking a temporary or lengthened charge or preaching tour in connection with the Episcopal or some other denomination. The baronet was archdeacon of Grenada from 1875 to 1877, and would like to work in this country as an extempore preacher, a privilege he says he has never hitherto enjoyed, but has always desired.

Col. J. Ham Lewis of Chicago, was recently accosted on a street car by some enthusiastic friends who declared him to be the greatest man of the day, and that they were going to elect him President. While the Colonel was trying to figure out who his ardent admirer was the car stopped and the man got off. Col. Lewis discovered a short time afterward that his pocketbook had got off at the same stop. The pocketbook contained $17 in currency. Col. —The Marshall Ventilated Mattress—the Mattress with a Thousand Springs!

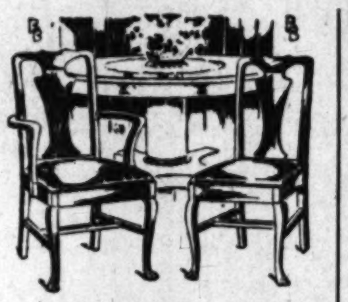
—The Marshall Ventilated Mattress is an improvement in mattress making which should commend itself to all who seek the limit of luxuriousness in this line. For hundreds of years it has been customary to put mattresses on springs, but in the case of the Marshall Ventilated Mattress the springs are placed inside the mattress. The body of a full-sized Marshall Mattress contains more than one thousand highly tempered copper steel springs, so ingeniously incased in specially woven fabric pockets and arranged—without any rigid fastening—so that each works independently, without coming in contact with the others, thus insuring not only most complete rest but absolute freedom from noise and rendering it impossible for the springs to get out of order or become disarranged. Above and below the "honeycomb" are pads of black South American horse hair, likewise along the sides and ends. The curled hair is sterilized free from all impurity. This hair is a non-conductor of heat, making a cool and reposing mattress. The outside ticking is of the best eight ounce quality. We should be pleased to more fully explain the many merits of these exceptionally superior Mattresses to any who visit the Mattress Department.



—Many Articles of Dining Room Furniture at Lessened Prices.

—We shall continue for another week the special reduction of 10 to 33 1-3 per cent. on "one-of-a-kind" dining tables, buffets, china cabinets, serving tables, etc. These include pieces in golden oak, fumed oak and mahogany, and in each case where we have found no reserve stock in our warehouse of these particular patterns, we have re-priced them, making a sufficient concession to make a very attractive saving to any one who desires to practice economy.

HENRY DORMAN HOLDS PROOFS.

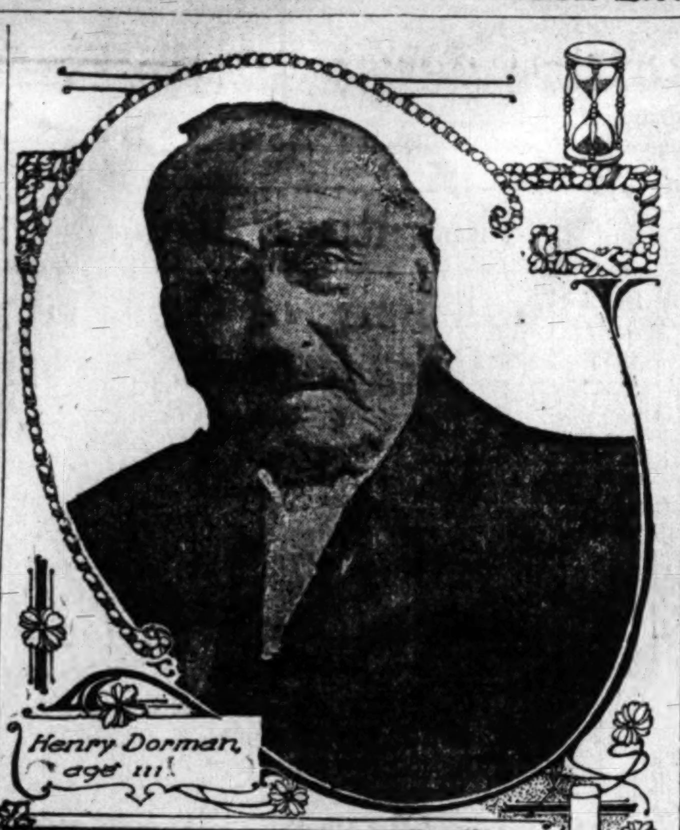
Says He Was Born More Than Century Ago.

Served as Union Soldier During Civil War.

Still Active, But Victim of Rheumatism.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MINDEN (Mo.) July 20.—Who is the oldest man in the world? That is a question that cannot be answered, because the data is not at hand. But Henry Dorman of Barton county, Missouri, has proofs that he is the oldest living man in the United States. Mr. Dorman is now in his 112th year. A few colored men claim they are beyond that age, but not another man in this country can give birth records to substantiate a claim to an age older than Henry Dorman has attained.



Residence of Henry Dorman

Is One Hundred Eleven Years Old and Lives in Missouri..

Photographs of Henry Dorman, who has proofs of his great age, and of his home in Barton county, Mo. The old man, who has seen three centuries, is still active, but suffers some from rheumatism.

Dorman has lived in three centuries. He saw, as a babe in his mother's arms, the eighteenth century pass away; he lived entirely through the nineteenth; and is still living to see the more wonderful twentieth century ushered in. He was born in Steuben county, New York, January 10, 1799, and lived almost a year before George Washington died. He was a schoolboy of 8 when Abraham Lincoln was born. Since that time Lincoln saved the Union, and has now been in his grave forty-seven years.

When the Civil War broke out Mr. Dorman was living in Aurelius, Mich. He had married Miss Lucinda Parker in New York. At the outbreak of hostilities he did not join the army. He was patriotic and wanted to take part in the struggle, but his wife and children persuaded him to remain at home. Their reason was that he was too old to go to war, being then 62 years of age. At present the average age of veterans of the war who drew pensions is [illegible] years.

ENLISTS DESPITE AGE.

As the war progressed Lincoln made more frantic appeals for volunteers. Henry Dorman saw that he was needed, and in 1863 joined Company F, Seventh Michigan Cavalry. He was sent to the front at once, and took part in the battle of Gettysburg. He saw hard service all through the remainder of the fighting, and served until the close of the war. When he returned home his neighbors were all surprised to see him. They did not think that "Old Henry" Dorman could stand the rigors of a hard campaign.

The same vitality that kept him up through the war has continued through his life to the present time, the most wonderful thing about him being his great vitality. It sticks out all over him, and in spite of the weight of his many years is still apparent. When he was 100 years old he celebrated the event by walking to the home of his son, a distance of twenty-five miles. He had to slip away from his home to do it, but after the long walk he said he felt better than he had for a long time.

Henry Dorman has been a farmer almost all his life, and still lives on his old homestead. He came to Missouri forty-three years ago and settled in Vernon county. There he lived until twenty-three years ago, when his wife died. He then came to Barton county and has since made his home with his son and daughter-in-law.

STILL DOES CHORES.

Recently a visitor went to the Dorman place to talk with the wrinkled veteran and to obtain a picture of him. A knock on the door was answered by his daughter-in-law, Hattie Dorman. She was an old, wrinkled and gray-headed woman. In a feeble voice, in answer to the question as to where Uncle Henry was, she said, "Out in the lot choring around, I guess."

The visitor waited a few minutes and Uncle Henry came in. He was bent and feeble, but there was a twinkle and a fire in his eye, and he smiled as though he still had joy in living.

"You caught me with my old clothes on," he said, as he extended a gnarled, withered hand. The hand was his left.

"Take my left hand," he explained. "I never give my right. It don't look pretty. I got it shot a little at the battle of Yellow Tavern in Virginia, just before the war was over." And he lifted the member, from which two fingers were missing.

The visitor asked Uncle Henry to what he attributed his long life.

"I guess God just meant me to live long. He knows that I never took any care of myself. I was left an orphan at the age of fourteen, so you see that I did not come from a long-lived line. And you can also guess that I had a mighty hard time to get along in my youth. I feel very well at present. I have always worked. That keeps my joints from getting stiff. I have the 'rheumatiz' at present and that keeps me from getting around as I would like.

WORK CURE FOR ILLS.

"I believe that work is the best cure for human ills that the world has ever seen. I always worked hard. I never did drink any kind of liquor. Every time I see a man who drinks to excess I say to myself, 'Poor fellow, you won't last long.' I have used tobacco, and plenty of it. I never smoked but I have chewed enough in my time for three men. I took my first chew when I was twenty-four and I kept it up for a period of eighty years. Then I quit when I was 104 years old. The habit had me pretty tight but I made up my mind to stop, and stop I did. A man can make up his mind to do anything if he only will.

"The reason that I stopped was that chewing is a bad and dirty habit for a man that is getting old. And you see, when I stopped the habit I was getting along in years," and the old man laughed heartily.

"Another thing that caused me to quit was the cost of chewing. It cost me about $10 a year for tobacco, and in eighty years that amounted to $800. That is quite a sum, and you know, an old man must economize."

Uncle Henry was asked if he realized what a wonderful period of the world's history he had lived through.

WITNESSED MUCH PROGRESS.

"Yes, I realize what progress the world has made," he answered. "When I was a boy there was not a match in existence. I was married and had children when the first mile of railroad was laid, or before the first steamship crossed the waters of the Atlantic. The wonders of today were not thought of in my time. Things have changed, mightily changed, in a century. But all the changes are not for the best. People are too extravagant in these days. All men think of now is money getting. That is not like it was when I was a boy. And with all the conveniences of the new century I do not think that people are as happy now as they were a hundred years ago when I was a boy."

When asked if he was the oldest man in the United States, the aged Missourian said that he was sure that he was the oldest white man in the country. He is the oldest man on the pension list. He draws $50 a month from the government by special act of Congress. Up to two years ago he drew but $17. The Dorman family has written to newspapers all over the country and the records can not be sighted to prove that Henry Dorman is not the most aged man in the republic.

"I am getting old," added Uncle Henry, "and I suppose that my time will soon come. I hope that I can stay on my feet until the end. All men must get old. Age does not hurt. It is feebleness that makes existence a burden."

Uncle Henry may live for a number of years. He is still fairly well and only two weeks ago he wanted to go sixteen miles to Pittsburg, Kan., to see an airship exhibition. The old man had so many history making inventions and achievements that he wanted to see an airship before he died. He has taken a great interest in feats of flying and the fact that his rheumatism kept him at home caused him more sadness than anything in the past few years.

Uncle Henry has a heavy, drawling voice. In spite of his age, it is still clear, and while he hesitates when he starts to speak, when he once begins his voice booms out as in his younger days. His great voice, thin, white hair and strong, wrinkled face, make the oldest man in America a unique figure, indeed.

> How Walters, Famous in History, Have Followed in the Footsteps of the First Famous Waldheri, An Aquitanian Prince—His Name Means Fierce Warrior—A Great Builder, the Founder of the Collegiate System at Oxford, a Leader of the Peasants in England, All Famous Walters—How the Name Has Gained Fame Among Writers.
> BY FRANCES MARSHALL.

Long, long ago, the first Waldheri, or fierce warrior, a bold Teutonic prince, set the fashion for the later famous bearers of his name. He was a prince of Aquitaine, who fled from the fierce Hun leader Attila, and, in spite of enemies and pursuers, reached his own realm, where he reigned for thirty years.

Walter Wellman, who worked persistently in the frozen Arctic in an effort to be the first American to reach the north pole; Walter Reed, American army surgeon, who did more than any other one man to rid Cuba of yellow fever some ten years ago; Walter Damrosch, successful impresario and grand opera director in the United States; Walter de Merton, bishop of Rochester, who founded the collegiate system of the English universities; Walter the Penniless, who preached the crusades; Walter of Coventry, one of the greatest mediaeval builders; Wat Tyler, leader of the discontented peasants in England—perhaps these men have not been literally powerful warriors, but like Waldheri of old they have had the courage of their convictions, and have been willing to fight to uphold them if need were.

Sir Walter Raleigh, too, might be included among the worthy inheritors of a name first made famous by a warrior For courtier and gallant though he was, he was one of the men who made Queen Elizabeth's reign one of the greatest in English history.

After the days of Prince Waldheri—and nobody knows just when he lived, if he ever did live at all—one of the first of the famous Walters who showed the spirit of fight which his name suggests was Walter the Penniless.

Not much more is known of him than of the Aquitanian prince. He was a French knight, and he led a band of enthusiastic, almost fanatical, men through Europe in the year 1096, calling upon them to follow the banner of the cross and rescue Palestine from the infidels. He was killed the following year in one of the first battles of the crusades, when the men he had aroused took Nicaea from the Turks.

Just a hundred years later lived Waltar of Coventry, a man with his own ideas about architecture, one of the most famous builders of medieval England. He worked in the reigns of King Henry III, King Richard I and King John, and many of the buildings of that era show his influence. In 1187 he probably had the entire direction of the building of Chichester cathedral and palace and cloisters at Chichester are also attributed to him.

In their own way these two men made a deep impression. But the work of the builder of Coventry already shows the marks of time and decay, and the enthusiasm which the crusader helped arouse, and which once stirred Europe to fruitless eastern pilgrimages, has died down.

Another hundred years passed by, and there lived a man whose work is a living force even today, and will be as long as there is education in England. For it was Walter de Merton, good bishop of Rochester, who founded Merton College, Oxford, and thereby founded the collegiate system of the great English universities.

The bishop had seven sisters and no brothers, and his sisters were perhaps responsible for his work for education, for among them they had eight sons, and Walter de Merton decided to look after their training. In 1261 he obtained a charter from the Earl of Gloucester, which empowered him to assign some property he had in Surrey to the priory of Merton, for the support of his nephews while they were "scholars residing at the schools," that is to say, at Oxford. This Merton priory, or college, as it became, was the basis of the whole university system in England.

Like Walter de Merton, another English Walter had a lasting influence on the history of his country. This was Wat Tyler, who died in 1381. He was a humble peasant, who did not aspire to the dignity of a surname, but who, because he covered roofs with tiles, was called Wat the tiler, or Wat Tyler.

He became a leader of the poor of England, and was so popular with them that they used to carry on heated disputes as to whether he or King Richard II was the greater man.

Finally with a man named Jack Straw, Tyler led the peasants in a revolt. He went up to London, and there met the King, to seek terms. He rode up to the monarch, dismounted from his small horse, and with a dagger grasped firmly in one hand shook the King's hand fervently with the other. He told the King ot be of good cheer, which nowadays would probably be interpreted by the admonition, "cheer up." Then he added, "soon we shall be good comrades."

The King seemed disposed to listen to this strange and fearless representative of the peasants of Essex and Kent. If it had not been for Wat's hot temper, he would probably have come out of the rebellion the victor. But he lost control of his feelings, stabbed one of the King's men, and was himself mortally wounded.

Without Wat, the movement of the peasants to gain their rights fell to pieces, and for another hundred and fifty years the old feudal system prevailed in England. But Wat's rebellion was the beginning of the end, and even today, the English poor have Tyler to thank for some of their liberties.

Besides these men, who because of their bravery and boldness have a real claim to this name of warriors bold, there have been many famous Walters among the great men of letters. A good half dozen of them stand out above the others, and above other writers of their times.

The first of them, who lived at about the time of the English architect of Coventry, was Walter of Vogel Weide. He was of noble birth, as his name indicates, but he was poor, and he was forced to rely upon his ability as a poet to make his way in the world.

He lived in the days of the jongleurs and troubadours of the south, and the minnesingers of the north, and he became a minnesinger. As a youth he lived at the court of Duke Frederick the Catholic in Vienna, and after the Duke's death he became a wanderer, and lived first at one court and then at another, wherever he could find patronage. He went about reciting poems and singing songs to his own accompaniment on the viol, and soon he became the greatest lyric poet of mediaeval Germany.

One of the greatest of the patrons of the minnesingers was Herman, margrave of Thuringia, who each year gave a prize for the best poem in honor of his wife, Sophia. This contest was called the "battle of the minstrels," and it was quite the greatest social event of the season in Thuringia. One year Walter gained the prize, and thereafter he was known as the leader of the minnesingers.

Walter of Vogel Weide's will contained a strange bequest. He had always been a great lover of the birds, and when he died he left money that they—at least those that gathered about his grave—might always have a fresh and sufficient supply of grain and other food.

The rest of the great literary Walters are men of modern times. The best known of them, and the earliest, is Sir Walter Scott, knighted because of his successful works, and the first baronet named by King George IV. Scott was born in 1771, and wrote the first of his popular novels under an assumed name. For years his identity was undiscovered, and he was known to the public as "The Great Unknown."

Walt Whitman, American poet, born in 1819, printer, carpenter, journalist, government clerk, and Civil War army nurse; Walter Savage Landor, English poet and republican enthusiast, who was expelled from Oxford for firing a gun at the windows of a Tory leader in 1794; Walter Pater, born in England in 1839, critic and essay writer; Walter Bagehot, journalist, lawyer and essayist, born in England in 1826, and Sir Walter Besant, whose book, "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," suggested the famous London People's Palace—these are the men who have helper Walter of Vogel Weide and Sir Walter Scott make the name Walter famous in literature.

Walter, Water, Wat, Watty, Watties, are all English forms of the name. The Irish call the name Thaiter. In French it is Waitier, Gaultier, Wautier, Gautier and Gatier; in Italian Gaultiero; in Spanish Guttiere; in Dutch Wolder, and in Swiss Watli. Waldemar is an old German form.

Vladimir, a name of Slavonic origin, is used by the Russians as a translation of the Teutonic Walter. It is not an exact equivalent, but, like Walter, it signifies power. Ladislaus is a form of this name. Valeska is a Polish and Vladislavka a Russian feminine of this name.

PRANK OF "CAT COUNT."

All Europe Is Laughing at Englishmen's Escapade With Stockholm Police.

All Europe is laughing at the latest escapade of Count Gasta Hamilton, known as "Le Comte des Chats—the Cat Count," and a member of the English ducal house of Hamilton, says the Chicago Tribune. The story of his latest prank is told in European newspapers.

Count Gasta and some of his cronies had honored "Rosenbad," a popular resort in Stockholm, with their patronage, and as a result some of the furniture had been broken. In particular, the covering of a fine sofa had been ripped and damaged. The manager of the resort remonstrated with the Count and suggested the advisability of the latter's paying for the damage. This the Count agreed to do, and virtually purchased the piece of furniture, receiving a receipt from the manager.

In a short time a singular procession was seen by night revelers in the park, wending its way from the main restaurant to the public road. Four sturdy messengers carried a sofa, on which reclined the Count and his companions, provided with napkins tied to their canes. Amid cheers the procession left the grounds. It had not porceeded far before a night policeman halted the paraders and demanded an explanation. The Count said he was on his way home, and had bought the sofa, and that it was his property. The officer probably thought the question of propriety too important for him to decide, and escorted the prisoners, including the sofa, into the presence of the precinct captain. The Count told his story and presented his receipt for the sofa's purchase. The captain verified these statements by telephoning to the restaurant proprietor, and advised his unwilling guests to go home.

In less than an hour the captain was astonished to have the sofa and its retinue of attendants brought before him by another officer. The party was released a second time. The incident was repeated three times, and the captain was becoming a fit subject for the mad house, when he had a brilliant idea. Four officers were ordered to march with the Count, the sofa, and the party, and to escort them home.

Slowly the procession moved toward the shore. When a landing place was reached the Count and his friends made a jump for the bridge, where a motor launch was in waiting. Amid the cheers of the crowd the launch sped away, leaving the officers to carry the sofa wearily back to the station.

Count Gasta's nickname, the cat Count," was acquired as the result of an incident in Paris some years ago, when, as the result of a wager, he promended the principal boulevards, leading four trained Persian cats harnessed to a leather leash, and preceded by an organ grinder.

Health and Beauty Talks

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

A. W. A.: You say you can find nothing that will protect tender skin from the sun. Try this and I know you will not suffer from sunburn, tan or freckles: Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Apply this, with the palm of the hand, to the face, neck and forearms in the morning and you will find it will not rub off or show like powder. It is a true complexion beautifier, for it restores and preserves the soft and rosy color of youth. This inexpensive lotion is especially fine for those who have dark, sallow or oily skin.

S. L. J.: Very few women are blessed with eyes that are naturally "beaming and radiant." Most probably those dazzling eyes you envy are the result of using a tonic to strengthen and brighten the eyes. Get from your druggist one ounce of crystos and dissolve it in a pint of water and you will have a perfect home-made eye tonic. One or two drops in each eye will relieve inflammation, dullness, redness and soreness. It will not smart or burn. Many persons with weak eyesight find they can dispense with eyeglasses after using this tonic daily a month or two.

G. L. M.: "Shampoo" is a word of Hindoo origin and means "to lather, rub and wash the head." When using canthrox for shampooing, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water; pour on the head a little at a time and rub well—just as you would with an ordinary shampoo; then rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly with warm water. Canthrox makes an abundance of lather and will remove that fine scurf of which you complain, for it is nothing more nor less than dandruff. Don't use soap when shampooing, for it leaves the scalp hot and hard and causes streaks in the hair when drying. When you use canthrox the hair dries quickly and is soft, bright, fluffy and not streaky.

Osiris: Have you tried to preserve your youthful looks? Is your husband correct when he says you do not look as young as you should If you want to keep your skin clear, fresh and velvety, you must take care of it. Use almozoin cream jelly both as a massage and face cream and your complexion will be fine and free from blemish. Get from your druggist one ounce of almozoin, dissolve it in one-half pint cold water. add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine; stir well and let stand over night. Then you have a cream that contains no oils or fats to make hair grow or cause the skin to become dark and greasy looking. As a treatment for blackheads it is effective and at the same time "mild as milk," for it completely removes the pore-dirt and decreases the size of the pores, so that the blackheads will not return. Masaging with this almozoin cream prevents roughness, removes wrinkles and keeps the flesh firm and plump.

E. S. F.: You will not need to worry about your hair coming out when you comb it if you will quit experimenting with ready-prepared hair tonics. You need only to use a good quinine tonic two or three times a week; you can prepare this at home by dissolving an ounce of quinzoin in one-half pint alcohol, then adding a half pint of water. Rub this tonic thoroughly into the scalp and it will stop your hair coming out and remove the dandruff entirely. I find it excellent for excessive oily, dull or brittle hair. It is the only dependable remedy I have ever found for hair and scalp troubles and will be found very invigorating.

A. B. C.: You are right when you say no powder or cosmetic will help your complexion while your blood is out of order. Good health is the foundation of a good complexion. This tonic is fine for those who are thin and sallow: Dissolve one-half cup of sugar and one ounce of kardene in one-half pint of alcohol; then add enough hot water to make a full quart and you will have a sufficient supply of a dependable home-made system tonic that will tone up your system and build up your strength. Kardene aids digestion, arouses a torpid liver and purifies the blood. It will clear your complexion of sallowness and pimples and give a charming comeliness that is denied when you are so "run down." You can purchase Kardene from any first-class druggist.

Alixe: It is useless to fret and worry and feel utterly wretched just because you are "becoming too fat to be graceful." If you will get from your druggist four ounces of parnotis and dissolve it in 1½ pints of hot water and take a tablespoonful of this harmless flesh reducer before each meal you soon will be satisfied that, while you may not regain your former slim and elegant figure, you will not be so stout as to feel constantly chagrined in society or business.

Carmen: Those tormenting and distressing hairs on your forearms and face will disappear if you will apply a paste made by mixing a little water with delatone. Apply it and allow it to remain for two or three minutes, then wipe off and wash with warm water. Delatone is expensive and retails for one dollar an ounce, but one ounce is enough for two or three applications—and that is all you will ever need. Even should the hair return after the first application, it will be thin and light colored. The second or third application removes it effectively and permanently.

Colorado rolls up a large women's vote, and the women are keenly alive to their opportunities. So when it became a matter of certainty that the State would be entitled to one more representative in Congress the women of the capital city met and determined to make a united effort to capture the office for one of their sex.

chief glory of Naples is its location, its bay and its Na- Museum. Otherwise its attrac- chiefly in the fact that it is starting point for many delight- excursions, one of which is that Island of Capri and its fa- Blue Grotto, to Sorrento, to and to Vesuvius. A delightful sail of about an hour on one of the pretty steamers that ply between Capri and Naples brings you to the island, one shore of which is honeycombed with grottos. The steamer stops and a fleet of row boats immediately surrounds it. You step into one of them and are rowed to the mouth of the Blue Grotto. The entrance is so small and so low that you have to lie down in the boat in order to get through. Once inside you are amazed at the wonder of the water—like a sheet of blue flame—and as transparent as glass. The chamber is as large as a double city lot in Los Angeles and about forty feet high. The only illumination comes from the entrance and from the reflection from the bottom sixty feet below.

A drive over the Island of Capri affords the most marvelous views of the Bay of Naples, Vesuvius and all the surrounding country. There is scarcely a flat place on the island. It rises, tier above tier, the roadways winding into terraces from height to height. Beautiful villas rise among the trees, some of them owned by well-known literary people. It is here that Maxim Gorky has his Italian villa—a picturesque Venetian red brick building set in a nest of trees and flowers, and perched on a height overlooking the bay. Like all Italy, this mountainous island is intensively cultivated. Lemon groves with fruit of the most astonishing size line the terraces. Some of the lemons are quite as large as our grape fruit.

A half hour's ride on the steamer brings you back to the mainland—the very tip end of the deeply curved horseshoe shore within which the Bay of Naples lies, and you are at Sorrento—the home of the late F. Marion Crawford, whose handsome villa is pointed out to you from the steamer's deck. It is here, too, that William Waldorf Astor—he who has become a subject of England's King—has a villa and just now he is building another at a cost of some $400,000. All these villas face the bay with a sheer drop of several hundred feet straight down to the water. Our hotel balcony hung directly over the seawall, and when we disembarked from the row boat that brought us ashore from the steamer we were brought up in a lift to the ground floor of the hotel several hundred feet above the sea.

Sorrento is one of the beauty spots of Italy's coast as well as the silk center of this part of the Continent. The Sorrento silks are famous for their fine quality and exquisite colorings. Gorgeous Roman scarfs tempt the lires from your purse and the wood carving and inlaid work of Sorrento artists is a thing of wonder and delight.

A Dead City.

We went by carriage from Sorrento to Pompeii, skirting for miles the Bay of Naples over a smooth white road seemingly carved from the solid limestone of the hills over which it wound. Vesuvius loomed against the blue sky quiet and calm in the June sunlight without a cloud or vapor hanging about it and at its feet lay the dead city of Pompeii.

One would never have dreamed that this fair mountain, smiling in the summer sun, could belch forth such fire and flood of lava streams and work such awful destruction. To me it was a most depressing sight—this wandering through a dead city with stark, starring walls—a veritable corpse of architecture.

The ruins of Pompeii show many features common to the modern city. Its finest homes were built on the plan of our own Southern California Spanish houses—around an open court with broad patios opening to the fountains that played in the center. In several of these homes the beautiful frescoing on the walls is well preserved and grass and flowers have been permitted to grow again in the court and the statuary, the originals of which are in the National Museum at Naples, has been copied and replaced. The original waterpipes which supplied the fountains have been unearthed in some instances and the water can be turned on so that the fountains play as they did centuries ago when happy Pompeiians sported there.

Counterfeit Coins.

Just now Italy is struggling with a mass of counterfeit coins in the shape of the 20-centime piece (equal to 4 cents in our money,) and which corresponds in their ratio to our nickel. The government issued a quantity of these coins to the value of 10,000,000 francs some years ago. It has recently been discovered that between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 francs are now in circulation in the shape of these coins—all the overplus being counterfeit. An edict was issued the other day recalling them. The scurry to get rid of them now is something extraordinary, and the nimble way in which they pass from hand to hand makes your eyes blink. Tourists in Naples suffered much on account of unfamiliarity with Italian coins, but now we "have our eye teeth cut" and none but the new coinage of that particular denomination passes into our purse. Americans hand the message on from one to the other, and the watchword just now is, "Don't touch the 20-centime pieces."

Macaroni and Music.

We came directly from the land of "backsheesh" to Italy. In Egypt and in Palestine we were continually besought by little street beggars for "bachsheesh." Our first appeal in Naples took a distinctly different form.

"Macaroni, madame," piped a small voice at my elbow and when I asked the guide for an explanation he said that the child meant that he wanted a centime to buy macaroni with.

The street children of Italy do not whistle like American boys—they sing instead. And such voices! Soft and mellow and sweet as a lute. You hear them late in the evening and at dawn as the little fellows go about their daily tasks—which may be simply begging—asking for "macaroni!" I often wonder how many embryo opera singers I hear day by day. On the steamers which ply the bay there is always a band of sweet singers with guitars and mandolins, and they give us snatches from "Santa Lucia," "La Spagnola," and such tuneful numbers. No rag-time music in Italy. Even the workmen whistle the air of an opera.

And we have reached the land of the hurdy-gurdy—hurrah! hurrah! There is nothing that so adds to the gaiety of street life in the city as the hurdy-gurdy, and the children dancing to its harmonious strains. I have always regretted that this particular music box has never penetrated any further west in the United States than Chicago.

Even the fruit stands in Italy are artistic. The strawberries are arranged in pretty baskets, the handles of which are decorated with the ripe, red fruit, suspended by the stems, and the cherries are tied up in bunches and pyramids, which sell for 2 centimes each.

The Man at the Hose.

In foreign countries it is the novelty that at first strikes you. In Naples we notice that there are no sidewalks on many of the principal business thoroughfares, and pedestrians promenade the pavements at their own risk between trolley cars, cabs, carts and carriages. Many of the street car tracks instead of being in the center of the street as in America, are laid at one side, just next the curb, leaving the other half of the street free for carriages.

The street sprinkler is a mammoth hose which is operated by a brawny Italian who swings it around recklessly. As your cab, drawn by its stout little horse, fat and round as a butterball, comes pacing down the street the man at the hose takes no apparent notice of you and just as you are about to scream and duck your head to avoid a wetting from the streaming hose pipe he deftly switches it off in another direction and you go on your way rejoicing that your one and only traveling hat isn't ruined.

The Revivalist Encouraged.

A young enthusiastic revivalist had been exhorting a congregation in a small western town for over two hours without preceptible effect. He was somewhat discouraged until a rough old miner interrupted him with:

"Say, brother, I'd like to ask a question."

The young revivalist beamed. "Thank you, my man, for your interest," he replied. "I shall be more than sign, which I am very, very glad to Your desire for enlightment is a good glad to set you right on any question. see. Now what is it you want to know?"

"Kin I smoke?" asked the miner.—[Denver Times

REAWAKENING.

AN AMERICAN RABBI MAKES AN IMPRESSION IN LONDON.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, July 22.—Dr. Stephen A. Wise, one of the leaders of Jewish thought in the United States, has established in a visit here, a reputation as a speaker of extraordinary power and eloquence. Not only has he galvanized religious reform into new life, but he will return to New York with the assurance that many young Jews that were drifting from the fold are being retained for Judaism.

In reality it is he who has effected the change through his personal magnetism and spiritual enthusiasm. He passionately asserts, however, that it is due to the principles he endeavors to put forth as a true presentment of Judaism. The principles may inspire the man but it is the man who inspires the people.

Already the congregants of the West London synagogue, home of English Reform Judaism, have issued a manifesto announcing new resolutions; shorter services are to be partly rendered in English, as many members are unable to follow the Hebrew reading, the study of that language being abandoned to a large extent nowadays; another innovation is the sitting together of men and women during divine service, a thing unheard of in the old Mosaic tradition, which separates the sexes in oriental manner.

An outsider is likely to think the influence of Dr. Wise to be destructive and not constructive, but he urges that the Jewish Religious Union is not a movement away from Judaism, but one back to Judaism. As he said to me at the St. Petersburg Hotel:

"Jewish reformation has no finality; it will always continue to become the real help of those who profess a belief in Judaism. We do not want the religion of our fathers; what we want is a vital religion of our own. We revere the dead, but we cannot be content with the hand of a dead authority which has long ceased to rule.

"Liberal Judaism is one of the few hopeful signs of the present day; it has confirmed and strengthened the loyalty of those Jews who, without it would have gone out of the synagogue. Liberal Judaism goes down deep into life; it is life, and the men who are its leaders are men of deep piety and religious feeling. I, too, have a trinity, and it is the trinity of liberal Judaism—Monotheism, Monomoralism, and Monohumanism.

"Yes, much has been heard of intermarriage; the intermarriage I fear is the marriage of the Jew with the baser ideas of today."

Of the various strata of Jewish people in the United States, Dr. Wise says: "Until sixty years ago there were only Spanish and Portuguese Jews. Today the members of the Spanish and Portuguese Jewish synagogues are made up of Germans and Poles. The Spanish and Portuguese have completely disintegrated—they have intermarried and become absorbed in the general population. They are self-sufficing and look with such scorn on the other Jews that they live outside Jewry.

"About 1840 a great German invasion set in and lasted between thirty and forty years. These immigrants were the founders of the Jewish reform movement in America. Following the German immigration came the great settlement of Russian Jews."

Present day American Jewry, Dr. Wise divides into three classes.

"First," he says, "there are the fathers who remain committed to Judaism through association as they have known it in the land of their birth. Secondly, there is a large section of the younger generation which has completely divorced itself from religion; this section takes it for granted that Judaism is dead.

"Thirdly, there are the younger Russians, a deeply loyal class, hungry for something Jewish. This is the class we are trying to reach. The Jewry of the America of tomorrow is going to be of Russian descent. The Jews who have come from Russia are gaining in power, in influence and in wealth. They are going to contribute something fine and high to the idealism of the American people. In New York civic life we count on the vote of the naturalized Russian Jew and his descendants being cast for righteousness."

EACH-AND-ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

Send all names for membership, all inquiries regarding Each and All Society or chapter work and all material for the page direct to the president of Each and All Society, No. 1886 Preston avenue, Los Angeles.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Co-operation of Each and All Society Wanted in Fight Upon Health Menaces.

Dear Girls: A month of our new year has rolled away. A busy, happy month that has been brightened by many expressions of love and faithfulness upon the part of the members toward the official board and the work that has been planned for the coming year.

So many new faces greeted us at our last reception, as well as many old-time members, that with the refreshments, and flowers, music and literary programme, all in tune with the glad summer day, we felt that our society had received a new impetus of joy and blessing.

The surprise of meeting one of our author girls from Ontario, and the little speech she gave us, added to the pleasure of the afternoon. The little "afterward" she wrote in a letter was this:

"I want to tell you how much I enjoyed yesterday afternoon. I only wish it were possible for me to attend every meeting. It is so beautiful to know the girls are giving time and strength and talent to make the world sweeter and brighter for others."

This was also appreciated. The Authors' Chapter is invited to send us more surprises in the form of gifted members to our "at homes."

We are very much in need of some one who will take the chairmanship of our Emergency Chapter. We are now working in coöperation with the Associated Charities, regarding this method of benevolences the best. We are also trying to raise a fund for this chapter, by which we can enable women to help themselves. The offer made elsewhere on this page by the chairman of the Health Chapter is primarily for the benefit of the Emergency Chapter.

Often the loan of a few dollars, without interest, to a self-respecting woman, places her in a position of independence, where temptations cannot harm her. We are in need of helpers in this work?

We find that a great many girls and women in this city have no means of livelihood, and often, even if they have talent in any line of work, do not know how to obtain the work for which they are fitted.

Pending the finding of a suitable chairman for our Emergency Chapter, any reader of this page may write to the president of Each and All Society, and information available as to the best methods of obtaining positions will be given. Send stamp for reply.

The Federation of Women's Clubs is asking for our coöperation in the fight against the fly and impure milk. Surely we will help to abate these nuisances, which are forerunners of disease.

Space will not be taken up to impress methods of extermination of these evils, as all our girls are surely aware of the "how and when." Here, however, is a hint: Flies do not like castor beans, sweet peas and lavender. These planted near chicken yard fences, provide screen, beautiful blooms and keep the flies away from that section of city yards. The seed of the castor bean placed in the runway of moles will drive them away, thus serving two purposes.

It is a harder matter to obtain pure milk, but the constantly increasing demand for pure milk will increase the supply. So we will be unceasing in our demands.

We are asking as an organization for an increased membership roll We would like each member who has a thought that would benefit another, to express it on this page. Any one can be a member who is in harmony with our pledge. An active member with the privelege of voting and joining any chapter pays 25 cents dues to the general treasury. An associate member may help the general society or any chapter with her time or talents or with helpful articles for the page. The columns of the page are also open to all active members.

It is by having beautiful ideas and expressing them in golden thoughts that golden deeds will "rid life's garden of its weeds."

This page is devoted to those who see the golden opportunity of giving their best thought to others. Surely there are many who desire to grasp so great a privilege.

Those who cannot express their thoughts in writing may join our Writers' Chapter, and the chairman will train them. She is helping a number of our girls to break the silence of non-expression. There is not one person in the world but who has some idea which, if given expression, would do a great deal toward making the world move with less friction. We are searching for these ideas and we want them expressed in thoughts and in the printed word on this page. Does your brain hold one of these great ideas? Well, so loose it and let it go. What if everyone did as you are doing—keeping your ideas close bound. The world would make so much friction as it revolved, no one could hear himself think, and our society would never have had this page for your benefit. This page is the evolution of an idea of The Times management as a means of the expression of the thought of women for the benefit of one another, of the home and social conditions.

We want you to take advantage of the opportunities our society and this page gives you, for your ideas are needed in the world of thought.

An Answer.

Mrs. W. F. W. of Los Angeles writes to the president as follows: "I know you must be too busy to write me, but I inclose postage so you can notify the proper person that I would like to resume my readings on the subject of generating life electricity, or at least like to know the reason why not.

In reply to this the chairman of the Health Chapter states "That among the number who took up this course of lessons were only a few who sent sufficient postage to pay for the stationery used. She sent the lessons to all who requested them as long as the postage held out, hoping that because the lessons were so valuable those who were interested in them would try to help place them among earnest students who were eager to find a method of keeping in health, without drugs, and without any assistance beyond correct combinations of food and natural methods of exercise, breathing and bathing. A health scientist of this city stated that one lesson alone was worth $25. Yet these incomparable lessons were offered for enough postage to pay for the stationery upon which they were copied. The chairman makes now the following offer: She will send one of these lessons to any member of the Each and All Society who will read it, then who will invite her friends in to hear it read, and take up a collection for the benefit of the work of Each and All Society. This is to members outside of Los Angeles. To those in Los Angeles she will give the lesson in any lady's home to the lady and her friends, providing the lady is either an active or associate member of this society, and that she takes up a collection for the benefit of our treasury.

The lessons on generating electricity in the body are the only methods of keeping in health, easily learned and as wonderful in results as wireless telegraphy. The lessons on the care and growth of the hair, if followed, would supply very quickly the demand for a beautiful head of hair without resorting to the hair store.

Those interested send inquiry and stamped envelope for reply to the president of Each and All Society.

Wants to Help.

E. M. K. of Los Angeles says, in her letter, that she is interested in the work of Each and All Society. Her letter follows:

"Dear President—Although I am not a member of your society, I am very much interested in your good work. I am trying to live up to your beautiful pledge by doing some little kindness each day to make the world a little sweeter place to live in.

"The reason I am writing you today is to ask you if you will kindly publish the name and address of some "shut in" to whom I could send The Woman's Companion every month. I am not giving my name, as I am doing this in His Name. I also wish to hear of some others who wish for flowers, etc., and will gladly do what little I can.

"Please accept my best wishes for all success in your noble work. Believe me to be a silent but sincere worker 'In His Name.' E. M. K."

Write Mrs. Ida F. T., R. R. No. 1, box 11, Los Angeles, and ask her if she would not accept your offer. Let me ask you, as a passing thought, if you are working in His Name, is it not the courteous thing in writing for any information to give your proper address? You take advantage of these columns, of some one's time to advance your work. Should you not then consider the ethical values of your relation with these columns, as well as the cause you have at heart?

The official board of this society appreciate the space that this greatest of newspapers gives to the organization, and it desires to impress upon the readers of this page the code of newspaper and fraternal ethics, to which writers or inquirers should rigidly adhere.

(Emblem, the California Poppy.)

Send your full name and address, and if the article or inquiry is for publication, and you do not wish your name published, you may adopt a pen name.

Housework as Physical Culture.

Housework is an excellent means of physical culture—if it is done properly. All work should be accomplished, whenever it is posible to do so, by bending slightly from the hips and not the shoulders. Even when going upstairs, be careful to stand erect and make the legs and knees do the work of lifting the body, and the result will be that you do not tire so easily or get out of breath. It is within the power of every woman to reach a perfect stage of physical development. In some cases it requires a longer time than in others, but every one can do it if she will.

A woman should learn not only how to perfect her physical condition, form and complexion, but also how to preserve them.

There is nothing more desirable than health, strength and beauty, and these may be had in a comparatively short time by scientific physiological exercise, when modified to harmonize with the age, physical condition and capacity of the individual, says an exchange. Marvelous changes in the form, disposition and complexion of women can be brought about by a few months' systematic training.

If you wish to have a good figure you must learn to stand well. One of the best methods of acquiring a good figure is to spend about ten minutes every day in special exercises. The best time for taking these exercises is in the morning, immediately after rising and before garments are put on that compress the figure.

If you are sincere in wanting to do things the right way, do not forget the great value of rest. If you feel unfit for a meal, try ten minutes' rest, flat on your back and a glass of hot milk.

The most expensive rest cures, which are utilized to build up the nervous, run-down people, simply consist in rest of mind and body and liberal diet. It can be managed much more cheaply at home if you will only give your mind to it.

For, after all, there is nothing quite so precious in the world as health, or so miserable as sickness, and it is worth taking a little trouble to get and keep in first-class condition at all times.

Trials of the Poet.

I'd sing you a song about childhood, life's joyous and garlanded time, but I'm weary of ringing in "wildwood," and there's no other word that will rhyme. I'd warble of bright, sunny fountains, where water and music are blent, but I'd have to lug in a few mountains or my lines wouldn't fit worth a cent. I'd sing of a life on the billows, where the dolphins and flying fish race, but I'd have to say something of willows, which would have nothing to do with the case. I'd sing of the moonbeams that quiver, but I'd have to quote onions and liver to make the verse twitter all right.—[Emporia Gazette.

About Reading.

A healthy taste and just discrimination in the choice of literature are of vital importance to a young woman, says an exchange.

Upon this depends much of her future happiness and of her mental and moral development. Unfortunately this is a matter which is left too frequently to haphazard.

An immature girl is generally allowed to exercise overmuch freedom in the selection of books without restraint and guidance on the part of parents.

It is not to be wondered at, then, if she neglects standard authors in days when Scott is voted slow and Dickens dry, and worse than wastes her time on society journals and French novels.

Once the appetite for this sort of stuff is formed it is difficult to eradicate and its effects are deplorable. Hardly anything will more quickly rob a young girl of the bloom of freshness and deprive her of that natural modesty which is her chief charm.

It creates an injurious love of sensation, which after a time is surfeited, leaving the mind empty and dissatisfied.

A pet poodle should not be subjected to a constant diet of caramels and curry. There are times when strong and highly-spiced literature is what one's condition needs, but even then sanity should be combined.

Just a Hint.

One of our old-time members, Mrs. Ida F. T., R. D. No. 1, box 11, writes renewing her allegiance to the Each and All Society. She says: "Come out and eat muskmelon when they are ripe." In the long ago the Walking Chapter stopped there once on one of their weekly tramps, and ate lunch under the umbrella trees. Mrs. T. sometimes gets blue and discouraged. She is longing to see an Each and All Girl. This is a little hint for some one.

Fie, Fie, Girls!

Only ten cents received in stamps for the wheel chair for Martha at this writing. Has that dear old-fashioned name gone entirely out of commission? If it has, Martha will have to wait until our Emergency Chapter gets into running order before we can help her. Our past chairman is off on a vacation and the new girl not quite ready yet for work. In the meantime we are still waiting for our Marthas to help.

NEWS OF THE VENICE BRANCH.

The Venice branch of Sunshine Society held a very interesting meeting last Wednesday. A feature of the meeting was an interesting report of the National Sunshine convention, given by Mr. Westover, father of Cynthia Westover Alden, president-general of the International Sunshine Society. Mr. Westover attended the convention as the delegate from California. He stated among other things that the national convention was a most enthusiastic one, and that reports were submitted from almost every country in the world. The entertainment given by this branch Friday evening was a great success. It netted the branch $58.50 for its treasury. The branch will give another entertainment in the near future,. A great many of the Los Angeles sunshiners attended the Venice benefit, and all reported having an enjoyable time. The proceeds of the benefit will be toward the rest home as the branch is desirous to have this home maintained as a permanent feature of its work. All at Sunshine Lodge have enjoyed a good time on their vacations.

THE LOS ANGELES BRANCH.

The regular monthly meeting of the Los Angeles branch of Sunshine Society was held Thursday: The several committees submitted reports of splendid work done. Even though it is vacation time, there are enough members in town to keep the good work up.

The Wheel-chair Committee reported having bought another chair to add to its collection, and there are two on hand waiting for a call from some needy one.

The Flower Committee reported the sending out of fruit, delicacies and flowers to convalescents, and shut-ins during the month. The Investigation Committee reported through its chairman, much systematic work done and accounted for money expended in Sunshine work through July.

The society is sometimes seriously hampered in its work, through the giving of wrong addresses in reports of cases of need sent to it. It is therefore requested that when such reports are made, care will be exercised in giving correct names and addresses, for much time is lost in oftimes fruitless search.

The society has been asked to secure a position for a woman who will go as companion to an edrely woman or take care of children.

The society is anxious to have some of its friends donate a lounge or something that may be used for a lounge, which may be put on a porch for the use of a sick young girl, who is in need of the sunlight and air. If any of the readers of The Times have such an article of furniture they wish to devote to Sunshine work, call up the president of Sunshine Society, No. 73181.

Articles for the sewing box may be sent to the home of Mrs. Fox, where the members of Sunshine Society will meet during September to make up things for the Christmas box.

Woman's First Need.

A well-known New York club composed of literary and artistic women—professionals, too, who earn their living by the drip of their pens and brushes—recently decided that they must curtail expenses. The club met in a committee of the whole to decide what could best be given up.

The subject of subscriptions to periodicals came up for consideration, as the club subscribes for all the leading magazines, and that item is a large one on its list of expenses. It seemed as if this might easily be reduced.

One strong-minded woman suggested that they cut off from their list a certain fashion magazine, as it is one of the most expensive, being illustrated with elaborate colored plates. The club rose in a body, however, and reproached the suggesting member bitterly, saying with determination. "Anything but that. Literature, What is that? Art. What of it? Literature and art we can furnish ourselves, but fashions we must have from the highest authorities all over the world. We will surrender, if we must, the highest contemporary thought on any subject other than dress, but for that we stand eternally."

The strong-minded one apologized, the fashion magazine was retained and five $1 publications were cut off to sustain it.—[New York Press.

News from Blossom.

A card from our Blossom says: "I have just returned to my native city, Chicago; am almost counting the days when I can write more fully; have seen no Each and All page since June 11. Trust the society thrives and that all are well and happy."

Nature Its Own Reward.

The agriculturist, the market-fisherman, the professional aviator, go, respectively, at the earth, the sea and the sky, for what they can "get out of it" in the way of a living. To such—if their aim be merely sordid—the universe gives charry heed, and only under stress gives up to them crops, fish and fame. Itself it witholds. That major compensation is kept, rare and inviolate, for him who seeks in nature not a living but a life. This goddess is justly vain, and of a holy selfishness. She loves to be loved for what she is, not for what she bestows. To behold a sunset for the sake of the sunset yeilds a larger meed of rapture than to behold a sunset for the sake of a painting. Life for life's sake—with the purse forgot—is the law which underlies hign living and great gaining. "What will ye have," asks Nature, "mine or me?" And he who answers, "Thee, not thine!" gets all.—Metropolitan Magazine.

Remember the Waiter.

George W. Coleman, the noted sociologist, discussed, during the recent sociological conference at Sagamore Beach, tips and tipping.

"I have a friend"—so Mr. Coleman ended—"who belongs to an anti-tipping association. My friend, in obeying the rules of his society, has many quaint experiences.

"He went traveling in the West in the spring. He dined one night in a fashionable western restaurant, and after paying his bill, he gathered up the change that had been brought upon a silver plate and dropped it into his waistcoat pocket.

"As he rose to depart, the waiter said in a low, appealing voice:

" 'Surely you won't forget me, sir?'

" 'No, no,' said my friend, 'I'll write to you."—[Philadelphia Record.

Babies and School Children—Striking Pictures and Points Here and Th

OUR NIGHT IN THE ATTIC.

BY FRANCES O'BRIEN.

Accompanying the following story was this little note from Frances:

"Dear Friends—I read all about 'The Babies and the School Children,' which you have in The Times every Sunday, and I am interested in the stories, so have written a little story that really happened to my sister and me. I hope it will be published in next Sunday's paper. I am 14 years old and go to the West Vernon-avenue school."

This is a true story of two very brave girls. Brave in the daylight but not in the dark. It is about my sister and me.

We have a fine, roomy attic in our house. In it are lots of old, musty books, old trunks and any number of three-legged tables, besides lots of mice and their belongings.

Well, one day this vacation, my sister, Agnes, who is a year younger than I, thought it would be a dandy idea and would be just lots of fun besides, to sleep up in the old attic some night. Besides it being a lark, we thought it would be a fine way to show the family how brave we were. No sooner had we talked of the plan than we wanted to do it, so we decided we should try it that very night.

The first thing we had to do was to carry up some bed clothing, for there was an old bed up there already, that we thought it would be fun to sleep in, in spite of it having a great hole in the middle of the mattress, where the spring sticks through. Then we brought up a lamp, a piece of carpet, our rocking chair, and, last of all, a great, big soap box, which we draped as a dresser. We worked all morning at it, and when we got everything looking neat and "comfy," we sat down and enjoyed looking over and talking about our new lodgings. We stayed up there until supper time. Then we went down to our supper, and did up the dishes after supper, and then, although it was only 7 o'clock, we thought we would go up to our little private room and get ready for bed. When we were climbing upstairs, our little sister begged to go, too, but we would not let her, although she cried, for we thought it was too fine a secret for three. It didn't look quite as nice in the dimness up there in the attic as it looked in the daytime. The lamp sputtered and made shadows in the corners, but we hurried up and undressed and hopped into bed.

Then we lay up very close to each other, but somehow we could not get to sleep. Then I began to imagine, if I closed my eyes, something would grab me. I guess my sister was getting pretty scared, too, she seemed too scared to talk, and I could feel she was trembling. The wind began to blow lightly outside, and it made the windows rattle and the rafters squeak. Then, with these noises, I began to think I saw ghostly figures coming around the bed. I was now trembling with fright, and the next thing I heard a sob from my sister, and then she said, as she grabbed me: "Oh, let's go down to our own bed. I can't stand this any longer."

But it would have taken more nerve than I had to get up and walk along until I came to the stairs. My sister began to cry louder, and it only made me more frightened. I could feel my heart thumping up against me. But just then I jumped up quickly, threw the covers off of me and said: "Come on" to Agnes. It didn't take her long, and she fairly clung to me as I groped the way to the stairs. I don't know now how I ever got there. It seemed forever, but we got down, and never took a breath until we were in our own little bed downstairs, with our heads under the covers, and holding onto each other for dear life.

I can't begin to tell you how glad I was. We don't ever care to try sleeping in the attic again to prove our bravery to the family.

Logic Wasted.

"Dad," he asked, "does it cost much to keep a lion?"

"It does, my son."

"A wolf would make a good meal for a lion, wouldn't it, dad?"

"Yes."

"And a fox would be enough for the wolf, wouldn't it, dad?"

"I suppose so. Go on and play."

"A fox would be satisfied with a hawk, and a sparrow would satisfy a hawk, eh, dad?"

"H'h! If you don't go away——"

"And a spider would make a meal for a sparrow?"

"Yes, yes! Now——"

"Wait a minute, dad. Now we're coming to it. A spider would be satisfied with a fly, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, my son."

"And a drop of molasses would be enough for a fly, wouldn't it?"

"Well, supposing it would?"

"Yes, that's just it, dad. Now, what I want you to tell me is this: Could a man keep a lion for more than a year with a quart of molasses?"

And then the sound of a falling slipper awoke the echoes of the stilly night.—[Brooklyn Eagle.

Good Rules.

Every boy and girl will find helpful the following rules, which have been adopted by the Children's Guild of Courtesy in connection with the London County Council schools. Many of the other schools in London and vicinity have followed the example of this guild, with good results:

Courtesy to yourself—

Be honest, truthful and pure.

Do not use bad language.

Keep your face and hands clean, and your clothes and boots brushed and neat.

Keep out of bad company.

Courtesy at home—

Help your parents as much as you can.

Be kind to your brothers and sisters.

Do not be selfish, but share all your good things.

Do your best to please your parents.

This Is Great Sport.

Boys of the Garvanza neighborhood are amusing themselves by tobogganing down the side of the steep hill near Avenue 50, and Buena Vista street. The summer sun has dried the wiry grass on the slope and boys have rigged sleds of boards with iron runners and these coast down the hill at a lively rate, almost as good as do sleds in the eastern snows.

The sleds have worn three runways down the hillside for a distance of 200 feet each, and as high as a score of boys have been playing on the hill. The success of these youngsters gives a good idea to other boys in various parts of the city. Iron or steel runners wear very slick on dead grass of the long, slender variety and there are all kinds of chances for fun if good places are found on the many hills in the city. Too much dust will spoil the sport, but when one runway becomes too dusty, another may be selected.

A Merry Picnic.

The annual picnic given to the little Chinese children and their mammas by the ladies of the Congregational churches of the city is looked forward to each year with much pleasurable anticipation, especially by the tiny folks.

The picnic this year was given at Eastlake Park, special cars and automobiles carried the guests to the park, where a most happy day was spent playing Chinese and American games. The accompanying picture shows the little children enjoying the feast that was spread and served to them by the ladies who are in charge of the Sunday-school work. The little Chinese children are very fond of ice cream and they were given a fine treat of this delicacy at the picnic. Over 150 children and their mammas attended the picnic this year.

A Visit to Fairyland.

How a Dream Came True—A Little Girl's Faith in Fairies Established.

BY HENRIETTA M. DREXEL, AGE 16.

"Oh, I don't believe in fairies one bit," said Marion as she yawned and laid aside her book of fairy tales in which she had been intensely interested all morning. "I would just like to see those fairies and get a peek into Fairyland.

"Maybe you don't believe in fairies now, but you'll soon believe. Come right with me," said a squeaky voice in Marion's ear. "Yes, you had better look scared, you unbelieving mortal." continued the same voice as Marion jumped and looked with frightened eyes right into the bold ones of an impish-looking dwarf at her elbow.

"What—where are you taking me?" asked Marion, as the little man began pulling her along by the sleeve, and she found herself reluctantly following.

"You are going with me to Fairyland. Hurry, I have no patience with slow people," replied the midget and he jerked Marion very roughly as she still seemed unwilling to follow her queer companion.

Nevertheless she was led along. The mortal and dwarf guide walked through a long dark tunnel which was so damp and cold that the girl shivered. Marion wished she had been more stubborn and not started, but curiosity now urged her on. Soon the tunnel began to grow lighter and lighter; then suddenly Marion was dazzled by a great brightness. She and the imp had reached the end of the tunnel and were even now in the throne-room of the queen of Fairyland. Marion was at first quite blinded by the great light and glitter of everything.

Countless fairies flitted airily about. The little girl was startled when the imp by her side took her rudely by the arm and said:

"You rude child, bow and pay homage to the queen."

At this command Marion stepped to the throne and knelt down before the beautiful fairy queen, kissing the hem of her royal robe before rising.

"O queen, forgive me. I did not mean rudeness to you. I was rather frightened at first. Please forgive," pleaded Marion in a trembling voice.

"Arise, mortal child, I forgive thee with all my heart. Perhaps Impy has been rather cross to you. He is always so," and the queen shook her finger at the naughty little man who had escorted Marion to Fairyland.

At this Impy knelt before the queen and asked forgiveness which was freely given by the gracious queen. Then in her clear voice the fairy ruler said to her attendants:

"Fairies, this is a mortal who has come to visit us and our kingdom. She must be shown our beautiful realm and you, Blue-Bell," she continued, "you are to take our little friend into our Treasure Hall, and as you enter, forget not to tell her of my instructions. Away now to our secret treasures." And with a wave of the queen's magical wand Marion found herself and Blue-Bell, a dainty sprite, in a bower of fragrant flowers. Humming birds flitted to and fro and Marion thought she had never seen anything so beautiful.

"Come," said the fairy, "but after we enter these halls remember that you are not to look back of you, as it is forbidden for some unknown reason by the queen. When you return again to the world I will give you a precious gift and you will depart with the fairies' blessing. These are our queen's orders. Remember my warning."

Marion promised to remember and the fairy waved her wand. All was darkness a moment, then Marion was again startled and surprised to find herself in a hall all aglitter with jewels. Oh! It was a beautiful place! Following the fairy, Marion was next led into a forest. The trees were jeweled, the branches, the leaves, everything bewilderingly beautiful and sparkling. Birds carolling beautiful songs hopped among the grasses and pretty flowers.

"Oh—O—O!" exclaimed Marion, unable to contain herself. "How beautiful!" But where was Blue-Bell? Marion looked for her fairy guide. Turning to look back of her she—

"Why, you sleepy girl. Wake up and see what father has brought for his little girl!" exclaimed a cheery voice in Marion's ear.

Startled, Marion wakened, rubbed her eyes and yawned, then her eyes fell on a beutiful new ring on her finger.

"Why, I do believe in fairies, mother, for Blue-Bell promised me a gift and here it is right on my finger," said the happy little girl, as she clasped her arms lovingly around her mother's neck.

"Why, child, I believe you have been dreaming," said her father.

"Yes, I've had the most delightful visit to Fairyland," and at the dinner table that night Marion told the family of her trip to the realm of the unreal.

Willie's Dilemma.

"Lend your ears to all that's good," Grandma said, "as each boy should."

"And your arm," said Grandpa Horne;
"Some need it to lean upon."

"Lend your hand," said Cousin Dick,
"Watch your chances; give it quick."

"Cast your eyes," said Auntie Sue,
"Round you; seek some good to do."

"If I lend my arms and ears," Willie said, almost in tears,

"And my eyes cast all around
(They'd hurt awfully on the ground,)

"And give my hand, I—I can't see
As there'd be much left of me."

AN APPROACH TO WALT WHITMAN. By Carleton Noyes. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. (Price $1.25.)

LIKE psychotheraphy, New Thought and Suffrage, the calliope prose-poetry of Walt Whitman has devastated, to a more or less degree, the American intelligence. The latest symptom of the prevalence of this psychiatric obsession is a rhapsody by Carleton Noyes, entitled "An Approach to Walt Whitman." The book is really a study of Noyes's religious transcendentalism in terms of the ballyhoo poet.

The author treads only one avenue of approach—the highway to Whitman's soul. He bears but one instrument in the band of American poetry—Walt's ophicleide. To Noyes, Whitman was a seer, a prophet, a genius, a divinity, a sacred cow, a sanctum sanctorum, a Zarathustra of poetry, a Mad Mullah of the spirit.

In gathering up all the varied elements of Walt's personality into one unit of purpose and expression, and making the whole coincide, Noyes concludes that Whitman was "given to the world to bring men a revelation of God," and, from this, Noyes (through a system of dialectics beyond the realm of mere earthly logic) concludes that the controlling motive of Walt's life was to interpret God to the men and women of his own day in terms of America and the nineteenth century. Courageously did he embark upon the soul's adventure; and triumphantly did he bring it to its [illegible]

This probing into Walt's soul seems to be the main incentive of the book, for, somehow, Noyes feels the inappropriateness of studying Whitman as a poet and the undesirability of considering him as a carpenter. That he was an enemy to art in general and to poetry in particular, Noyes does not attempt to deny. Evidently he sees that the task would be fraught with staggering difficulties, and is content to leave it in the hands of the Whitman Society of Philadelphia. But, after all—huh!—what matters the poetry of the poet. Did not Whitman display his higher virtue in the love of creatures? Did he not find the vision of the scabby bovine munching with depressed head, more enjoyable than any statue? Did he not prefer [illegible] to talcum powder? And did he not consider unhygienic whiskers preferable to a shaven chin? In these things and other anti-ablutionary practices, Noyes finds ample cause for apotheosizing his hero. It even fills him with titillating admiration when he recounts the fact that Walt ran over the sands of the sea, clad only in Adam's simplicity, declaiming Homer to the sea gulls.

The book is ultra-hyperbolic and [illegible] eulogy. Nor is there any attempt at criticism. Mr. Noyes has said that "the literary character of Whitman's work is incidental," so he has confined his literary effort to producing a psalm of exultation.

FATE OF A CLIMBER.

THE BUTTERFLY MAN. By George Barr McCutcheon. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. [illegible]

"The Butterfly Man" is a silly attempt at serious fiction, by that [illegible] master of drivel, George McCutcheon.

The story tells of the meteoric career of one Sedgwick Blynn, through high society. Blynn is blest with all necessary social qualifications, except money. He has the etiquette of a traveling [illegible], John Drew, and a [illegible] waiter combined; he looks well in evening clothes, and can eat lettuce deftly without cutting it. In his desire to make a good impression on all the young débutantes of the set, he squanders his fortune and the only monetary support of his mother and sisters. His end is horrible; he eventually is forced to live the life of a retiring and respectable [illegible]

The tale is without the customary [illegible] love story, but nevertheless is written to appeal to the [illegible] fair whose waist [illegible] does not exceed twenty [illegible]

"THE EMIGRANT TRAIL."

THE EMIGRANT TRAIL. By Geraldine Bonner. [illegible] & Co., New York. (Price [illegible]

A BOOK of sterner stuff is to be found in "The Emigrant Trail." Here we have a strong and vivid story of a trip across the plains in [illegible]. Far more engrossing than the average book of travel, the novel has the unusual gift of taking hold of the reader's attention at once, and holding it unswervingly to the end. The story, which is far from being a thriller, [illegible] lies chiefly in the composition of a strong descriptive power and an accuracy of character delineation.

[illegible] come upon the description of the Missouri frontier from where the [illegible] starts on the long trail. [illegible], his daughter, Susan; David Crystal, who is Susan's fiancé; [illegible] an old servant. The story is really an account of the evolution of Susan's nature. When she starts on the trail she is fastidious and reserved. A reticence on her part has made a barrier between herself and those with whom she came in contact. When David, the young [illegible], attempts to hold her hand, she refuses until the end of the performance, permitting it only because she thinks it her duty. As time goes on, however, and the party has left the prairie and river behind, and is testing its strength for the trail over the mountains, the artificiality is stripped from her. Fatigue and hardship overcome her attempts to look [illegible]. Her courage and will are all that are left her, and at night she goes to sleep in the tent with the [illegible]

It is then that the primitive woman in her comes to assert itself. It is the logical growth forced outward by the developing process of the environment with which her character is in harmony. Every day swept away more of her artificial reserve, and she became a human animal, governed by the instincts that belonged to [illegible] and sex. David, on the contrary, had declined. Fatigue made him [illegible] and ate into his pride. The long trail was gradually weeding out the weaker ones; and had it not been for the arrival of Lou Courant, a frontiersman, it would have been impossible for the party to have proceeded. The [illegible] died, and David [illegible] the weakness of David and the strength of Courant Susan projected herself. It resulted in her falling in love with Courant. David's jealousy led to an encounter, and he was thrown from a cliff, where they left him. Then came the important days in Susan's life. Her metamorphosis had been completed, and when Courant's demand came, she surrendered herself to him. Her vacillations of doubt and conscience were over. All of her background was gone. She was the primitive woman, and Courant her primitive mate.

The book by no means is a great book, but it has a vital, underlying idea. So rugged is it in its analysis of the resuscitation of the elemental in Susan's natire, that it seems incredible for a woman to have written it. The chief fault lies in Miss Bonner's over-insistency in driving home her points. This, and an immature handling of dialogue, make a lack in craftsmanship which is more or less noticeable throughout.

GOOD COMPANY.

WITH THE PROFESSOR. By Grant Showerman. Henry Holt & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

THE professor of this book is unlike the ordinary pundit-doctor who is hired by our universities to instruct rah-rah boys. Instead, he is a genial philosopher, humorous, kindly and exceedingly learned. He has whims, and is neither doctornaire, conventionalist nor idealist. His ambition is to teach students, first of all, the lessons of the great souls of literature—not only Longfellow, Milton, Hawthorne, Oliver Wendell Holmes and similar collegiate bores, but Rabelais, Molière, Schiller and Lawrence Stearn as well. He would let his charity begin at home. He would meet his friends on the basis of congeniality of spirit. His diversions he would seek in the realm of the uncongenial. And, above all, he would cling to the Eternal Verities.

All these things he would do, and that he means well I have no doubt. But what he actually does do is to strike an attitude, pleasing, semi-humorous and charitable, and to struggle valiantly to maintain it throughout the book.

The chapter entitled "A Prelude on Pessimism" is a charming bit of satire on that overworked word. The professor concludes that it were better to be a foolishly cheerful optimist than a wisely gloomy pessimist, but that if one wished to be satisfied with life one should cultivate equilibrium. Not a startlingly original philosophy, you will note, but amusingly set forth.

The chapters that follow—especially "The Strange Case of Dr. Scholarship and Mr. Homo," "Mud and Nails," "A Desperate Situation," "Midnight on the Roof Garden"—are disappointing, and show very clearly their effort to be frolicsome and non-scholastic,.

The ambition of the author is to display a breadth and leniency of judgment and respect for the opinions of his subordinates, a leaning toward progressiveness, and other things rarely found in the college professor. But somehow he cannot free himself entirely from the professorial meshes, and the atmosphere of collegiate dignity and of second-year Horace prevails.

COMMONPLACE STORIES.

THE GIRL FROM THE MARSH CROFT. By Selma Lagerlof. Little, Brown & Co. (Price $1.50.)

A DISAPPOINTING collection of short stories is this volume by the Nobel prize winner. A safe and sane mediocrity rests on the pages of these stories, but never once do they rise to any very dizzy literary heights. I can name, off-hand, a dozen young writers in America, the literary quality of whose work is immeasurably superior to the almost commonplace merits of "The Girl From the Marsh Croft."

EPIC OF POLAND.

WHIRLPOOLS. By Henryk Sienkiewicz. Little, Brown & Co., Boston. (Price $1.50.)

POLAND today is the weakest and most decadent nation in the civilized world. Sienkiewicz's new novel is a story of modern Poland. Here we have a canvass of stupendous dimensions, a canvass which reflects, through the story of a few individuals, the whole history of these ruined people. The characters of the story themselves are of little importance. Their individual trials and hardships are only interesting as they symbolize the decadency and demoralization of their country.

It is an impressive novel that Sienkiewicz has given us, full of color and pathos, overwhelming in its breadth of visualization, and marred only by what seems to be a personal regret on the part of the author.

FIVE LESSER NOVELS.

THE EARLY BIRD. By George Randolph Chester. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis. (Price $1.50.)
HEARTS CONTENDING. By Georg Shock. Harper & Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)
THE GAME AND THE GOLDEN BALL. By Elizabeth and Adrian Johnson. The Macaulay Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)
THE DUPLICATE DEATH. By A. C. Fox-Davies. The Macaulay Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)
AN ARMY MULE. By Charles Miner Thompson. Houghton-Mifflin Company, Boston. (Price $1.)

THERE are many lesser novels filling the book stalls. "The Early Bird," by George Randolph Chester, need not keep us too long. It is a conventional story, written in slipshod journalese, concerning the indomitable business capacity of Sam Turner. He sallies forth to the northern part of New York State on a vacation, having resolved to drop business from his mind altogether. The orthodox heroine arrives on orthodox time and not only does Sam's vacation bring him a wife, but also considerable money. A book of the variety which long since has got to be a pest.

"Hearts Contending" is a painful study in temperaments, written in largo tempo with a few allegretto cadenzas. The characters are Pennsylvania Germans. Specifically they are Job Heilig, his wife, three sons and a daughter. The tale relates the rebellion of the children against the father's attempt to regulate their lives. The daughter finds the masculine apple of her eye and straightway elopes; and one of the sons gives up the ministry for which he has been studying. Then two of the sons fall in love with the same girl—an orphan, and the ensuing quarrel results in the death of one of them. A novel which holds for me but very little interest. Is not the delineation of these German characters accurate, you ask? I am sure I do not know.

Now comes two mystery tales. Taste for such stories is a vice, but like all vices, I presume, it gives pleasure to the sinner. Therefore I shall hold up the following temptations: "The Game and the Golden Ball" and "The Duplicate Death." Both books are concerned with murder. The first one is committed in London in the fog, and the second one twenty years before the book opens. The finding of a young girl dead, under peculiar circumstances gives a clew to the solution of the latter mystery.

A book of rattling good humor is "An Army Mule," by Charles Miner Thompson. It concerns the wedding of a Civil War veteran who has acquired a reputation for stubbornness such as no soldier has ever had before. On the day of the wedding he discovers that someone has purloined his clothes, and also $10,000 which he had laid out to hand over to Hannah at the completion of the ceremony. Hard upon his calamitous discovery, he announces that there will be no wedding until he finds his money. How he recovers his clothes, and his bonds; how he makes new arrangements for the wedding and puts the ceremony through, despite his bride-to-be's affirmation that she will not marry a man who acted so outrageously; and how he settled down and lived a charitable and Christian existence—all of these things are either implied or told in Mr. Thompson's good natured story.

COMPREHENSIVE TREATISE.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RAILROADING. In six volumes. National Text Boo. Company, Chicago.

A MAMMOTH and comprehensive work in six volumes is "The Encyclopedia of Railroading," published by the National Text Book Company of Chicago. The subject of railroading is treated in a thorough and practical manner, minute information and accurate data relating to every department and division, being given. It is the most inclusive compendium of encyclopedic knowledge concerning railroads which has yet been published.

For instance, one volume deals exclusively with the course for brakemen and baggagemen. In this volume are treated not only the duties and general information of brakemen, train baggagemen and the methods of handling trains, but also the advantages to the men and the benefits to the service in these specific duties. Much space is given to an exposition of the air brake and other modern and intricate appliances with which brakemen and baggagemen work.

Another volume is devoted to the breakdown of valves and gears, spring carriages, boilers and other mechanical appliances. All lines of information necessary to men in the operating and motive-power departments, are set forth. In this volume are also included instructions concerning oil-burning, compound engines, and the manipulation and maintenance of the most modern headlights. In fact, nothing which the practical engineer, foreman, or like officer needs to know, is left out.

What is perhaps the most complete treatise on the New York air brake ever issued fills another volume of this encyclopedia. It is compiled by the air brake instructors of various railroads, and covers thoroughly, in simple language, the defects, operation and maintenance of this equipment.

In another volume the Westinghouse air brake is handled in a similar manner, information concerning the very latest additions and improvements being given not only by the Westinghouse experts, but also by men in the service who have continually handled the apparatus and know its actions and needs.

The subject of firing, together with practical information relating to valve gears, boiler and mechanical appliances, etc., comprise a fifth volume. The data is detailed and accurate, and covers the latest types and the newest mechanical devices of all the appliances treated. The information is practical and not theoretical; and the English is comprehensive and untechnical.

An exhaustive treatment of the duties of telegraphers, station agents and express company employés, comprise another volume. The matter contained herein was compiled by some of the best-known dispatchers and superintendents of telegraph in the country. The parts relating to station agents and express company employés is very complete and indispensible to men who would perfect their positions and produce the best results.

The books are printed on excellent heavy paper, and the binding—half cloth and half leather—is tough and durable. Illustrations and diagrams abound.

LITERARY CHIT-CHAT.

In an attempt to solve the question of what kind of books boys like best, a request was sent to the library assistants in charge of children's rooms in New York City, asking them to make a list of the twenty-five books of fiction most popular among boys of twelve to fifteen years old. The lists were made after careful consideration and without consultation and represent very fairly the preference of the boys. The following are the twenty-five books: "Tom Sawyer," by Mark Twain; "Huckleberry Finn," by Mark Twain; "Cadet Days," by General Charles King; "The Adventures of Buffalo Bill," by Colonel W. F. Cody; "Robinson Crusoe," by Daniel Defoe; "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," by A. Conan Doyle; "Treasure Island," by Stevenson; "Crimson Sweater," by Barbour; "Behind the Line," by Barbour; "Jack Among the Indians," by Grinnell; "Halfbacks," by Barbour; "Fast Mail," by Drysdale; "Substitute," by Camp; "Pete, Cow Puncher," by Ames; "Ivanhoe," by Scott; "Captains Courageous," by Kipling; "Redskin and Cowboy," by Henty; "Story of a Bad Boy," by Aldrich; "Robin Hood," by Pyle; "Yale Cup," by Dudley; "Oliver Twist," by Dickens; "Monte Cristo," by Dumas; "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," by Verne; "The Spy," by Cooper; "Kidnapped," by Stevenson.

The oft repeated story of Washington's profanity at the battle of Monmouth, is strenuously denied in Marion Harland's Autobiography, and upon the best authority—that of a revolutionary veteran, Stirling Smith by name, who was uncle to Marion Harland's grandfather. "He did not swear," the old war horse would thunder when irreverent youngsters retailed the slander in his hearing. "I was close behind him—and I can tell you, sir, we rode fast—when what should we meet running away, lickety-split from the field of battle with the British almost at their heels, but General Lee and his men. Then, with that, says General Washington, speaking out loud and sharp—says he, 'General Lee! in God's name what is the meaning of this ill-timed prudence?' Now, you see General Lee, he was mighty high-spirited. So he speaks up as haughty as the General had done, and says he: 'I know of no one who has more of that damnable virtue than your Excellency.' So you see, young man, it was General Lee that swore and not General Washington. Don't you ever let me hear that lie again!"

From the publishing house of Doubleday, Page & Co. comes the announcement that beginning with November, 1910, one of their magazines, "Country Life in America" will appear semi-monthly. The first issue of each month will be the same in design as the present issues. The second will be devoted to special features, covering such topics as "The Hardy Garden," "Inside the House," "The Home Ground," "Motor," etc. The subscription price will remain unchanged.

BOOKISH GOSSIP.

Mr. F. Berkeley Smith, son of F. Hopkinson Smith, is temperamentally a gypsy, a rover. The titles of his books bear this out: "The Real Latin Quarter," "How Paris Amuses Itself," "Parisians Out of Doors," "Budapest, the City of Magyars," "In London Town." In his latest novel, "The Village of Vagabonds," the "village" is a little fishing community on the Norman coast near which Mr. Smith owns a farm, and the "vagabonds" are the people who visit him there and are his neighbors. On his farm Mr. Smith grows American corn. His wife is a French woman, who has lectured successfully in this country on French literature.

Mark Twain's authorized biography is already in preparation at the hands of Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine, who, with the deceased humorist's daughter, is his appointed literary executor.

The title of Robert W. Chamber's new book, to be brought out in the fall, will be "Alisia Paigie." It is a story of the Civil War, rather different in design from "The Danger Mark," and "The Firing Line."

A new volume in the list of translations of Wagner's Nibelungen Ring series, by Dr. Oliver Huckel, entitled, "Siegfried," is announced for publication in September.

Among the new fiction announced for autum publication are books by Meredith Nicholson, Clara Louise Burnham, Alice Brown, Harry James Smith, Ian Hay, Wm. J. Hopkins and Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

Now that the problem of a "safe and sane Fourth" is laid away for a time, the public can turn its attention to a matter which is even more vital to children, and even to adults—learning to swim. When it is remembered that more than a thousand boys drown—usually because they can't swim—in every one of the summer months, it becomes increasingly important to give them a few practical lessons or call their attention to a book such as Brewster's "Swimming" (Houghton Mifflin Company.) This new manual explains simply the quickest and easiest way to learn the art and describes clearly the various "strokes."

Mr. Meredith Nicholson's new novel, "The Siege of the Seven Suitors," is announced for publication this autumn by Houghton Mifflin Company.

"Snow-Fire," the recently-published novel by the author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress," has been placed under the ban of the imperial censor in Russia on the ground that the character of the heroine, Daria Mikaelovna, is nothing more or less than a thinly-veiled portrait of a member of the reigning family. Members of the court of the Czar and St. Petersburg society generally have recognised the popular and clever Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna in the figure of Daria in "Snow-Fire," and now apparently the imperial censor, by his tactless decree forbidding the sale of the book in Russia, has given official confirmation of the excellence of the likeness.

An edition de luxe of "The Ancient Mariner" is announced to appear shortly, illustrated by Mr. Willy Pogany, whose imaginative and sympathetic drawings in a similar edition of "The Rubiayat" last year attracted wide attention.

Mr. Arnold Bennett' new long novel, "Clayhanger," announced for early publication, is the first of a triology of novels dealing with the "Five Towns." In "The Old Wives' Tale" Mr. Bennett described the old spirit of the central provinces of England. In this forthcoming trilogy he will describe the breakdown of the old spirit by the new.

Almost coincident with the recent publication of Percy Mackaye's "A Garland to Sylvia"—a play begun while its author was a senior at Harvard College, and not completed until 1890—comes the announcement of the enthusiastic reception accorded to his latest work, "Anti-Matrimony," a satire on the Ibsen school of drama, which was produced a few weeks ago in New Haven. The press has been unanimous in its praise, one of the papers declaring that "the play is a compliment to Americans on their healthy-mindedness."

Mrs. Florence L. Barclay, author of "The Rosary," has written a new novel called "The Mistress of Shenstone," to be published early in the fall. While in no sense a sequel to "The Rosary," many of the characters of that novel reappear in the new one.

Harper & Brothers announce this week the reprinting of "The Wild Olive," "The Manuscript Found in a Copper Cylinder," "Captain Polly," by Sophia Sweet, and "Diamonds," by Sir William Crookes.

BUYING A PATTERN.

Banaby Does an Errand for His Better Half.

Barnaby poked his head inside the office and nodded timidly to the girl at the desk.

"Is this the place where you sell patterns?" he asked.

"Yes," said the girl, "What do you want?"

"I want a pattern."

"What kind?"

"Now you've got me. What kind would you want if you were me?"

"Who is it for?"

"My wife."

"Is she young?"

"Five years younger than me."

"That's not answering my question."

"O, isn't it? I thought it was. Yes she is young. She was 35 the 10th of last November."

The girl looked Barnaby up and down with unblinking coolness.

"Dear me," she said, "how some folks do hold their own."

There was a pause.

"It is hard work," ventured the girl presently, "for a man to select a becoming pattern for a woman's dress. Why didn't your wife come herself?"

"She has the rheumatism, and can't get out of the house. You advertised a sale of $1.50 patterns for 13 cents for today only. She couldn't afford to let the bargain slip, so she asked me to get the pattern for her."

'She must have faith in your judgement."

"She has reason to."

"Why?"

"I married her."

"That is no sign you can buy a pattern to make her dresses by. Most men can please a woman by wanting to marry her, but few can keep on pleasing her by choosing her clothes afterward."

"There may be something in that. Still, I've got to get a pattern. What would you advise?"

"It all depends upon your wife's style. What kind of looking woman is she?"

"Stunning."

"Thta is too indefinite. There are lots of stunning women in New York, and no two of them look alike. Now, if you could only point out somebody—"

"I can. Her eyes are like—what is the color of your eyes, please?"

"Gray."

"So they are. I hadn't got close enough to get a good look at them before. My wife's eyes are gray. They're like yours. They've got those same little purplish specks around the pupil that are found in only one pair of eyes in a million."

"It depends, too, upon the material. If she has a charmeuse satin gown—"

"It is char—char—whatever you call it—satin. I heard her say so last night. Her nose is like yours, too; only yours turns up a little more at the end. And her hair is that same sunny shade of brown. Her complexion is a little muddy now on account of the rheumatism, but when she is well her color is as fresh and delicate as yours."

"The eyes, nose, hair and complexion really have little to do, with the selection of a becoming pattern. They are not hard to fit. It is the figure that counts. If you could give me some idea of the height—"

"She is tall."

"Here's a pattern that I think would suit her. The skirt hangs in straight lines—"

"O, that is one of those skimpy les, isn't it? I think they are beastly ugly. I swore when I left the house that I wouldn't get one of them."

'I have one of them on now. My freinds think it rather becoming."

"Stand back a minute and let me see. Yes, that does look nice. But, then, you would look charming in anything."

"Thank you. If you had only remembered to bring your wife's measurements along—"

"I have them right here in my pocket. Waist, 28; hips, 44. A-a-ahem! Seems to me that's a little more robust—"

The girl clasped her hands at either side of her 21-inch waist.

"Yes," she said, "it is rather, but this style of dress is very popular. Everybody wears them."

"All right, I'll take it. What's the use of having a wife if you can't dress her in style?"

Eight hours later Barnaby sauntered into his own sitting room and laid the pattern on the table.

"O, you darling!" cried Mrs. Barnaby. "You did relent and get me one of those tied-in skirts after all. This is a beautiful pattern. I always did say you had the best taste of any man in the world."

"Thanks," said Barnaby, "I think myself that I know a good thing when I see it."—[New York Times.

Unbelief.

Your chosen grasp the torch of faith—the key
Of very certainty is theirs to hold,
They read your word in messages of gold.
Lord, what of us who have no light to see
And in the darkness doubt, whose hands may be Broken upon the door, who find but cold
Ashes of words where others see enscrolled
The glorious promise of life's liberty?
Oh, well for those to whom you gave the light
(The light we may not see by) whose award
Is that sure key, that message luminous,
Yet we, your people, stumbling in the night
Doubting and dumb and disbelieving—Lord,
Is there no word for us, no word for us?

AN END TO SKIN TROUBLES

Action of Poslam Is Rapid—Easy to Prove What It Will Do.

"To think," says Mr. L. J. Cooper, North Haven, Conn., "that I have been trying everything (to cure eczema) for fifteen years, and now poslam has done it. The first application stopped all the itching."

When a remedy is available like poslam, which in all skin troubles stops itching and accomplishes cures so rapidly and readily, there is really no reason why such affections should be allowed to go unchecked, particularly as no one is asked to purchase poslam without first obtaining and trying one of the free trial packages. This will be sent by mail to any one who will write to the Emergency Laboratories, 32 West 25th street, New York City.

While primarily intended for the treatment of eczema, acne, tetter, barbers' and all other forms of itch, etc., poslam promptly cures all the lesser skin affections, such as pimples, blotches, fever blisters, red noses, inflamed skin, rash, herpes, sunburn, clears the complexion and keeps the skin in a healthy condition.

A special 50c package of poslam is prepared for minor uses, and this, as well as the regular $2 jar, is for sale by all druggists, particularly The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

. Lampirthy's face flushed with as she read this letter. Then she opened the newspaper, which was the momentous copy of the Northern Bullet.

She read every word of the eight columns devoted to Mr. Lampirthy and the Paper Combine, and when she had finished, she understood why she had received no check.

So all this newspaper madness, of which she had heard so much, was the work of her own husband. He had been fooled and tricked into this by a mere charlatan of a preacher, by a man without a decent coat to his back, without even a name. And in order that this maniac might have the funds to pay his deluded converts, and coerce powerful newspapers, she and Sibyl were to be stinted in all that they had every right to expect.

She rose to her feet, tore the letter into a dozen pieces, threw the newspaper on the floor, and walked to the window with clenched hands, and a desire to strike some one in the face.

"Mad!" she said to herself. "He must be mad! But I'll get even with this thief who is robbing him."

She bit her lips and stared out of the window across the lawns and trees of the park. In the distance she could see the spire of the village church, and beyond that the slope of a great mountain. Near the foot of the slope she saw a few white tents and small black figures that moved to and fro.

She turned away from the window and rang the bell. It was answered by her own maid, who was the only servant permitted to enter the boudoir.

"Is Father Francis in the village, Haines?"

"Yes, madam."

"Does he live in those tents over there?"

"Yes, madam."

"Have you been to any of his meetings?"

"No, madam — not yet, but I was thinking tonight—if it stays fine——"

"You're not to go, and please tell Mr. Morgan, the steward, to give orders that no one in this house is to go to any of the meetings."

"Yes, madam."

"If I hear of any one disobeying my order, I shall dismiss them at once."

"Yes, madam."

The maid left the room, but before she had closed the door, she was met by a footman, and there were a few whispered words between them. She returned into the room.

"If you please, madam," she said timidly, "he's come to see you himself."

"He?" queried Mrs. Lampirthy sharply. "Who do you mean?"

"This Father Francis, madam. He is waiting downstairs to see you."

"Tell the men to whip him off the premises," said Mrs. Lampirthy. Then she remembered that, although she lived in a feudal castle, she was amenable to the laws of civilization.

"I mean," she continued, as the maid stared blankly, in response to this peculiar order, "tell him I cannot see him. I am busy—engaged."

In two or three minutes the girl returned and handed Mrs. Lampirthy a note.

As she read it, she frowned.

"Tell the man I will see him," she said abruptly, "in the library."

Mrs. Lampirthy greeted her visitor with a slight bow, and the expression on her face was one that did not promise well for the success of any interview. It was distinctly hostile.

"I'm afraid I've taken a liberty," he said quickly, "but this is a matter of life and death. One of my comrades is very ill. There is no doctor within fifteen miles of this place. If you would lend me one of your motor cars, it might save a man's life."

Mrs. Lampirthy hesitated. She had every reason to hate the man who was as she thought, robbing her husband of his money. If some one else had come to her for a car to save the life of Father Francis, she would have replied, with the ready excuse of all motorists, that her motor cars were out of order. But this request was another matter. The favor was asked for a stranger—possibly a dupe of the charlatan who stood before her. And though the woman was vain, worldly and shallow, she was capable of womanly pity.

"Who is the man?" she asked. "Is it any one from this neighborhood?"

"No. His name is Harry Brandon. He is a London man. He is dying. If you grant me this favor, he may be saved. I am sure Mr. Lampirthy would wish it."

At the mention of her husband's name Mrs. Lampirthy stiffened into an attitude of defiance. The man's words sounded like a threat.

"Mr. Lampirthy leaves the management of this house to me," she replied coldly. "Our motor cars have all been going wrong lately; I——"

"You only came back on one this afternoon," he said. "Surely that one——"

"I should like to oblige you——" she began, in the tone of one who is casting about for some excuse.

"Surely you do not understand," he broke in fiercely. "This man is dying; on one of your motor cars we might be able to fetch a doctor and be back here in a little over an hour. Every minute is of value. While I stand here talking to you the man is dying. Don't you understand?"

Mrs. Lampirthy was unwarmed by his words as an iceberg in the glare of the sun. She was thinking of the foolhardy and ridiculous enterprise into which her husband had been dragged by this man.

"I'm sorry I can't oblige you," she said coldly, "but our cars——"

"If Mr. Lampirthy were to know of this," he muttered—"if only Mr. Lampirthy were to know of this."

He could not have spoken any words more calculated to harden the heart of this woman. His request might have been granted at once but for his first mention of the millionaire. This last reference to Mr. Lampirthy was fatal.

"I am sorry," she said, with a smile, "but these motor cars—after all, I think it is best to rely on horses."

The man's eyes blazed with fury, and wild words rose to his lips.

But, before he could utter them, the door opened, and Sibyl peered through the opening.

"Mother," she began, but Mrs. Lampirthy's face was not an encouragement to proceed.

"Go out of the room at once, Sibyl," she exclaimed. "Can't you see I'm engaged?" The child withdrew and closed the door with a bang.

Father Francis stood motionless. The entrance of the child had recalled the picture at Gaunt Royal and a buried incident in the past. He scrutinized the face of the woman, who was going to let a man die to gratify her pique or some crooked whim of her worldly mind. In an instant he resolved to loose his bow at a venture. The arrow might reach his own heart. But there was no time to think of self. A man was dying, and this woman could save him.

"I once knew a man," he said in a low voice, "whose heart was as pitiless as yours. But God punished him, and brought him to the dust, as He will bring you to the dust some day. The name of this man was Henry Rankin——"

He paused and watched the effect of the name on the woman's face. She betrayed herself.

"Henry Rankin?" she said quickly. "I don't know him. Why do you mention his name. What are you talking about?"

"I did not say that you knew him—but I am not going to waste time in talking to you about him. Young Brandon is dying. If you do not let me have a motor car in five minutes from now, I shall tell Mr. Lampirthy all that I know about Henry Rankin and Violet Hexamer."

"You are mad!" she exclaimed. "I don't know what you are talking about."

"You lie," he said quietly, and he looked at the clock on the mantelpiece. The woman confronted him with a look of fear. She could control her face, but the truth was written in her eyes.

"Must I get the servants to turn you out?" she said haughtily.

"You will not do so," he replied. "One minute has passed. Is there no pity in your heart for this poor young chap who is dying? It is not much that I ask of you."

She rang the bell, and a footman entered.

"Tell Williams to bring round the big Mercedes car at once," she said. "He's to go for a doctor. It is a matter of life and death."

The man departed, and Mrs. Lampirthy turned to Father Francis.

"Now, then," she said fiercely, "I have done what you want. In return please tell me what you know about Henry Rankin and Violet Hexamer."

"The man is dead," he replied gravely. "His real name was Sir Richard Gaunt. He went down in the wreck of the Santigan. You have nothing to fear from him—or from me. I should not have spoken, except in the hope of saving a man's life."

"Who are you?" she cried, her fear getting the better of her judgment. "What is it that you know?"

"I knew both Henry Rankin and Violet Hexamer," he replied. "The man was punished for his sins. The woman is still alive. She has many years in which to make atonement. Yet the years slip by very quickly, and the day of judgment is at hand."

A stream of crimson light from one of the stained glass windows tinged his stern face with blood. In this room, once the banqueting hall of the Caerlyns, he was seen to advantage. Mrs. Lampirthy felt small and out of place. He was in the picture and she was not. Whoever he was, he was a man to be feared and conciliated, and amid his present surroundings he loomed up like some great religious fighter from the past—fierce, rugged, and pitiless, neither capable of fear nor mercy. For the first time in her life Mrs. Lampirthy felt that wealth was not the greatest power in the world.

"I do not know who you are," she said, after a long silence, "nor why you speak to me like this. But I wish you well, and you owe much to my husband."

"You speak the truth," he replied. "Yet I do not know that my duty to him demands my silence. Perhaps it would be right for me to speak. It is clear that he does not know."

Mrs. Lampirthy lost all control over herself, and, catching hold of his arm, clung to it, and looked up into the dark bearded face.

"I was very young," she cried, "scarcely more than a child—the sin was not mine."

"No," he replied gravely, "it was not yours. It was the sin of the man. He has suffered for it. It led him into hell, and he died."

"What must I pay?" she cried. "What do you ask?"

"I ask nothing," he replied. "I should not have spoken, save for the sake of my poor brother and comrade. Yet I must speak the words that are in my mind. By myself I am nothing, but I speak to you with the voice of One who is greater than all the universe. In your hands lies the power to do much good in the world. I only ask you to devote yourself to the great cause in which Mr. Lampirthy has already labored so unselfishly and so well."

"And if I do not?" she queried, with a look of fear.

"If you do not," he continued, "I shall not judge you, but God, who has given to all men and women a chance to atone for their sins, will be your judge."

She moved slowly away from him, a poor, pitiful figure of a woman. Then she turned on him in a burst of anger, and her small, mean soul stood naked in the light of her words.

The door opened, and a footman entered.

"The motor car is at the door, madam."

"Would you care to go with the chauffeur, Father Francis?" asked Mrs. Lampirthy, in a tone of ordinary politeness.

"Yes," he replied, "it is better that I should go. I can take the doctor straight to his patient, and answer his questions on the way. Yes, I will certainly go."

She accompanied him to the door, where the great 60-horse-power Mercedes stood trembling like a horse at the starting-post.

"You will be cold," she said, as she looked at his brown serge robe. "Fetch an overcoat, Andrews; you will find one of the master's in the anteroom."

"No, thank you," said Father Francis. "It's a warm night."

"How far is it to Aberilyn, Williams?" asked Mrs. Lampirthy, as the two men seated themselves in the motor car.

"Seventeen miles, madam."

"How long will you take?"

"Twenty-five minutes, madam, with a clear road and no police?"

"Don't mind the police, Williams. I'll pay the fines. Get there in twenty minutes if you can."

The man grinned and touched his cap. And the next moment the vibration ceased, the car slid swiftly forwards, and disappeared round a bend in the drive.

Mrs. Lampirthy stood for a moment on the steps until the hum of the machinery had died away in the distance.

"I hope they will break their necks," she said piously, as she returned into the house.

Mrs. Lampirthy's prayer was not answered. In an hour and ten minutes the motor returned to the village with Dr. Parry of Aberilyn.

But before they reached the little camp, a ragged longhaired preacher, came out to meet them. They learned from him that Harry Brandon was dead.

"Overwork, exposure and body not used to this sort of life," was the doctor's verdict.

"The first martyr in our cause," replied Father Francis sternly. "God will reward him." Then he knelt on the ground and prayed.

Neptune and Dr. Galle.

DEATH OF ASTRONOMER WHO FIRST SAW THE DISTANT PLANET—A CHAPTER OF STRANGE COINCIDENCES — HOW SOME PEOPLE SEE THINGS WITHOUT RECOGNIZING THEM.

By William H. Knight.

A CHAPTER of remarkable scientific coincidences is linked with the life of the veteran astronomer, Dr. Johann Gottfried Galle, whose death at the extraordinary age of 98, is just announced in the dispatches. He was born in the German city of Wittenberg in 1812, at the time when Napoleon's army was invading Russia and marching to its overwhelming disaster at Moscow. In early youth he evinced great aptitude for mathematical studies, and was appointed assistant astronomer at the Berlin Observatory when Encke, for whom the comet was named, was its director.

In the years 1839-1841 Galle acquirred fame by discovering three comets, for which he was awarded medals by the King of Denmark, and received the Lalande prize from the French Academy. Aout this time puzzling perturbations were observed in the orbit of the planet Urbanus, then supposed to be the outermost one of the solar system.

The distance of Uranus was so great —1,780,000,000 miles, and its bulk so enormous—sixty-five times that of the earth, that it seemed improbable there should be another planet in the depths of interstellar space beyond, massive enough to sensibly affect its motions, and yet controlled by the attractive power of the central sun.

But there were two astronomers, speaking different languages, each gifted with remarkable mathematical powers, who, unknown to each other, determined to analyze the motions of Uranus, and ascertain why it had recently been moving with accelerated velocity, but was now perceptibly retarded in its vast orbit, the planet requiring a lapse of eighty-four years to complete a revolution round the sun.

One of these astronomers was Urban J. J. Leverrier, then thirty-five years of age, but already noted for his work in the highest problems of speculative astronomy. Having successfully accounted for some irregularities in the orbit of Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, the celebrated physicist and astronomer Arago, suggested that he should perform a like service in connection with the orbit of the most distant planet, Uranus.

Leverrier accepted the challenge and engaged in the work with characteristic zeal, and after many months of abstruse calculations, reached a definite conclusion, and provisionally located the position of a hypothetical planet of great size and far exterior to the orbit of Uranus. Having no instrument of his own, he sent a note to young Galle at the Berlin observatory, requesting him to point his telescope to a certain place in the Zodiac, and he would see an object of the eighth magnitude with—a "planetary disc."

Galle received his instructions on the 23rd of September, 1846. On that very night he described the planetary disc within one degree of the precise location indicated by Leverrier, thus sharing with that distinguished astronomer the fame of giving the great discovery to the world.

What a moment of intense mental excitement was that for the youthful observer, and with what a thrill of just pride did the mathematical astronomer receive the news confirming his prediction, and make the announcement of his discovery to scientific bodies in every civilized country on the globe. It was as if a warrior had by conquest added a new domain to his sovereign's territory. The recognition of his services was instantaneous and universal. He was overwhelmed with honors. The dullest intellect could appreciate the grandeur of an achievement that added a mighty world, 34,000 miles in diameter, to the solar system, an

MUNDO,
The Man of Mystery.
Special Reading
50c.
506—South Hill st.—506.
Hotel Willoughby, over Park Bank.
OPPOSITE CENTRAL PARK.

Strange and startling are the revelations that flow from the cultivated lips of this wonderful psychic. Every word a pearl of wisdom. Born and bred in India, the land of the mystic, this wizard of psychism stands aloft and alone, far in advance of the ordinary clairvoyant you meet.

Would you lift the curtains to the mysteries of the veiled beyond? If so, consult this great psychic.

DIRECT FROM INDIA.

Does everything go all wrong? If so, there is a cause. Do you wish to continue on the downward trail, or do you desire to change and claim what God intended you to have? If you would rise to your natural sphere and enjoy life as others do, see

THIS MAN.

He will tell you the cause of your woe and how to overcome it.

The peer of all psychics. The only graduate of the Ordoo College of Occultism to ever leave his native land. A herald of the mysteries of the prophets of olden times.

This great psychic has spent all the years of his active life in the study and pursuit of this, his naturally endowed science, and stands alone at the head of a vast army of seers and prophets, many of whom he has taught and prepared for the pursuit of this grand calling. See him today. He may change the course of your whole existence. Many a sad heart has been gladdened, many a weary life made bright by the advice and magnetism of this wonderful man. He is unlike any you ever saw; does positively all that others claim to do and demonstrates the power of mind over matter free to every patron; the only man in America possessing this power. Seeing is believing. Try him, then try others and see if they can do the same. A capable man has confidence in his ability and will not require you to deposit your money before his work is done. Mundo has read for many of America's leading citizens and a few titled foreigners, but he has more respect for his patrons and more consideration for their feelings than to publish their names broadcast for the sake of advertisement. Nor does he claim to have read for dozens of prominent people that common sense will tell you he never saw. If you need advice and want a reading from a real life reader, who does not spend half his time slandering his competitors, see Mundo, the real life reader, who really tells what you desire to know or no charge. A foolish weakling only will pay for a reading that gives no benefit. Stop and think, then see Mundo, the Indian seer, who stands behind what he says with a spot cash guarantee. If you wish, he will tell your name free and show you how it is done. Special readings 50 cents.

506—SOUTH HILL ST.—506
HOURS, 10 TO 12, 2 TO 5 AND 7 TO 8
DAILY; CLOSED SUNDAY.

This is the man the San Francisco papers said so much about for predicting the great quake and fire.

This man of mystery has rightfully gained the title, the Wizard and Seer. The name so often applied to him, and we recommend him to you for dead trance readings and deep psychic work of all kinds, and to be the most thorough, coinsistent, concise and complete life reader before the public today.

MUNDO,
506 S. Hill st.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.

A resident of Los Angeles 28 years.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE, in fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. PREDICTIONS for the FUTURE—made by the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse, will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Virginia Harned, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Annie Besant, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Margaret Anglin, Calve, Admiral Evans, Baron Rothschild, H. E. Huntington, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Joaquin Miller, Capt. Hobson, Jefferson, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.
PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers.
Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, Hindu readers who never saw India, and those jealous of Prof. Althouse's work and success.
DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States."
PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.
HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
Daily and evening. Sunday, 10 to 2.
STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.
PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

FOR SALE—NO HOOF, NO HORSE. Statistics show that 90 per cent. of all lameness is caused by hard and contracted feet. As a hoof softener, toughener, nourisher and grower, there is nothing equal to

ESHELMAN'S
Wool-Fat
HOOF HEALER.

A horse's hoof is from 60 to 70 per cent. water. Grease and water will not mix. Wool Fat mixes readily with water, is very penetrating, and while a great medicine of itself, it also acts as a vehicle to carry to the afflicted parts the other medicinal properties of the HEALER. It gives natural stimulation and nourishment to the hoof. Nor is there anything that can be compared with it as a remedy for contracted hoofs, split hoofs, quarter cracks, mud fever, corns, grease heels, and for all kinds of sores and cuts anywhere on any stock. It will surprise you with its power as a healer and restorer. It is not a new remedy, but has been on the market in the East for many years, giving the greatest satisfaction.

4-oz. pkg., 25c; 12-oz., 50c; 32-oz., $1; 5-lb. pail, $2; 10-lb., $3.50. It is easy to apply—directions with each package. If not sold by your dealer, we will prepay carriage. Send for it today. Mention this paper.

MONDAY'S Big Piano Sale.
Pacific Music Co.,
627 South Broadway,
Third Floor.

We pay no rent.
We sell for cash.

Beginning Monday morning, we propose to sell twenty elegant high-grade pianos, new and slightly used, any one of which you would be proud to have in your home at such prices as will move the entire lot, during the next day or two. We realize that to do this we will have to cut, slash, and actually slaughter prices, and that without mercy. Nearly every one of these pianos is a standard instrument. How is this?

A fine mahogany Chickering upright, in best of condition; a beauty and as good as it looks. Price was $600.
Now only $225.

From this you see prices are no object. We must and will make our new location known. We can truthfully say that never before on Broadway have such values been offered. Credit houses could not do such things to such a line of pianos.

We pay no rent.
We sell for cash.

Here is a pretty good little oak piano, used of course, but never misused; the tone is good; the touch is easy; lots of wear in it yet.
Price was $275.
Now only $95.

No wonder you put on your glasses—the figures are so small. But we guarantee on our reputation as about the oldest dealers in the city that each and every piano is exactly as represented, both in price and quality.

An unusually fine piano, the Schaff Bros., known everywhere for its superb tone, up-to-date in every yay—youi choice in mahogany or burl walnut.
Price was $500.
Now only $215.

We pay no rent.
We sell for cash.

If you want simply a nice, sweet-toned, dependable piano, here is a Willard you might resell at a profit.
Price was $350.
Now only $145.

How would you like a piano with all the orchestral attachments? We have two, very fancy mahogany Wesers Bros., one with and one without these extras. Take your choice, at less than half price.
Price was $400.
Now only $185.

We pay no rent.
We sell for cash.

But this takes too much space. We have a $325 Lagonda for only $125. A big fine Kelso at the same money, and plenty of others, equally good bargains. You have many to choose from to make comparison. It is not like buying an isolated piano in some one's house. Besides, our pianos are guaranteed, with full exchange privilege. Come in Monday morning if possible.

PACIFIC MUSIC COMPANY,
627-9 South Broadway,
Third Floor.

LABOR.

JUDGE TIES UP BOSTON STRIKE.

Puts Hard Crimp in Union Bulldozing.

Enjoins Engravers' Hold-up; Prohibits Benefits.

Drastic Ruling Threatens Existence of Nuisance.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The most drastic injunction ever granted against a labor union, forbidding it to continue with a strike and prohibiting the payment of strike benefits, has been issued by Judge Hitchcock in the Equity Session of the Superior Court. It was granted to the firm of Folsom & Sunergeran. Several other firms today petitioned the court for similar injunctions, directed against the Photo Engravers' Union No. 3 of Boston. Labor leaders here today denounced the injunction and declared that as a precedent it threatened the life of unions in America. It is believed that a bitter fight will be made to have it declared unconstitutional.

One injunction is against George F. Lewis and other members of the Photo Engravers' Union.

The position taken by the court in the decision is that a strike to be legal must be based upon some complaint of the employés themselves regarding the terms and conditions of their own employment and that a strike instituted by a general body of men where there is no trouble with respect to individual employers, called merely for the purpose of compelling employers to sign an agreement with a labor union, is illegal.

MAYOR DEAF TO UNION THREATS.

TELLS "ARBITRATORS" JUST HOW HE STANDS.

Portland's Executive Uses no Mincing Words in Letting It Be Known That He Is for "Open Shop"—"Let Them Have Their Strike," Says the Head of the Club.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor Simon refused today to intervene in the strike situation here, turning a deaf ear to the wishes of a committee of unionites who called on him and threatened that if he did not bring about arbitration a general walk-out might be expected next week. Will Delly, a union official, headed the committee, which called to see the Mayor, and four other union officials accompanied him.

"It would be useless for me to ask the employers to treat with your strike committee," Mayor Simon told them.

"The employers consider that the teamsters' strike is ended and that there is nothing to arbitrate and I am bound to say to you men that I am myself in favor of the 'open shop.' Every man who wishes to work must be allowed to do so, regardless of whether he is a union man."

Following their rebuff in the Mayor's office, the unionites gave it out that a final meeting of the Central Labor Council will be held Sunday to act on the proposition of calling a general strike in support of the teamsters. It is generally conceded that such a strike, if called, would be foredoomed to failure.

"The Mayor is right when he declared the business men would not entertain any suggestions of arbitration," said President Beckwith of the Commercial Club, who has acted as chairman of the recent business men's meeting, and also of the "Open Shop Committee of Twelve." "There is nothing to arbitrate. The teamsters' strike is dead. I believe in settling industrial disputes just the way nations settle their difficulties. Arbitrate before there comes an open clash, but where war is declared there should be no conciliation, no quarter given, and none taken. If the unions want a general strike let them have it by all means, and let them have it right away if they want it."

WARNING NOTE.

PLAN OF LIVING EXTRAVAGANT.

PROF. WHEELER IMPRESSED BY TRIP ABROAD.

Europe Complains of High Costs, He Says, But They Do Not Face Such Conditions as Exist in This Country—He Thinks Nation Is Imperiled.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—That this country is imperiled by its artificial and extravagant plan of living, is one of the conclusions emphasized by Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of the University of California, on his return from a European trip. Mr. Wheeler passed yesterday in Chicago, leaving for the Pacific Coast last night.

"After several months in Europe, I scarcely could fail to be impressed with the difference in the manner of living in this country and abroad," said President Wheeler. "Our living has been forced to an artificial plane. We are tremendously extravagant. We have been pushed, under forced draught, upon an artificial staging. The whole structure is of such abnormal character that the country is imperiled.

"In the cities of Europe they are complaining of the high cost of living, but they have no such cause for lamentation as have the American people. Of course, people in this country make more money than they do abroad, but I rather think the wage earner gets left in the long run."

President Wheeler said he was at a loss to explain the exact cause of such conditions.

"I doubt if the trusts are responsible for our artificial plane of living, although they represent the most immediate peril this country faces," he said.

President Wheeler has been away from the United States nearly a year. From last October until March he lectured at the University of Berlin, occupying the Roosevelt professorship endowed by James Speyer of New York. Since March he has spent most of his time in England.

IOWA'S BIG OUTING.

The Iowa Association of Southern California will hold its annual summer outing at Alamitos Park, Long Beach, next Saturday, the 13th inst. Special cars will leave Los Angeles and Sixth streets at the rear of the Pacific Electric Depot and run directly to the park. A programme of speeches has been arranged.

OLD HOUSE REINCORPORATES.

The old-established house of Sherwood & Sherwood, which has been in business in Los Angeles a quarter of a century, has recognized the ability and success of its manager, H. M. Lieb, by re-incorporating as the Sherwood & Sherwood Commercial Company, in which Lieb becomes a director as well as manager.

HOOSIER PICNIC PLANS.

The Board of Directors of the Indiana Society met last night and completed the programme for the Hoosier picnic at Redondo Beach, next Saturday. The prizes are many. All winners of first prizes will be given laurel wreaths and a triumphal parade to the pavilion, where the victors will lead the grand march.

Republican Congressional Campaign Com man Sounds Harmony Note of Republican sion of His Visit With President—Mr. Taft But Officially, Greets Chilean Executive.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BEVERLY (Mass.) Aug. 6.—Representative W. B. McKinley, of Illinois, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, came to Beverly this afternoon, filled with optimism, and gave President Taft an enthusiastic forecast of the coming Congressional election.

As to "insurgency," Mr. McKinley seemed rather surprised at the mention of such a thing. The Congressional Committee, he declared, had nothing to do with primaries, but would support every Republican candidate that supports the President.

"He is the head of the party," said Mr. McKinley, "and is entitled to support."

"Will the next House be Republican?" he was asked.

"Why," he replied, "there is absolutely no question about it. I am just as sure of it as that I am in Beverly today.

BOATERS SAVE CHILD'S FA RESCUES; HE DROWNS IN

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DEPOSIT (N. Y.) Aug. 6.—W. R. Michaelis, publisher of the Chicago Staats Zeitung, was drowned at Ouquaga Lake, a few miles from here, at 4:30 this afternoon, and his body was recovered three hours later. He was out in a boat with his little 8-year-old daughter. The child lost her hat and while reaching out for it, fell overboard. The father jumped out after the child, and catching hold of her held her above the water until his strength failed. Parties in boats nearby rescued the child, but the father sank and was drowned.

Use TIZ-- Smaller Feet

Sore Feet, Tender Feet and Swollen Feet Cured Every Time. TIZ Makes Sore Feet Well, No Matter What Ails Them.

Every one who is troubled with sore sweaty or tender feet—swollen feet—smelly feet, corns, callouses or bunions can quickly make their feet well now. Here is instant relief and a lasting, permanent remedy—it's called TIZ. TIZ makes sore feet well and swollen feet are quickly reduced to their natural size. Thousands of ladies have been able to wear shoes a full size smaller with perfect comfort.

It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleanses them out and keeps them clean. It works right off. You will feel better the very first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25 cents per box or direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended and sold by The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

Jewelry valued at $1730 was stolen Friday night from the store of the Russo Jewelry Company, No. 216 South Broadway, by burglars who entered through a transom. After making a careful selection of the most valuable articles within reach, the burglars escaped by opening a rear window and climbing up a water pipe to a second-story window of the Copp building, from which they easily gained the street.

The manner in which the work was done and the taste displayed in the selection of the articles stolen, indicates to the police that they are expert cracksmen.

The stolen articles, as reported to the police, are: Five gold rings with coral sets, 24-carat gold bands with Chinese characters inside; forty assorted coral rings, all solid gold; twenty-four cameo brooches, coral and shell, in 14-carat solid gold bands; eighteen cameo shell brooches, full figures; five dozen assorted coral stick pins; two large, round coral scarf pins with engraved flange around the coral; four sets plain coral scarf pins and cuff buttons; seventeen solid gold mounted back combs, some set with pearls; three sets gold inlaid side and back combs; eight gold-mounted barrettes; one coral necklace, three strings; one brown carved tortoise shell jewel box, 9 by 6 inches; Mosaic scarf pins, jet ear rings Roman pearl bead necklaces and several plain gold bracelets.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Eyesight Can Be Strengthened and Most Forms of Diseased Eyes Successfully Treated Without Cutting or Drugging.

That the eyes can be strengthened so that eyeglasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been proven beyond a doubt by the testimony of hundreds of people who publicly claim that their eyesight has been restored by that wonderful little instrument called "Actina."

"Actina" also relieves sore and Granulated Lids, Iritis, etc., and removes Cataracts without cutting or drugging. Over seventy-five thousand "Actinas" have been sold; therefore the Actina treatment is not an experiment, but is reliable. The following letters are but samples of hundreds we receive:

J. J. Pope, P. O. Box 43, Mineral Wells, Tex., writes: "I have spent thousands of dollars on my eyes, consulted the best doctors in the United States, dropped medicine in my eyes for years, and 'Actina' is the only thing that has ever done me any good. Before using 'Actina' I gave up all hope of ever being able to read again. Had not read a newspaper for seven years. Now I can read all day with little or no inconvenience."

Kathryn Bird, 112 Lincoln St., Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "I was troubled with astigmatism and had worn glasses from ten years of age. I could not read or write without them. In a surprisingly short time, after using 'Actina,' I laid aside my glasses and I will never use them again."

E. R. Holbrook, Deputy County Clerk, Fairfax, Va., writes: "'Actina' has cured my eyes so that I can do without glasses. I very seldom have headaches now, and can study up to eleven o'clock after a hard day's work at the office."

"Actina" can be used by old and young with perfect safety. Every member of the family can use the one "Actina" for any form of disease of the Eye, Ear, Throat or Head. One will last for years and is always ready for use. "Actina" will be sent on trial, prepaid.

If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89N, 811 Walnut st., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive, absolutely FREE, a valuable book—Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

Yesterday was a day of tremendous ombardment all along the line.

Many scored into the thousands, and ome came near breaking into five figres in their counts. It is getting so hat hundreds—mere little hundreds, on't seem like much. Of course, undreds do finally mount up into housands, if there are enough of them; ut it is a slow process compared with ust bringing them in by the thousand start with. That's what many of e high-flyers do.

The high-flyers are excited now over e special offer of a $10 gold piece for xt week's run. But the high-flyers hould not be too confident. Some of e hard workers in the middle ranks ave as good a show for that $10 as ybody. Read the offer, printed bew, very carefully. One week's pull ly.

Mary Pearl Pottol waited in a mere atter of 9100 points, from the footlls, late in the day, but not too late move her up to second place in the t. Mary Pearl knows her ground d many of the contestants think at she is formidable. "I wonder she is holding back?" and "What do u suppose she has at home in the acked pitcher on the mantel?" are me of the questions mooted, softly ong them, when she has been in.

Howard Collins wishes to thank those friends both known and unknown, who have sent to him coupons or subscriptions, either directly or through The Times office. He wishes to especially thank the people of Corona, Charter Oak and Los Angeles, for their kindness.

Little Jerome Waller, whose picture is given today, with his beloved violin, is making earnest ecort for a scholarship in the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music. Jerome is a handsome little fellow who looks as though he might turn out to be a musical genius.

The reply of Jack H. L. Harris, regarding his aims in the scholarship work, is given below.

228 Bonita Place, Hollywood,
August 6, 1910.

Dear Scholarship Manager:

When I have hustled all the points I possibly can and have won a scholarship, I should like to take a course at the Southern Pacific School of Telegraphy and Shorthand, including commercial and wireless telegraphy, with the ultimate idea of taking up engineering.

I have a telegraph instrument, but need the training.

Some good friends are helping me along with subscriptions and coupons, and I hope to come out somewhere above No. 13, which seems to have been devoted to me.

My new bicycle, which one of my kind friends gave me last week, has already proved a great help as well as a pleasure.

Smallest contributions in the shape of subscriptions and coupons thankfully received. Yours very sincerely, JACK H. L. HARRIS.

MORE PURSES.

There is but one special prize contest under way at present, the race for the pretty pocket-books, one for a boy and one for a girl, under ninth place, when the offer was made, who has the greatest number of points by Wednesday next, at closing time. Splendid strides were taken in this race yesterday by those in the middle ranks.

A $10 PRIZE OFFER TODAY.

A prize is offered today, a $10 gold piece, to any one who scores the greatest number of points on new subscriptions between this date and closing time on Saturday next of this week. This is open to all.

Here is the greatest single wayside prize offered yet.

Now everybody take note that this prize is offered for new subscriptions only. Somebody is going to get that $10 gold piece next Saturday night. Who will it be? It may be one of the lower-downs; it may be one of the higher-ups. One set has as good a chance at it as the other.

The boy or girl who scores the greatest number of points on NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS this week gets the $10 in gold, in addition to making a long stride toward the scholarship and the $500 prize.

A suggestion! Score early. Score every day. Score all the time. Let us tell about your new ones. "Nothing succeeds like success." Aid will come in biggest bunches to those who show a consistent pace and a steady gain.

"The Mark of the Prize"—A Philosopher on the Scholarship Race.

"No," said the busy man, turning in the office chair, with one ear listening to the telephone, the other half attentive to his frightened caller, a pen in one hand and the stenographer waiting at his elbow, "No! I tell you, no! How did you get in here? You're what? Nineteen? Nonsense, you don't look fourteen! What? Number nineteen? In what? Scholarship contest? That's enough. Get out. I won't listen to you. There ought to be an ordinance to protect busy men from this newspaper contest nuisance. There's twelve or fourteen of 'em a year. You're trying to make what? What in time do you want to go to a polytechnic school for? When I was a boy there was only one kind of school in town and only one of that. That's why my father lived to be ninety and my mother died at eighty-seven. They weren't driven into early graves by scholarship contests. 'Hello!' " into the phone; "no I can't go to the ball game this afternoon. Nor any other afternoon. I've got more to do before midnight today than two men could do in three weeks. When I ain't attending to my own business I'm running a scholarship contest for somebody else. Now" —to the child, "what is it you want to do? I tell you beforehand I won't do it. 'Hello!' "—phone again; this time his wife; "no, dear: I'm awfully sorry; I'd like to go to luncheon with you but I won't have time. I've got a thousand things to do and there are two thousand kids in the office nagging me about scholarship contests. Now then —what? save my coupons! Land of love! Did you take this for a clipping bureau? I haven't time to eat, let alone prowl through forty pages of newspaper hunting a coupon to fill out and mail to you. Hello! Wait a minute; I'll see." To the stenographer, "tell the bookkeeper I want to see him." To the child, again—"Now, run along; you see how busy I am. What? Three months' subscription? Well—you have the nerve. No I won't. I pay for the paper by the month, after I get it, and then it's worse than paying taxes. It doesn't get a cent of my money before service. More than that, it makes me so mad three or four times a week that I'm in half a mind to stop the thing anyhow. What? If you can climb up into the single numbers you'll get your scholarship? Hey? You began late and started in at the bottom? Well; I've got to get rid of you [illegible]e way." To the stenographer, "See how far the Times is paid up here in the office." To the child, "What does three months count? And a year?" The stenographer breaks in with information. The busy man resumes, "Paid up to December, 1911? Well, you see, I can't do anything for you. I would like to, but I'm not going to be out of my good money two years for a newspaper that sends the locusts of Egypt to eat me up three or four times a year. Better luck next place." Child walks away very slowly. Busy man resumes—"Here! What are you running away like that for? Is that the way you do business?" To the stenographer, "I reckon we'll be alive for at least two years yet. Tell Mr. Inkwell to make out a check for this pest for a year's subscription to the Times and let's get down to business before the sheriff closes this shop." To the child, "Now you must get out of this. I've told you so half a dozen times and I meant what I say the first time. Come around again in a week and let us see how you're getting on. Lock that door; I'm going to buy a bulldog—a regular thoroughbred Herod jimber-jaw, trained for children.

Within a week, that man, after he scans the first page of the news sheet will turn to the scholarship page to see how his colt is running. Will be elated when he sees his favorite making gains. He will feel a little depressed the morning he falls a little behind When he thinks of it, he will cut out a coupon. And if the child only knows enough to come to him at the psychological moment, when the last returns are pouring in and the crisis is imminent, that man, who has not yet been able to find the Herodian thoroughbred he is not after, is good for another year's subscription.

Is he so deeply interested in the fortunes of his favorite paper, which he takes, and reads, and in which he advertises, and which he likes, because it is independent enough to differ with him at times? "I want a newspaper," he sometimes says, while he is putting together, like a Chinese puzzle, the fragments of the page which had aroused his wrath to the dynamite stage. "I want a newspaper with opinions and convictions of its own. When I want to listen to an echo of my own thoughts in my own voice, I'll go out into the canyon and holler at the cliffs." This to his wife, whom he has caught laughing behind her own favorite page in Part II.

The fact is, he never once thinks of the fortunes or the adversities of the paper in his interest in the scholarship contest. His is the personal interest of a man who has taken sides. He has a candidate in the running. He remembers the awkward boy or the frightened girl who came trembling into his office that fearfully busy morning. He feels a certain responsibility for keeping that candidate close to the head of the poll. He is a little jealous of the praise accorded, most impartially and justly by the scholarship editor to some other contestant. Led on by this personal interest in the candidate, he becomes interested in the school which is the chosen goal of the youngster's ambition. He asks questions about it of men who know. He commends it very heartily to any parents who may be looking for a school of that class for their children. He begins to extol it as one of the first of its character in the State. And all he knows about it is that he voted a year's subscription to The Times for a child who is trying for a scholarship in that school.

And by and by the man happens to think of the paper that is behind all this interest. Unconsciously he begins to compare a "scholarship contest" with a contest for some toy prize; for a bit of pleasure, for a pleasant outing, for some profit of a mere intrinsic value. He thinks of other contests in which he has been importuned to take votes with his good money, in which the coveted boon was something that could be bought at any store. But here is a permanent treasure at the goal of this race. Something that lasts for a lifetime. And for longer than one lifetime.

For the goal is a schoolhouse. Something very serious. Something that sifts the contestants even before they line up for the race. Something that eliminates the lazy, the indifferent, the careless, the luxurious, the pleasure-loving. It makes a careful selection of the fittest, the ambitious, the earnest, the persistent, as the entries are made. It gives the generous young rivals positive assurance that every day of the race will be a day of hard work, mingled with a great deal of drudgery, beset with many difficulties, clouded with many disappointments, and roughened with many rebuffs. The race is a training course for courage, and patience, and hope, and persistence. The weak ones will fall by the way. Every child who enters the contests begins a course of rigorous schooling the first day, a schooling that is beneficial for body and mind and soul.

Every contestant who finishes the course, even the ones who come in last, away down among the big numbers and small prizes or no prizes, will be among the victors. The youngster at the foot of the list, if he perseveres and comes in at the finish will have won a prize that a money value cannot measure. The discipline of the contest has bestowed upon him "honorable mention," well deserved. He comes through the broken tape, last in the running, it may be, but stronger, and braver, and patienter than when he started. He has learned confidence in himself and he will do better next time.

Indeed, it may well be contended that the little bunch down at the foot, finishing amid the belated cheers that greeted the heroes of the vanguard, are the best metal in the line. For it is harder to run in the rear, harder to fight when the battle goes against one, harder, a hundred fold harder, to play well and cheerfully a losing game, than it is to play up with the best you have amid the applause of the grand stand, the playing of the bands, and the editor of the games coming to meet the victors with the wreaths of fame. That's why men recognize the value of a "scholarship contest" to winners and losers alike.

The newspaper that places such prizes within the reach of its contestants receives its greatest reward in something more enduring than gold. To put a boy and girl in the way of securing an education; to endow an eager mind with rare intellectual culture; to enrich the mind and body with the blended gifts of thinking brain and working hands, this is to capitalize these young lives with a wealth that will increase with the spending, and that will be entailed upon the next generation, a greater treasure than it was in the beginning. There is no cash prize that can equal this.

This is why busy men are concerned in these scholarship contests. The feeling may begin with the mere interest a healthy man takes in any race, in a contest of any sort. But it deepens as the full meaning and immeasurable value of the contest and the prizes unfold themselves. Already "The Times Alumni and Alumnae" are taking their places among men, and doing postgraduate in the world that is debtor to them for the increased ability, the better efficiency which was made possible by the great reward of The Times Scholarship contests.

EASY.

JUSTICES TURN THE PICKETS LOOSE AND THEY CELEBRATE.

CROWDS of labor-union pickets poured out of the City Jail shortly before 11 o'clock last night and deployed down the streets laughing at the impotence of the police and praising Justices Rose and Frederickson. The jail was emptied of pickets—who have been held prisoners there in response to a sympathetic order issued by the friendly justices, who stated that the unionites should be allowed to go home over Sunday without being put to the inconvenience of giving bail. They were released on their own recognizance after giving their places of residence.

More than thirty were held in jail prior to the order, and when they were allowed to go out on the streets the news spread quickly throughout the city, and there were enthusiastic labor union demonstrations. Some independent workingmen were forced to hurry home for fear of meeting with violence. The pickets became bold, and the police found it necessary to use threats in many instances to keep hoodlums from holding full sway.

FIGHT AND STABBING.

Infuriated labor rowdies began a campaign of bloodshed shortly after 6 o'clock last night, when one of them stabbed Petro Ferro, 21 years old, No. 959 East Thirty-first street, an independent workingman, who could not suppress a smile when pickets who attacked another Italian were beaten in a fist fight near the Baker Iron Works.

Ferro passed the place shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was joined by another Italian he knew by sight as fellow worker. Both are employed at the Baker Iron Works and were off for the afternoon. Pickets recognized them as independent workers and they threw rocks and sticks at the two, following them a block. The Italians paid a call on friends and started back home before 6 o'clock. When they reached Twenty-ninth street and Compton avenue, they met three of their former assailants and were vilified and cursed. The unknown worker, who is larger and older than Ferro, told the pickets that he would be willing to prove that he is no coward if they would let him fight them one at a time. They apparently aquiesced and selected the most burly of their gang to meet him first. Ferro, who cannot speak English, stood by silent and frightened. When the powerful ruffian rushed at ... to witness a tragedy. Instead the brave Italian suddenly side stepped and began to spar with the skill of a professional boxer. In a few minutes he had knocked the union laborite into the street. Ferro was so surprised that he could not avoid smiling. The sprawling burly jumped up and he and his two friends rushed at the boy before the other Italian could help him. One of the laborites drove a knife into the young man's back and slashed him on the forearm. The two Italians fled, frightened, and the pickets ran in another direction, successfully keeping out of sight of the police.

When Ferro was taken to the Receiving Hospital, Dr. Wiley found that he had an ugly cut behind the right shoulder blade and a deep gash on the arm. After dressing the wounds the surgeon questioned his patient, but found he could not speak English. An unidentified stranger who had witnessed a part of the affair, brought Ferro's friend in to tell his story. The latter gave a terse and modest account of what had taken place and then left to take the boy to his home without letting anyone find out his name. He said he wanted to avoid dangerous notoriety.

Throughout the night pickets prowled the streets waiting for a chance to begin hostilities with all whom they suspect of being not in sympathy with them. The vigilance of the police saved independent workers from many dangerous encounters.

Capt. Lehnhausen detailed twelve picked men as his "picket squad," and sent them out to keep order last night. He believes that there may be an attempt to have a unionite demonstration Monday morning, when some of the picket's cases are heard. He has stated that he will have guards at the Central Police Station to see that the courtrooms are not overcrowded, and will allow the unionites to send only as many men into the courtrooms as can be accommodated in the seats.

BIG PIANO STORE CLOSED BY SHERIFF

ANGELUS MUSIC COMPANY FAILS.

$73,000 Stock of Pianos and Musical Instruments Involved.

Next Step of Defunct Concern Not Known Yet.

Last week came the first announcement of the failure of the Angelus Music Company, one of the most severe business catastrophies which has recently taken place in Los Angeles and which has been a topic of widespread conversation among the city's other music houses and among business men in general for several days.

The Angelus Music Company had been doing an apparently flourishing business and selling a great many pianos. For that reason the news of its failure was all the more surprising. Whether Bradstreet could record this failure under the head of those due to incompetency or inexperience, cannot be definitely stated, but it is certain that a lack of interest in the firm's goods on the part of the public was not the cause.

The stock of pianos and musical instruments involved totals in the neighborhood of $73,000, and includes what is generally conceded to be as fine a line of high grade musical goods as has ever been shown in this city. The Angelus Company were exclusive agents for such pianos as the Hazelton, the old reliable Decker, the Hobart M. Cable, the Reed & Sons, the Draper Bros., the Steinbach, and a great number of equally fine makes. Nothing definite is known regarding the action which the Angelus Music Company will next take, although it is generally understood that the manufacturers whose goods they handled have joined issue and that their representative is even now on the way to Los Angeles to take charge of the bankrupt concern. What his action will be when he arrives is largely a matter of conjecture, although it is to be hoped that he will not take the step which is customary in such cases, of boxing the pianos and sending them back to the factories, but that instead he will see his way clear to making some arrangement for the sale of the splendid line of goods in our local field. Numerous bids will undoubtedly be received for all or part of the valuable stock of musical merchandise, fixtures, etc.

NO MORE WRINKLES

BEAUTIFUL BUST

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR VANISHES LIKE MAGIC BY A NEW TREATMENT

Let this woman send you free, everything she agrees, follow her instructions, then if you are pleased, recommend her wonderful methods to your friends.

The World's Greatest Beauty

SHE LOOKS LIKE A GIRL OF 18

This clever woman has not a wrinkle upon her face; she has perfected a marvelous simple method which brought a wonderful change in her face in a single night. For removing wrinkles and developing the bust, her method is truly wonderfully rapid.

She made herself the woman she is today and brought about the wonderful change in her appearance in a secret and pleasant manner. Her complexion is as clear and fair as that of a child. She turned her scrawny figure into a beautiful bust and well-developed form. She had thin, scrawny eyelashes and eyebrows, which could scarcely be seen, and she made them long, thick and beautiful by her own methods.

You can imagine her joy, when, by her own simple discovery, she removed every wrinkle from her face, and developed her thin neck anad form to beautiful proportions.

Nothing is taken into the stomach, no mush or common massage, no harmless plasters, no rollers, no worthless creams.

By her new process she removes wrinkles and develops the whole figure plump and fat.

It is simply astonishing the hundreds of women who write in regarding the wonderful results from this new beauty treatment, which is beautifying their face and form after beauty doctors and other methods failed.

Mary Merritt, of Wis., writes, her wrinkles have entirely disappeared. Miss Hanson writes, her bust is beautifully developed and wrinkles gone. Mrs. Markham writes, she has not a wrinkle left.

The valuable new beauty book which Madame Cunningham is sending free to thousands of women is certainly a blessing to womankind, as it makes known her remarkable methods of beautifying the face and figure of unattractive women.

All readers should write her at once, and she will send you absolutely free, everything she agrees, and will show our readers how to quickly remove wrinkles; how to develop the bust; how to make long, thick eyelashes and eyebrows; how to instantly remove superfluous hair; how to remove blackheads, pimples and freckles; how to remove dark circles under the eyes; how to quickly remove double chin; how to build up sunken cheeks and add flesh to the body; how to darken gray hair and stop hair falling; how to remove warts and moles.

Simply address your letter to Evelyn Cunningham, Suite 805, 7 Randolph street, Chicago, Ill., and don't sent any money, because particulars are free, as this charming woman is doing her utmost to benefit girls or women in need of secret information which will add to their beauty and make life sweeter and lovelier in every way.

No more does the householder pile trash and heaps in his back door neighbors and neighbors' visitors see it, and just so surely as the dirt behind the sideboard comes to light at embarrassing times, so surely will the maintainer of a disreputable back yard lose by his negligence. The man who comes to buy his property or his neighbor's property is going to be influenced by every back yard in sight. You see, you wind up right back at the dollars and cents consideration, however you take it. Self-respect pays that way as well as in finer coin. The mere cleaning up of a back yard isn't enough, either. Flower seed is cheap, and spading is excellent exercise. A little vine-clad pergola with a shaded seat or two costs almost nothing. The average back yard, if planted to beds of eatable green stuff, will save many a dollar which would ordinarily be pocketed by some grocer or Chinese truck gardener. So far as that goes, any back yard can be made both attractive and useful. Some local back yards are neither.

Out in Front as Well.

If anyone imagines, however, that all the popular lack of the homely civic pride commented on here is successfully hidden in the back yards of the city he is sadly mistaken. Out in front it is even more noticeable, not only because it is in front, but because there is in a way less excuse for it. If any man fails to appreciate the value of a good "front" let him permit his front lawn to grow up in Railroad Man Spends Fortune in Laying Out Beautiful "Rancho Rominna"—Groves, Formal Gardens, Pools and Rustic Pergolas Enter Into Landscape.

At the head of La Brea avenue in Hollywood George H. Ross, vice-president of half a dozen railroads and director in as many more, is putting the finishing touches to one of the most beautiful and picturesque foothill homes in all the Southwest. To the question, often asked, as to how much money he is spending on the property, Mr. Ross vouchsafes only the non-committal reply that he is spending "enough" to carry out all his "ideas." Estimates range from $100,000 to $150,000, and the latter figure is probably not far from correct.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross call the place the "Rancho Rominna," the name being a combination of the word Ross with Minna, the first name of Mrs. Ross. The grounds of the "rancho" are six acres in extent, having a frontage of 220 feet by a depth of 1236 feet and extending from the end of La Brea street northward to where the mountains rise steeply above the hill slope. The house is set back 160 feet from the private avenue which marks the front line of the property.

The grounds from the house to the street are Versailles in miniature. Beds of flowers, flanked by boxwood and bay trees, and smooth stretches of green sod, are terraced downward to a stone-lined lily pond with a fountain. The effect of the whole is enhanced by an ornamental stone balustrade and seats of Italian marble at the base of the terracing. Here also is a stone sun dial. The lawn looks to be a generation old, whereas the work of laying out the grounds was begun in June, 1909, and the actual planting did not commence until February of the present year. All the landscaping has been done under the direction of Howard & Smith of this city.

The driveway winds upward to the right of the house and ends in a circle in front of the garage, an attractive bungalow building, which also provides quarters for the men servants. Back of this is a large chicken house and the quarters of the gardeners. The drive is lined with rows of cocos plumosis. Directly back of the residence is a pergola garden house, and extending northward from this a rustic pergola 320 feet in length, divides the rose gardens in half.

To the left of the house and extending back toward the mountain a grove of Himalaya cedars has been set out. In the same part of the grounds are citrus and other fruit trees and many rare and unusual trees and shrubs. The slopes are planted to English ivy and flowers. The vegetable gardens are still farther to the north and extend to the base of the mountain.

At the north end of the arbor pergola is a pool set in a jungle of tropical plants and shrubs. To the north of this are a lily pond, a grotto and a waterfall. The connecting stream is spanned by a rustic bridge.

The house is of the English type with certain California adaptations, and contains fifteen rooms. It is of cement exterior. The color effect is cream, with green trimmings, the roof being of green tile. Plans for the structure were prepared by Mrs. Ross herself, the details being worked out by an eastern architect.

The residence has five balconies which command as many charming views. From the living room is visible a wonderful panorama which takes in the mountains, the whole city and the ocean. This room is finished in oriental style. The hall is in Gothic and the dining-room in early English. The appointments are luxurious.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross were formerly Chicagoans and for many years before determining to live here had spent their winters in Southern California. They first saw the site of their present home in March, 1909, and selected it after an inspection of practically the whole of the section. The place was formerly a part of a foothill tract once owned by the late Andrew Hay, and is just to the west of Hay Cañon and directly opposite the "Outpost."

POLES TO THE REAR.

Realty Board and Corporations to Co-operate in Important Measure.

A committee of the Los Angeles Realty Board held a conference yesterday with members of the "joint pole committee," which embraces representatives of the power, electric light and telephone corporations, with the object of arranging for the future elimination of poles from the public streets. It is hoped by those who are giving the subject attention that it may be made unnecessary to set poles in the streets, either by the provision of alleys or by the reservation of four-foot right of way at the rear of all lots.

The idea has met with favor from many quarters and the consensus of opinion appears to be in favor of alleys. There are said, however, to be many possible legal entanglements and technicalities in the way of making the plan general.

As a result of yesterday's conference, the attorneys for the interested corporations have been asked to prepare a brief form of easement which might be practical for incorporation in future deeds. This will be submitted to the Realty Board Committee. It is said that the plan of putting all poles at the rear of lots has been so popular in sections where it has already been tried as to practically insure the co-operation of all owners with the Realty Board in any measure which that body may suggest for the solution of the pole problem.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

L. L. Bowen has returned from a two months' outing spent in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. He finished up with one week in San Francisco, where he attended the realty convention.

Improvements are being rushed on Emil Firth's new Arlington Square tract at Arlington street and Santa Barbara avenue, and will soon be finished.

The [illegible] M. Oswald Company reports the opening of Manchester Heights No. [illegible] at Manchester and Vermont avenues. A large sum will be expended in improvements.

BUYS EAST FOURTH CORNER.

The Goodrich Realty Company reports the sale for Lily B. Coe to George F. Thompson of a lot 45x140 feet in size, at the northeast corner of Fourth and St. Louis streets, for a consideration of $5000. It is the intention of the buyer, who is an eastern man, to immediately begin the erection of a modern apartment-house on the site.

BUYS ON OLIVE.

A lot 50x165 feet in size at No. 1223 South Olive street has been sold by Richard G. Beebe to Richard Ryse, through the agency of Bryan & Bradford. The consideration is reported at $35,000. The improvements consist of a two-story frame house. The purchase was made for investment.

SIGNIFICANT DEALS.

Extensive Improvements Planned for Sites Sold Through Local Agents.

Robert Marsh & Company report the following sales: The Mt. Washington Company to Olive McKenzie, unimproved lot on Riverside Drive, $2500. This lot commands a magnificent view of mountains and cañon and the intention of the purchaser is to commence at once the erection of a fine home. Robt. Marsh & Company to David E. Spangler, unimproved lot, 120x135 feet, on west side of Arlington, 240 feet north of Pico. This is in Westchester Place, and calls for residence restrictions of $12,000. Mr. Spangler will build a home very much in excess of this price.

Edward Harrington to Major F. S. Taggert, two blocks of frontage on east side of Western avenue, which includes all the property between Eleventh, Harrington and Twelfth streets, [illegible] lots in all. Major Taggert will commence at once the erection of bungalows to sell at from $3500 to $4500. The consideration was $20,000.

Agnes B. Todd to George Foltz, six-room bungalow, No. 2906 West Jefferson street, $2650. L. Schlegle to Mrs. Louise Maggs, six-room bungalow at No. 1315 West Forty-second street, $3700. N. P. Sorle to Anna L. Giddings, six-room bungalow at No. 2318 West Thirtieth street, $4600. F. S. Taggert to N. S. Rutherford, the property at No. 123 West Adams street, lot 57x164, but improved with old 10-room house, $7500.

The above sales are significant from the fact that contemplated improvements on the sites changing hands will aggregate $100,000.

WESTERN AVENUE SALES.

The Victor G. Kleinberger Company report sales in its new Western Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street tract as follows: Frances M. Wright, lot on north side of Middleton place, w[illegible]gle, Manhattan walk, $775; S. Alvi[illegible]joining West Thirty-eighth place[illegible]tan walk, southwest corner of Ma[illegible]south side of $875; Harry Watterm[illegible] Western avenue, Middleton Place, w[illegible] Holden Browne, nue, $900; Mrs. [illegible] Thirty-ninth street, north side of [illegible]tern avenue, $850; Earl west of [illegible] south side of Middleton M. W[illegible] of Western avenue, $1100; place Edwards, Thirty-ninth street, [illegible] of Manhattan place, $900. Mr. Engle will erect a bungalow on his lot within the next ten days, and E. M. Wright will at once build a seven-room house.

ARLINGTON SQUARE SALES.

Emil Firth reports the following sales in Arlington Square: Miss Olive W. Kelso, 100 feet on Arlington avenue, north of Santa Barbara, $1700; Miss Jeanette Tweeddale, fifty feet, corner Arlington and Thirty-ninth, $1100; Miss Margaret M. Sperling, fifty feet on Second avenue, south of Thirty-ninth street, $825; Mrs. E. P. Johnston, forty-seven feet on Third avenue, south of Thirty-ninth, $650; Alexander H. Clarke, forty feet, adjoining above, $650; Mrs. Garnett Paull, forty-six feet on Third avenue, south of Thirty-ninth street, $625.

FIRM LOCATES HERE.

A deal has just been closed whereby the Main Street Realty Company has leased to G. H. Cherry of the Cherry Clothing Company of San Francisco and Oakland, the storeroom at No. 645 South Main street for a term of years. A men's and boys' clothing store will be opened about September 1. Negotiations were closed by A. R. Holt of the W. Ross Campbell Company. The same agency reports the closing of a lease for No. 644 Center Place to Kelsen and Cole to be used as an automobile repair shop.

Children's Tennis ournament to Be Held On Mt. ashington Courts August 12th-13th

The General Public Is Invited to Attend the Events.

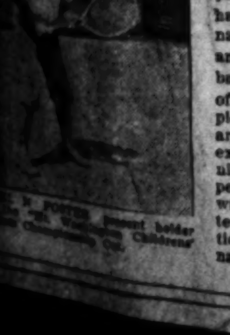
Large Crowd Expected.

Mt. Washington Children's Tennis Tournament event that will be held on the courts of the Washington Hotel Friday and Saturday, August and 13th. The games will begin each morning o'clock. Events will consist of two series doubles, and one series of singles. One of the of doubles is open for boys from nine to thirteen and the other for boys from thirteen to sixteen. The singles are for all boys under sixteen. age limit will be strictly observed. The Tournament will be open to all boys residing in Los County.

entry fee of 25c will be charged the players each event. Handsome prizes will be awarded. It is expected that several well known tennis will act as judges. The management states entries must be turned in by August 10th to H. Johnson, Chairman of the committee on arrangements, Hotel Mt. Washington, Avenue 43, Los Angeles.



N. FOSTER present holder Mt. Washington Childrens' Championship Cup.

Among the entries are young players from Alhambra, Pasadena, Long Beach and other suburban cities. Many of the young people who will play are really clever exponents of tennis, and it is expected that there will be some interesting exhibitions of the fascinating game. The management extends an invitation to the general public to be present. The Mt. Washington Courts are said to be the best constructed and most attractively located courts in the State. Seating accommodations are afforded for a large number of people.

Up to the present time, the following entries have been received: Noel Foster, Raymond Johnson, Clifford and Beverly Hill, Rogers Adams, Ellsworth Bailey, Ray Moon, Bruce Saunders, Louis Bundy, G. Clover, C. D. Striffen, R. J. Warnig, L. Jacobson, M. Vancack, K. Lucas, E. Crumley, F. Watson, M. Haspen.

Since the vast amount of public and private improvements have been completed on Mt. Washington, the beautiful hill property presents a very attractive appearance. Mt. Washington today is surely not the Mt. Washington of twelve months ago. It is today a residential community, that, from an improvement, scenic and climatic standpoint, is without an equal in California today. Although Mt. Washington has been visited by tens of thousands of people during the last few months, fully half the people of Los Angeles do not know the incomparable beauty of this spot. Conservative real estate operators predict that lots will be worth $100 per front foot and more on every Mt. Washington boulevard in three years. Even during the so-called "dull summer season," the handsome Mt. Washington Hotel has been unable to meet the demand for accommodations. The management states that 100 more rooms could be easily filled, right now. For maps, price lists, and all special information about Mt. Washington property, see Robert Marsh & Company, 140 West Fifth street, Ground Floor, Security Building, or Horace E. Smith, Resident Agent on the mountain.

BETWEEN 6TH AND WILSHIRE.

This 8-room, 2-story house on a lot 50x125, is the greatest bargain ever offered to a home-seeker or investor. The southwest corner of Sixth and Rampart sold three days ago for $23,000. The house you could not build today for $4000, it has been built about 3 or 4 years, is in excellent condition and has a very artistic appearance from the front. It would easily be worth $7000 today. This makes this place actually worth $9500. Right across the street they ask $12,500 for a house and lot, the house not being as good as this. We really believe that we are offering the biggest snap ever offered in the Wilshire-Westlake district. You must remember that this residence is only a stone's throw from Andrews Blvd., the highest-priced residence property in Los Angeles; also one block from beautiful Sunset Park and three blocks from Westlake Park. $2500 cash will handle it.

IN THE VERY BEST RESIDENCE SECTION OF LOS ANGELES.

NOT MUCH CASH AND EASY TERMS.

At last we can offer something entirely new. This residence is not only artistic inside and out, but comfortable and liveable as well. We have never shown a house that people took to on the first impression like this one, but then we have never known a house designed with such large, airy rooms and such an abundance of light and space for under $15,000. In fact, the finish of this house, electric fixtures, plumbing, the beautiful white enameled kitchen, with its many cupboards, its 45 feet of porch space, in fact everything is on such a scale that you would expect this place to cost double the asking price. The papering is especially designed and imported and is in the best taste that can possibly be gotten by experts in this line. Even the mantel in the living-room is way out of ordinary, being 10 feet long, while most mantels are 6, and of imported Gruby tile. This place has 9 splendid rooms, 2 balconies upstairs, one back and one front. The one in front is 12x14, as large as a room, and has a splendid view of the whole surrounding district, which is built up of $10,000 to $20,000 homes. The lot, which is elevated and terraced, is high and sightly, full 60 feet and 145 deep.

$25,000.

PALATIAL RESIDENCE.

This especially well-planned residence, located in one of the most exclusive private parks in Los Angeles, improved with broad streets, wide parkings and ornamental lights, which are LIGHTED every evening, was built for a home, but owing to reverses the owner is compelled to dispose of it. No expense was spared to make this house ideal both in plan and construction. The first floor consists of a large and spacious living-room, library, den, conservatory, dining-room, kitchen and maid's room with bath. There are 4 large sleeping-rooms, with baths, on the second floor, and on the third floor is a billiard-room and another maid's room. Off of the second floor is a large sleeping porch. The interior finish throughout leaves nothing to be desired, being mahogany on the first floor and white enamel on the second. A magnificent broad staircase leads to the second floor, with art glass windows at the landing. Hardwood floors throughout. The electric fixtures were especially designed and are in keeping with the rest of the house. Furnace and Ruud heater in basement, which is large and airy. The one particular feature of this house which will appeal to every housewife is the number and size of the closets. Every bit of available space has been utilized and there is ample storage room for everything. The lot is 70 feet wide, with ample depth. In the rear is a garage, not a shed. It has a cement floor, is sealed and is large enough to accommodate two machines. In fact, nothing has been omitted to make this residence well nigh perfect. Exceptionally easy terms will be made by owner and he will consider clear city lots up to $10,000.

BEAUTIFUL GROUNDS

CHARMING CORNER VILLA.

LOT 117x200—ONEONTA PARK.

$27,500.
$27,500.

Oneonta Park, South Pasadena, is now one of the most beautiful residence suburbs of Los Angeles. Perhaps you have seen and admired some of the fine homes in this section, surrounded by broad, magnificent grounds. Very likely you would desire above all else, to have a home of your own, among these delightful surroundings, were it not for the endless work and worry of planning and overseeing its construction. If you could find one already built just to fit your ideals, with the yard all set out and flourishing with beautiful plants, flowers and trees, you wouldn't hesitate a moment to become its owner. Well, here it is—not a thing about this splendid home that you would wish altered or improved—it is just finished and would now be occupied by the owner if unforeseen circumstances had not prevented. Read over the following description—a visit to the property will prove the truth of every statement.

The house could not have been more carefully constructed; cement porch with one end glass-inclosed; a lead oak entrance through which you enter the living-room direct; this room, dining-room and den are all finished in quarter-sawed oak, all selected for the unusually beautiful marking of the grain, which has been brought out most effectively by the soft velvet finish; above the paneling the living-room walls are finished in imported silk; beamed ceilings; Gruby tile mantel, handsome center light, with cut-glass globes; large front and side windows; one of the most attractive features of this house is the many large windows in every room and a very unique idea, is the small transom effect over every window; these small windows can all be left open, day or night, when there is no one in the house, and no burglar could possibly enter through them; thus the house can always be open for fresh air; floors are the finest hardwood throughout; dining-room opens from living-room with double doors; paneled high in this beautiful oak, with imported tapestry above; cost $7 a yard; beamed ceilings; broad bay window one side; stately center light; the den opens off living-room and is a front room; one entire side of this room is lined with book-cases, with writing desk in center; one end is all windows, with a window-seat below and there is a large front window; walls above the panels are hung with velour. There are three of the daintiest bedrooms; all the woodwork and closets are cedar with the finest white enamel finish, cut-glass door knobs, and walls all hung in French papers of exquisite design; some of the closets are as large as small rooms; they have built-in drawers and hat boxes; all of cedar. Two of the bedrooms have built-in dressing-cases, with full-length mirror; the windows overlook the gardens, making most pleasant rooms; bathroom is most luxurious with tile floor and finest plumbing; four mirrors, two oval and one broad one width of tub; model buffet kitchen, with cabinets from floor to ceiling; all of cedar; floor covered with inlaid linoleum, sink and board of woodstone, width of room; large hood for stoves; screen porch, cement cellar with best furnace; Ruud heater, fruit closets and laundry tubs; back stoop inclosed two sides and roofed.

The lot is 117x200 feet and has been laid out by a most efficient landscape gardener. Here are the beautiful cocos plumosa palms—one of them costing $65—the waving Seaforthia Elegans, Chamaerops Excelsa and Phoenix Canariensis palms. Among the shrubs and firs are the Abies Nordmaniano, Spruce Pungens Glauca and Cedrus Deodara, but more to be desired than almost anything else are the three live oaks on the place—their dignified beauty and their welcome shade is most alluring. beds of ferns are built up around the foot of each oak. The garden is a bower of flowers, beds of almost every kind, with gravel walks between; roses climbing over the summer-house, over the trellis at the porch, over the fences, which are most artistic—in pergola effect; the parking outside the yard is set with the beautiful Washingtonia Robusta palms and camphor trees; retaining wall of cobblestone and blue brick in rustic effect surrounds the yard and is built on either side of driveway; in the rear of yard is a separate house for Japs, complete with running water; chicken yards all fenced and wired, top and sides; separate tool house; fine two-story garage with cement floor; size 22x22, large enough for two machines; sink, running water, toilet, robe closet and twenty-two windows; second floor all finished; cement drive to street 15 feet wide; outbuildings are built of shingles the same as house; finished with three coats of oil; all the walks in yard and front steps to house are blue brick.

Property is located corner Oak and Milan, Oneonta Park. See any real estate agent, or ALTHOUSE BROS.

ANOTHER ONEONTA RESIDENCE.

This property, at 1611 Milan st., is right next to the place we have just described, with another fine home adjoining on the other side. Large two-story house, with four bedrooms and servant's room; the front cement porch is sixteen feet deep at one end and 38 feet long—across entire east front, making the porch as useful as a room; tiled, vestibuled entrance; oak door, the reception hall paneled high in curly birch and velour above; the living-room is in beautiful Peruvian mahogany with silk velour above in the same tones; beamed ceilings; Gruby tile mantel to harmonize with finish; large front window and six casement windows on the side; den is also a front room, paneled high in mahogany, circle bay window, built-in bookcases and desk; dining-room is paneled in oak, with blue velour above; circle bay window all one side; fine buffet; buffet kitchen in white enamel, with woodstone sink; large screen porch; laundry tubs, furnace and Ruud heater; servant's room downstairs with complete bath; four large bedrooms upstairs and sleeping porch, enclosed three sides with glass; hardwood floors throughout house; bedrooms all in white enamel with mahogany doors and cut-glass knobs; the two large front bedrooms connect; walls all hung in beautiful flowered paper; many windows, large closets, built-in dressing-cases with full-length mirrors; tile bath, oval mirror and lavatory; finest plumbing; built-in drawers; in the rear yard is a grand live oak, spreading fifty feet; almost across entire yard, which is all laid out with many flower beds, wide cement drive and porte-cochere. A splendid house. Inquire of any real estate agent, or at address below.

FOR SALE—

BUY A HOME SITE IN VICTORIA PARK.

THE LOS ANGELES MASTERPIECE IN RESIDENCE PARK CONSTRUCTION.

LOCATED ON WEST ADAMS HILL.

MAGNIFICENT MOUNTAIN AND VALLEY VIEW.

SPACIOUS LOTS ON WINDING DRIVEWAYS. $2300 TO $5750.

If you want a home place in the most magnificent private residence park in Los Angeles—the finest residence city in the world—you MUST see

VICTORIA PARK.

It is a masterpiece. Its elevated location on West Adams Hill makes it entirely unique. The magnificence of its mountain and valley view can never be obstructed. Victoria Park is a creation of the united efforts of twenty well-known citizens of this city. It embodies features and advantages that are exclusive—and are not duplicated elsewhere.

Large lots, 60 to 115 feet frontage, averaging 150 feet deep.

Winding driveways, 100 feet broad.

Parkings, 20 feet wide.

7-foot cement sidewalks.

Four rows of trees along each driveway.

Asphalt pavement from Victoria Park to business center. Convenient location—Pico Heights cars on north side of park, beach cars along Sixteenth street and south side. Subway right of way from sixty-three yards to one and a half blocks north.

Park illuminated by large stone and iron electroliers, 15 feet high, each carrying five large electric globes.

No street or driveways names are used, the addresses being Victoria Park, with the number of the lot.

If you expect to build a home costing anywhere from $5000 to $25,000 or upwards, in justice to yourself, you cannot afford not to investigate the advantages of Victoria Park. The building requirements are $5000 and $6000, according to location, and many expensive homes are already completed, all of which exceed in cost the building requirements. Prices of homesites in Victoria Park are decidedly reasonable, considering the extraordinary character of the property.

For further particulars, telephone us—or if you desire to see the property, we will take you out in our automobile.

FOR SALE—

WHEN ONE MAN

buys FIVE LOTS in a SINGLE TRACT and IMMEDIATELY commences the erection of a HANDSOME BUNGALOW ON EACH of the five, it shows conclusively that after he has investigated a good many developments, he has decided that the tract in which he made his purchase is the BEST from the viewpoints of PRESENT ATTRACTIVENESS and FUTURE probabilities of GROWTH.

That very thing, the sale of five lots to a single purchaser, occurred here not a fortnight ago. And the buyer was as SHREWD A PURCHASER of property as the city contains. But after looking at every development of size in the city limits HE CHOSE THIS for the scene of his investment.

When he came to look at the tract, he saw GANGS OF MEN at work GRADING the streets and preparing them for the PAVEMENTS with which they will be finished. And by the way, this is the ONLY tract in Los Angeles in which PAVED STREETS are to be found. He saw numerous HANDSOME HOUSES built and building, he saw CEMENT SIDEWALKS and CURBS already installed, and 10-foot PARKWAYS ready to be planted.

He saw also that the Jefferson Street car line, with its FIVE MINUTE SERVICE, and the Southern Pacific Railroad BOTH ran through the tract, and he knew that the latter road is to be ELECTRIFIED AT ONCE. Do you wonder that he bought?

We can show you these same features, some of them A LITTLE FARTHER ADVANCED than he saw them, if you will call at the tract. Take the W. Jefferson street car line. Telephone 73439, or Main 1512.

FOR SALE—

EAGLE ROCK.

More new homes are being built in Eagle Rock right now than ever before in its history.

The splendid, bracing air, the altitude of from 800 to 900 feet, the pure mountain water, the wonderfully fertile soil, and the high-class of citizens, are rapidly making Eagle Rock a second Pasadena in everything except prices.

Just think of fifty-foot lots, one block from city car line, on petrolithic paved streets, with wide tree-planted parkways and cement curbs and walks, for $400 to $500. Remember that beautiful homes are all around these lots, with such flower gardens as you cannot find in town; that city gas and telephones are installed, and that Occidental College is being established there.

Grading is now being done on the new college campus, and the day the new buildings are commenced, we shall advance every lot in our various tracts from $100 to $150 per lot.

We are selling lots now for $350 upwards—10 per cent. cash, balance $10 per month.

A beautiful five-acre walnut orchard in full bearing, only 30 minutes out from the heart of the city, on the rapid Venice Short Line. Bare acreage in the same locality now selling readily in large tracts at $1500 to $2000 per acre. This will pay 10 per cent. on the investment, and make anyone a beautiful country home and at the same time be within easy access of the city. This property will front directly on the new Venice blvd., work upon which is rapidly progressing. This beats paying $2000 per acre for a walnut orchard 40 miles out from the city as others are doing every day, and the future benefits to be derived from an investment of this kind are a hundred-fold greater.

Do you appreciate the convenience of good roads? The new boulevard from Los Angeles intersects the La Puente Ranch and at this point the road is completed and open for traffic.

LA PUENTE RANCH.

This is last chance to buy unimproved land in this famous old rancho.

THE FIFTH and the last subdivision containing is now open for sale and we will sell lots of 10 acres and up.

This new subdivision is in many respects the best that we have ever offered at any price.

We have no fear of contradiction when we say that there is no land in California superior to this tract.

THE SOIL.

is a dark sediment loam of exceptional depth and has no objectionable features whatever.

ALFALFA

flourishes in this fertile soil, producing on the average 10 tons per acre each year.

It is also the home of ENGLISH WALNUTS.

Adjoining this tract are hundreds of acres of the finest walnut orchards that you would wish to see.

To the north of and east are the

ORANGE GROVES of the famous Covina orange district, the 3rd largest shipping point for oranges in the State.

WATER.

Water for irrigation and domestic use can be developed on the land, or water stock can be purchased from the La Puente Co-operative Water Co. The company has a capacity of 1000 miner's inches.

LOCATION.

The La Puente Ranch is only 14 miles east of Los Angeles by the Pacific Electric, Southern Pacific and Salt Lake roads, and adjoining the towns of El Monte, Puente and Covina. Good roads, schools, telephones, mail delivery, etc.

Prices $250 and $300 per acre.

Terms one-fourth cash, balance on or before 3 years. Interest 7 per cent. net. Unlimited certificate of title by Title Insurance & Trust Company.

Remember that we have sold nearly one and a half million dollars' worth of the Baldwin Ranch during the past 10 months. This alone gives the stamp of approval.

We have a large list of bearing walnut and alfalfa ranches at right prices.

To see this land go to our branch office at EL MONTE. Take Covina line cars.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES
BY
J. A. FITCH, POMONA, CAL.

Properties I advertise will be found as represented in my advertisements.

I've perhaps the LARGEST EXCLUSIVE LIST OF ORANGE AND LEMON GROVES, RANCHES AND COUNTRY HOMES for sale of any realty firm in Pomona Valley.

I've been selling orange groves for a long number of years. I KNOW THE BEST GROVES; THE BEST BUYS.

Notwithstanding 'tis the midsummer vacation term, by many real estate operators considered the dullest season of the year to sell real estate, I'm always busy closing deals right along every week in the year.

DURING THE PAST 30 DAYS HAVE SOLD 8 ORANGE GROVES, aggregating over ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS ($100,000,) beside ranch and Pomona city property sales.

Take it one year with another THE BEST INVESTMENT in Southern California is a good income-producing orange or lemon grove.

Now is the opportune time to purchase an orange grove. Later on, when the fruit is colored, with the increased demand from INVESTORS AND EASTERN HOMESEEKERS, orange groves will assuredly bring higher prices.

For best of reasons the properties herein advertised are now put on the market at special prices to insure prompt sale. Have many other GOOD BUYS.

One of the banner groves on famous Euclid ave., north of Upland, has just been placed exclusively in my hands for sale. This grove is in full bearing, fine, large, magnificent trees, in splendid condition, heavily set with new crop; one of the heaviest crops in the country.

40 acres, nearly 30 acres of which is in lemons, balance in navel and Valencia oranges; 8-room house, barn, fine grounds and shrubbery; over 50 varieties of roses. To be sold at a bargain. Terms; half down.

$12,500—One of the best buys in the San Dimas district as frostless a locality as can be found in California, 10 acres; 3 acres unplanted.

6-acre grove on Holt ave., Pomona, with improvements. Has not changed hands for about ten years. Owner recently died; widow removing from Pomona; must be sold quickly. The low price of $8500 secures it. Terms, $5000 down.

$7000—5-acre grove, Upland, part lemons, part oranges.

$12,500—20 acres Valencia and navel oranges, 5 years old; good locality.

$20,000—Positively one of the best buys in the celebrated La Verne district, a section practically immune from injurious frosts. This fine grove is beautifully located near the foothills and commands a magnificent view of the numerous orange groves and the valley below, comprising 22½ acres, about one-half of which is in full-bearing navel oranges, balance unplanted, the greater portion of which is fine soil for lemon or orange trees. The grove is in first-class condition, with an enormous crop set; independent pumping plant on the premises. This property is certainly a bargain at $20,000.

$8500—One of the best buys in a small grove in the Upland district, just off Euclid ave., 5 acres in full bearing, in good condition, fine crop set cheap improvements; owner leaving. For quick sale only $8500.

Have another 5-acre grove in the same district, one of the best small groves, new, modern bungalows; owner buying large grove. Can deliver for $10,000.

One of the cheapest lemon groves in Southern California, 10 acres in full bearing, in excellent condition, trees full of fruit; good lemon locality. With the high prices lemons are bringing, the increased tariff on lemons, and the recent ruling fixing one dollar as the freight basis on lemons, insuring a prosperous future for the Southern California lemon growers, this grove should bring $20,000, but if sold this week can deliver for much less.

$35,000—Should bring $45,000—20 acres in full bearing, in superb condition, trees heavily laden with fruit, at least 10,000-box crop, good improvements, practically frostless locality, fronts a prominent thoroughfare on the electric line. If you want a bargain better get busy on this grove.

Cheap walnut ranch, 10 acres, 5 acres 8 years old, in bearing; 5 acres 2 years old, intersected with alfalfa and deciduous fruit trees in bearing; excellent soil; fine place for poultry and gardening; 4-room house; location about three miles from Pomona, in the best alfalfa and walnut district. Reason for sale on account of sickness. Can deliver for $6500; $3500 handles it.

I've the exclusive sale of one of the best income producing lemon groves in Southern California; first time offered for sale; would not now be on the market but owner is getting toward the end of life's journey and wishes to retire. Location, famous La Verne district; 35 acres; 24 acres in lemons in full bearing; 6 acres in oranges; 5 acres unplanted. Nine-room house, barn; grove in magnificent condition, heavily fertilized, in the best producing state; two splendid irrigation wells, well equipped with best modern pumping machinery, with expensive pipe lines running through the La Verne, San Dimas district, goes with the property. The irrigation plants, pipe lines, etc., on this property are worth nearly what I can deliver the entire property for. Anyone who is able to finance this proposition had better see me quickly, as I purpose selling the property as soon as possible. Price and terms on application.

For other first-class buys in orange and lemon groves, ranches, country homes, or Pomona city real estate, it will pay you to first see what I can offer you before investing.

FOR EXCHANGE—

$30,000—20 acres, 16-year-old navel, and Valencia oranges, at Riverside. Water right is equivalent to 150 inches of water for 24 hours, once in 30 days, or five inches perpetual flow. Good cement flumes for handling water on the ranch. No buildings, packing-house, books show an average income for six years of $4695, ranging from $2500 to $9000 a year. Competent judges estimate this year's crop at $5000. Annual cost of water $61, or about $3 an acre. To talk about big returns for a single year savors of real estate hot air, while to show packing house returns for 6 years at over 16 per cent, per annum, is getting down to bed rock. It should go without saying, that this ranch is clear of incumbrance. Want Los Angeles or other near by city property for half. See J. A. KING, at Riverside, or

COPPER CREEK STOCK.

10,000 shares for sale immediately.

The Copper Creek Mining Company has just completed the following additions to their New Concentrating Mill, Six Vanner Tables for treating the finest grades of concentrates. Four callow settling tanks, and a Chilli Mill.

The excavations and foundations for the New Smelter are completed, and TEN CARLOADS of materials are at Winkleman ready to be hauled up to COPPER CREEK.

In addition a COPPER CONVERTOR is being built to enable the company to ship a finished product.

The Pres. and Gen. Mgr. and Assistant Gen. Mgr. are in the East arranging with parties to build a railroad to the San Pedro Valley there to connect with the El Paso and S. W. Railway, as that road owned by the Copper Queen Mining Co. of Bisbee (known as the Phelps Dodge Co.) will shortly build from Benson to Winkleman and points beyond to the Pacific, in order to ship COPPER by water to the markets of the WORLD, which with the Southern Pacific will give TWO RAILWAYS passing COPPER CREEK.

In addition the GREAT $10,000,000 OIL PIPE LINE FROM California will pass COPPER CREEK, furnishing fuel oil for their REVERBERATORY SMELTER.

There is more NEWS but this is enough to show the COPPER CREEK MINING COMPANY means business.

Some of the best posted people in Los Angeles have visited these mines and have bought stock and believe COPPER CREEK WILL BE A SECOND BISBEE. Bisbee is turning out MILLIONS of DOLLARS annually, and Arizona last year furnished almost ONE-FIFTH OF THE WORLD'S SUPPLY OF COPPER.

COME IN AND TAKE UP THAT 10,000 SHARES, it won't LAST LONG.

The Copper Creek Stockholders are pooling their stock in an agreement not to sell before May 1, 1912.

YOU'D better get busy if you want COPPER CREEK STOCK for it sure is going to be a handsome premium.

HERE'S A SAFE, MONEY-MAKING investment in an established and growing manufacturing business that was started two years ago with a capital of less than $5, and today is the leader in its line.

Surely no better evidence of the money-making possibilities of such a business could be asked. It is proof positive that every investor who buys stock in this enterprise can realize a profit on his investment.

It has taken not quite two years to build this business from practically nothing to its present status. It has taken hard, persistent work and conservative management. It has taken square dealing and has required a superior product and high-grade service, for our products sell at higher prices than any other goods in the same line.

We have eliminated the risk and placed the business on a sound basis. We have proven that the field is practically unlimited. Now we are ready to take in a small amount of capital to increase our manufacturing and selling facilities.

If you would invest $50 or more, cash or monthly installments, in such a business, let's talk the proposition over. The first block of 5000 shares was subscribed by one man, who took a good deal of time and pains to investigate every detail of the business. The second 5000 shares is now on the market at 50 cents per share, a very low price considering the safety and money-making possibilities of the business.

For full particulars address MR. McDOWELL, box 236, Station C, Los Angeles.

MINING MEN AND INVESTORS, TAKE NOTICE.

A company of Los Angeles business men have purchased a developed mine in Mexico. It has a worn-out 4-stamp mill; the first month after coming into possession of the mine, we were only able to run the same 17 days, and during that time it cleared for the company over and above all expenses $1200. The ore milled was taken from driving new tunnels.

The mine has been worked for several years, the government reports show that about $3000 per month has been produced with this old mill.

We have the ore and it becomes necessary that we erect a mill, the board of directors have ordered enough stock sold at par value, $1 share, to pay for the same.

Our capitalization is small, and no debts, our engineer and superintendent reports are at your disposal.

This is not a wild-cat proposition and I have no time to waste on those looking for that kind of stock.

If interested, call for reports, photos, smelter returns, etc.

ANNUAL SUMMER CLEAN-UP SALE OF THE FITZGERALD MUSIC COMPANY. EVERY PIANO AND PLAYER-PIANO IN THE HOUSE MARKED DOWN.

On Monday and Tuesday, August 8 and 9, we will give a GRAND EXHIBITION of the pianos to be included in this great annual summer sale. Among these are a number of such well known makes as the Hallett & Davis, Chickering & Sons, Knight Brinkerhoff, Regal, Winter & Co., King, Rudolph, etc., which we have marked down from $50 to $200 below their regular selling price.

These two days are not BUYING DAYS, mind you, but EXHIBITION DAYS, and not one of the pianos included in this sale will be sold until Wednesday.

TO GREAT LOS ANGELES HARBOR AT SAN PEDRO.

When That Boulevard?—Plans for a Manufacturing and Exporting and a City Beautiful—Active Co-operation by Leading Business Men. What San Pedro Wants.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

As I sat in the electric car, on my way from Los Angeles to San Pedro, speeding at the rate of twenty-two miles in forty-five minutes, a gentleman in the seat with me said: "Can the steamer Santa Rosa get into the harbor at San Pedro?" The question surprised me, since he had told me only a few minutes before that he had been a resident of Los Angeles for ten years. I knew that the Santa Rosa drew eighteen feet of water when loaded and could not only enter the harbor, but could land at any wharf in any part of the bay, and I supposed everyone else knew it also. The thought came to me that if this gentleman needed to be told of the present capacity and development of the harbor at San Pedro, now in the corporate limits of Los Angeles, there are probably others. So I am going to tell the readers of The Times just how I have been impressed with San Pedro and the harbor. Such steamers as the President and the Governor, which are over [illegible] feet in length, draw, when loaded, twenty-four feet of water and carry [illegible] passengers, are going in and out of both the outer and inner harbor every week or so. Even larger freight vessels than they have also entered. The outer harbor will accommodate vessels drawing forty feet of water. This outer harbor has been formed by the government breakwater, extending out into the ocean 9000 feet, which cost $3,000,000, and where will be spent several millions of dollars in building docks, wharves and erecting the most modern derricks for loading and unloading vessels. The inner harbor extends inland for about three miles and has been dredged to a depth of twenty-four to thirty feet, and will be made even deeper in a few years. The day will come when the largest steamers in the world can come and load at the wharves of San Pedro.

To give you some idea of the present area of Greater Los Angeles, I would call attention to the fact that the distance from the extreme northern boundary of the city to the ocean at San Pedro, directly south, is thirty miles. [illegible] miles is the length of the original Los Angeles. The "Shoestring" strip, which is half a mile wide, is eleven miles in length. The recently annexed territory in San Pedro and Wilmington is five miles more. The original Los Angeles was about [illegible] miles wide, so that the area was [illegible] acres. With a population of [illegible] this is only three persons to the acre. Taking the same average for the territory of the "Shoestring," it would be about 12,000 population, and around the present harbor, 24,000 population. It has in fact only about [illegible] population. It has been often said that the Greater Los Angeles of the future will be all the territory westward from the present boundaries to the sea, and include the San Fernando Valley. In that case, the same average of three persons to the acre, would give a total population of 1,800,000. Then where you now see forty ships in the San Pedro Harbor in one day, you would see 400; where there are now terminals for three transcontinental railroads, there would then be half a dozen; where there are now fifteen miles of wharves in the bay there would then be 150 miles; where there is now a population around the bay of [illegible] there would then be 80,000. There would be a continuous city from the mountains to the sea. There would be built broad boulevards, not one, but many, and the arteries of trade would throb with an activity not dreamed of at present. Los Angeles has a great embryo harbor at San Pedro, which will be a leading factor in making of it a great manufacturing and exporting, as well as an importing city. With the electric power, which will be developed from the Owen's River Aqueduct, there will be provided electric cranes and derricks on the city docks for the loading and unloading of vessels, so that "Los Angeles Harbor" will become noted as the safest, the cheapest and the most expeditious port on the Pacific Coast. The terminal rate that has been granted to San Pedro will result in there being added a still larger network of railroad [illegible], a greater addition to the wharf frontage, with the erection of warehouses and manufacturing plants. The completion of the Panama Canal will [illegible] up to the Port of Los Angeles a shipping trade whose volume will [illegible] and other harbor facilities greater than has been [illegible] by individuals, by corporations, by the city government and by the general government. All this means that San Pedro has the promise of being a very busy city for many years to come.

THEY WILL BOOST.

I was much pleased at the sentiments expressed by the business men whom I met in San Pedro on the future of the harbor. Although there were some who did not favor consolidation, yet they have submitted to the majority vote and are going to work for the upbuilding of the city as a whole, making of San Pedro as important a part as possible. That is the spirit that has made Los Angeles what it is today. I conversed with many of the business men of San Pedro and found them, as a rule, very optimistic and enthusiastic as to the future of the city and the harbor.

BOULEVARDS WANTED.

"What, in your opinion, is the first and most urgent need of San Pedro at the present time?" I asked Mr. J. E. Logan.

"The completion," he said, "as soon as possible of the promised highways and boulevards from Los Angeles to the harbor. We may have to wait for more money on the harbor improvements, until the bonds are sold, but there is no reason why we should have to wait for the boulevard. The money is available, we have been promised its expenditure, and we want it. We want the business men of Los Angeles, and the tourists, to be able to quickly reach our harbor in their automobiles, and we want to go back and forth in the same way. It is a level country, the increase in the land values would repay the cost, and it would tend to settle up the intervening territory."

"What action do you think should be taken in the matter of the construction of the county highways?" I asked Charles Mason, the recent secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

"They should be built as soon as possible. A movement is on foot to have all those who are interested along the route of the proposed highway unite in a petition to have the work commenced at once. There is also a movement on foot to have Vermont avenue made a paved boulevard from the present improvements directly into the city of San Pedro. This would follow along the half-mile strip known as the Shoestring, where the property owners are willing to bear their share of the expense."

FAVORS A BEACH RESORT.

"I came to San Pedro for the first time last January," said Mr. John Wallace, "and perhaps I should not express myself too emphatically, but I have the greatest confidence in the future of San Pedro and all the country surrounding the harbor. The better I become acquainted with the actual conditions, and realize the future possibilities and the developments, the more I am glad that our people are acting through the Chamber of Commerce in letting the residents of Greater Los Angeles know what are the present needs and future possibilities of the harbor at San Pedro. At present we are inclined toward commercialism, as the pay roll is a very large item each month, reaching $150,000 or more, but we can also make here a "City Beautiful." We have a delightful climate, mild in winter and cool in summer. We have, on the seashore of Terminal Island, locally called East San Pedro, an ideal place for an innovation in city ownership, being a suitable location for a municipal bathing and beach resort, to be reached from the business center within a few minutes' walk, when there shall have been established a municipal ferry across the bay, and in later years a bridge. There is an opening in San Pedro for a commercial hotel, and some of the sites would overlook the bay and the shipping, commanding a magnificent and ever changing view. We need a tourist hotel, a municipal ferry, and a municipal amusement park. Now that we are a part of Greater Los Angeles, these wants should receive attention.

"The promise made us before consolidation," said Mr. Charles Collins, "that we should have better fire protection is in course of fulfillment. It has now been a year since we became a part of Greater Los Angeles, and our growing city was in need of more apparatus for protection from a fire which might be most disastrous. I am glad to see these evidences of good faith."

TOURIST HOTEL WANTED.

"Almost daily," said Mr. J. W. Walton, "there are inquiries made for accommodations such as are furnished by what is commonly known as a tourist hotel, and there should be one at San Pedro. With the completion of the boulevards from the center of Los Angeles there is going to be an even greater demand for one. We have excellent restaurants and rooming-houses in abundance, but even their patronage would be increased if we had a first-class hotel for the better class of transient travel. There are many good locations for such a hotel, where could be furnished a grand panorama for inland people to see of our shipping entering and leaving the harbor. Ahead of all other public enterprises just now, it seems to me, the good roads movement is of the greatest importance. It is going to take some time to build such boulevards as we should have, and the sooner the work is started the better. I am heartily in favor of both the county highway and the Vermont-avenue boulevard.

TERMINAL RATES BENEFICIAL.

"The recent ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission," said Mr. E. L. Blanchard, recently president of the Chamber of Commerce, "that San Pedro is entitled to the same terminal rates as Los Angeles on freight carried by the several railroads, is one which means a great deal to our port. With these rates firmly established, San Pedro is assured of a commercial future. We should now all work together for the upbuilding of the Greater Los Angeles, of which we are a part. Under the present plan, however, San Pedro has no local representation in the City Council, and is almost placed in the position of 'taxation without representation.' This is a problem which was overlooked in the consolidation campaign, but will, no doubt, be satisfactorily adjusted later."

HAS MAN WANTS.

"In regard to the boulevard into San Pedro," said Lon C. Fugitt, "I am in favor of its extension to the municipal docks, and would like to see work commence at the earliest possible moment, as I believe it will have a very perceptible influence upon increasing values of real estate and be an incentive for the location of more homeseekers in this part of Greater Los Angeles. The $3,000,000 harbor bonds, which were voted last April, should be sold and the proceeds expended on the outer harbor first. I favor a municipal ferry from San Pedro to East San Pedro, to Terminal Island and to Wilmington. Our local Chamber of Commerce should coöperate with the civil bodies of Los Angeles and the municipal officers in securing to San Pedro the preëlection consolidation pledges. San Pedro should have a representative in the City Council of Greater Los Angeles, who should also be a member of the Harbor Commission. One of the urgent needs of San Pedro is a commercial and tourist hotel. Work should be continued in dredging the bar at Deadman's Island until fully thirty feet, at low tide, is secured. Knob Hill, north of Fourth street and east of Palos Verdes street, should be cut down, filling Happy Valley, making an easy grade from Pacific avenue to the water front, thereby allowing for sewerage from the northern part of town. The municipal dock, for local merchants, should be built. There should be increased electric car service to and from and in San Pedro. A storm sewer should be built to carry off the surface water which now runs down Sixth street. Permanent street grades should be established both here and in Wilmington. There should be a concerted movement of all Greater Los Angeles to urge Congress to make the necessary appropriations for the fortifications at Point Fermin, on the lands recently purchased at a cost of a quarter million of dollars."

LOS ANGELES HARBOR.

"According to my idea," said Secretary J. S. Stephens of the Chamber of Commerce, "the thing that San Pedro needs most, and the thing that will help her more than anything else, is to get in closer touch with Los Angeles—not particularly with official Los Angeles, but more especially with all the people of Los Angeles. A great many think that, in addition to having representatives from the various departments here, we should have a representative in the Council, and possibly this is so on account of the great problems peculiar to this section. In general terms, I think our interests should be linked as closely as possible. Get Los Angeles people interested here, get their capital invested here—it is close at hand and should not be hard to bring, when the city itself is spending millions to pave the way. Get the people acquainted with the wonderful harbor that is here waiting to give boundless returns to legitimate investment. Of the immediate specific needs I think there is nothing more important than the boulevard from the mountains to the sea—make it the best boulevard in the State. Organize our Chamber of Commerce on the booster plan. We have here every advantage in the world—let's tell everybody about it. All the world has heard of Los Angeles; now let us annex all that advertising and let them know that the most important part of that great city is her throbbing business center—Los Angeles harbor."

The city government of Greater Los Angeles maintains a separate corps of deputy city officials in San Pedro. They consist of a Police Department, Fire Department, Street Superintendent, City Attorney, City Clerk, City Auditor, Tax and License Collector, Health Inspector, Harbor Engineer, City Engineer, etc., who are directly responsible to their superiors in Los Angeles.

THEY WILL COOPERATE.

Among the residents of San Pedro who may be counted on to do all they can to advance the interests of the new Greater Los Angeles, may be mentioned the following: Charles Mason, John Gaffey, Phil Gaffey, L. Hanson, J. A. Anderson, John H. F. Peck, E. L. Blanchard, J. C. Redebach, Jos. P. Sylva, Jas. H. Dodson, R. L. Porter, Henry Baly, N. W. Tilton, E. Mahar, J. O. Nerby, R. G. Dupuy, R. L. Brand, Charles Powers, J. A. Elliott, Chas. C. Curtis, Richard Quinn, John Wallace, W. E. Brooks, B. B. Lippman, T. H. Percival, R. F. Winslow, Frank Curran, J. W. Walton, N. B. Johnston, N. A. Larsen, Don C. Fugitt, Charles Collins, J. Gray, J. N. Saunders, G. E. Long, J. A. Patterson, C. A. Adair, J. E. Stephens, Luke Kelly, E. S. Abbott, O. L. Ihrig, T. B. Howard, A. P. Goodwin, William Thomas, C. N. McKelvy, Chas. E. Perham, Mrs. H. M. Scheel, J. E. Logan.

WILL SPEND $30,000,000 ON HARBOR.

"During just the last eight months," said Phil. Gaffey, "there have been more newcomers located in San Pedro than the two years previous. They are buying the property lying westerly from the business section, where there are at least 7500 lots, which is sufficient for 35,000 people. These are selling at from $12 to $90 a front foot. In the down-town business sections the highest price yet secured was $100 a front foot. The water frontage of San Pedro is largely in the hands of persons and companies who do not want to sell, but are spending large sums in making ready for the business that is being developed so rapidly. Among these are the Banning Company, the Salt Lake Railroad Company, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company, the Pacific Electric Company, and others. It is estimated that the value of the Salt Lake holdings on the bay, at $50,000 an acre will aggregate $20,000,000. The Southern Pacific Railroad has spent nearly $500,000 on its water front here in the last four years. On the Miner Fill, at the entrance to the inner harbor, there is being spent $1,000,000 on about 100 acres, which would be at the rate of $10,000 an acre. There will be $2,000,000 spent, from the late bond issue, on 146 acres of water front which is the property of Los Angeles. This sum will be followed in the next ten years by $8,000,000 more. At the present time the pay roll, in and about San Pedro, is over $150,000 a month. There are five dredgers now working in the harbor, whose combined pay roll will reach $40,000 a month. To show how the future growth of San Pedro will be influenced by the spending of money on the harbor, it is estimated that at least $16,000,000 will be spent in the next few years, from appropriations which have already been provided. In eight years the present annual pay roll of $1,800,000 will amount to $14,400,000, making the total of the appropriation, and pay roll in that time, $30,400,000 and over. This will all be spent at or near San Pedro, within the next eight years."

THE BOULEVARD BOOSTER.

"For the past three years," said Capt. L. Hanson, "I have been working for the building of a boulevard along Vermont avenue from Los Angeles to San Pedro. The prospects are that I will soon see some fruits from my labors. This will be one of our great highways and of great benefit to our city. It should be 200 feet wide and extend from the foothills, at Griffith Park, to the municipal docks at the ocean front at Point Fermin. A committee of 100 will soon be appointed from sections along the boulevard route, the appointments to be made by the several presidents of Federal improvement associations. This committee is intended to devise ways and means for carrying out, by the most practical methods, the building of the boulevard. We may have to secure special legislation, but it can be had at the Legislature this winter. There are at least 100,000 who are interested, and are looking forward to, the construction of the Vermont-avenue boulevard. This boulevard will be one of the great highways or travel and freight from the center of Los Angeles to the harbor at San Pedro. Later this boulevard might be made a national highway, and be extended into the San Fernando Valley. That valley will be the garden of Los Angeles. On this proposed boulevard freight could be hauled, and there will be approaches to all the principal docks and wharves on the harbor. This boulevard is an absolute necessity and must be built. The great highways of France, of a similar kind, have been largely instrumental in building up the great city of Paris and of the city of Berlin in Germany, and even the City of Mexico, in Mexico. This boulevard would double and even treble the land values from the foothills to the ocean. Even the great army of automobile tourists who will use this road will be a boost for our city."

TERMINAL RATES AND FORTIFICATIONS.

"With terminal rates on freights, effective after August 17th," said Richard Quinn, "we are assured of being a great distributing point. The natural jobbing center and warehouse location is where tide and rail meet, at San Pedro. The Los Angeles jobbers will be compelled to have warehouses at San Pedro to compete with San Francisco, Portland and Seattle and for the business with Honolulu, Japan, China, the west coast of Mexico, and South America. Under the new conditions we can ship to points in Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico the same as original Los Angeles. With the adjustment of freight rates we expect to reach nearer points. We will also become a manufacturing center. Fuel oil will be delivered here through a direct pipe line from the fields. Already it is said the United States Steel Company has had representatives looking for a location here. Another great factor in our future growth which we are apt to overlook is the location of fortifications here. The government has purchased acres at Point Fermin and the plans call for the expenditure of $4,000,000. The grounds are to be made the 'show place' of Southern California. A client of mine said she was born in a Canadian town and watched its rapid growth after fortifications had been established. Officials of the army bring a fine class of society. The most elegant homes in San Francisco are around the Presidio."

YACHTING AND MOTORING.

"I am an enthusiast on the subject of yachting and motor boating," said A. P. Goodwin. "I believe there is a great future to the development of the sport here in San Pedro waters. I have had personal experience on Boston harbor, New York harbor and the Indian Head Proving Grounds, off the Jersey coast, so I know whereof I speak. Here at San Pedro we have nature's gifts combined with the handiwork of man, in providing safe, convenient and ample water surface for all kinds of aquatic sports. The yacht club now numbers only 150 members, but it will have 1000 members in a few years. The climatic conditions in both winter and summer meets the ideal, and the future water contests at San Pedro will attract attention all over the Pacific Coast. There could be rowing races, motor boat races, etc., and these could be seen to advantage by 100,000 people at once, from the elevated points of land about the harbor. A racing programme once each month would be a paying investment for San Pedro in the number of visitors that would be attracted."

HAS CONFIDENCE IN CITY.

"I have not been a resident of San Pedro more than a few months," said Charles C. Curtis, "but as I have walked along the water front of the harbor and noted the thousands and thousands of dollars being expended, it impressed me that these are but the beginnings of what will develop into an immense volume of business.

LOCAL STOCK EXCHANGE.

Market Unusually Strong and Orders Plenty—Prospects Bright for Week.

The local market yesterday was a very good one for Saturday. As usual, the oil shares monopolized almost the entire call, but there was some inquiry for the bonds and bank stocks. The industrials, however, were very quiet, and the caller was compelled to devote most of his time to oil and mining shares.

California Midway was very active and strong, selling as high as 55, and closing 54½ bid at 55. This is a gain of two points over Friday's market. Consolidated Midway also was very much stronger. The market on this stock advanced from ⅛ to ⅝ of a point and remained firm at the close at 23⅛.

There is a strong rumor afloat that a large block of this stock has been placed in New York, which will practically clean up the local market. Insiders predict very much higher prices in the near future. The company is rushing work on development and is erecting a new derrick for the one burned down. It expects to close a good contract for its entire production in a few days.

Olinda Land was also a good trader, but the price was a shade off from Friday's close. Mexican Common was active at 22, which is about where it was Friday. Union Oil was strong, selling at 101⅝ and 101⅞. Palmer Oil was looking very much stronger. There was a good demand for it and prices showed a gain.

Cleveland Oil was about at Friday's prices, with little or no stock coming out. Oleum was strong at the close in the non-producers' list. The mining shares showed no trading, but the prices remained firm.

It was an exceptionally good market for Saturday, and the brokers seemed to have plenty of orders. This would indicate that the coming week will be a good one.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

Week's Business Satisfactory, Interest Centering in Nevada Hills, Jumbo and Mexico.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, 112 West Third street.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6.—Business was very good considering the mid-summer half-holiday. There was a natural reaction in Mexican, which closed 155 off 15; Ophir lost 2½; Consolidated Virginia, 2½; Hale and Norcross was up 5; Yellow Jacket, 1; Sierra lost 2; Chollar was strong, gained 6. The balance of the Comstocks was unchanged, but with more inquiry.

Goldfield Consolidated lost 5; Florence was unchanged; Jumbo Extension was up 5 to 59 on some buying and more manipulation. St. Ives closed 15 bid, none offered up 1, Oro was up 1 to 9 bid. These were the only changes in the Goldfields.

The Bullfrogs, Rawhides, Round Mountain, Pittsburgh Silver Peak, were the same as yesterday. The only changes in the Tonopah list were Tonopah Extension, which lost 1; Montana, which was offered at 88, a loss of 8, and West End, which was up to 63. Nevada Hills held steady around 232½ bid.

It is reported from Goldfield that Charles Herzig, a brother of George Graham Rice, is negotiating for the contral of the Red Top Extension property, with a view of consolidating it with Jumbo Extension, the latter property [illegible]

WHEAT CLOSES WEAK AT NEARLY LOWEST POINT.

Longs Begin to Unload Early in Chicago Pit, Day's Receipts Summing Up Three Million More Than Last Year—Cash Demand Is Low. Rain Sends Corn Lower.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Eagerness to grab profits tumbled down the price of wheat today. There was a net decline of 1 1-8@1 1-4 to 1 3-4, with the close weak at nearly the lowest point of the session. Other leading staples all suffered a fall, corn finishing 3-8 to 1-8 down, oats 3-8 to 1-2 and provisions 2 1-2@5 to 30. Realizing sales by longs began early in the wheat pit, and finally resulted in much liquidation by belated holders. Primary receipts were on a gigantic scale, 10,500,000 bushels this week against 7,000,000 bushels a year ago. Local arrivals were more than 3,000,000 bushels larger than the shipments. Then, too, the outlook was for a heavy increase in the visible supply. At no time was there enough buying to absorb the offerings. Cash wheat demand here today was poor, and there was no export call despite numerous soundings from this side. Flour business was slow, and on top of all, a bearish report regarding winter wheat, was expected Monday. From 104 which September touched at the start, the range was almost constantly downward to 102 1-8@1-4 with the close 1 5-8 to 1 3-4 off at 102 1-4. General breaking of the drought made bearish feeling the rule in the corn pit. September varied between 62 5-8 and 63 1-2, closing steady at 62 7-8, a loss of 1-8 cents compared with twenty-four hours previous. The cash market was easy. No. 2 yellow closed at 64 1-2@65 1-4. After fluctuations touching as extremes 36 3-4 and 37 1-4, September oats on the final sale was 36 7-8, a decline of 3-8 from last night. The windup in provisions showed pork down 2 1-2 to 30 cents; lard 2 1-2@5 to 7 1-2@10 cents, and ribs 2 1-2@5 to 7 1-2 cents.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour, steady; winter patents, 4.60@5.30; straights, 4.30@5.00; Spring patents, straights, 5.25@5.45; bakers, 4.00@5.75; No. 2 rye, 77½@78; feed or mixing barley, 48@55; fair to choice malting, 60@62; flax seed, No. 1 southwestern, 2.35½; No. 1 northwestern, 2.54½; timothy seed, 5.00@5.75; clover, 8.50@13.00; mess pork, per bbl., 21.75@22.00; lard, per 100 lbs., 11.47½; short ribs, sides, (loose) 11.00@11.27½; short clear sides, (boxed) 11.75@12.00.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Heavy rains were reported yesterday in Louisville and Mississippi where not needed and showers occurred in Arkansas, Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas. Precipitation of less than half inch was reported in Oklahoma, and .15 was reported at Brownwood, .11 at Paris and .04 at Galveston. The low barometer over Texas has disappeared without bringing the anticipated rains. Temperatures in Oklahoma are much lower, but remain rather high in Texas, yesterday, 91 to 102 maximum. Sales of print cloths for the week amounted to about 225,000 pieces, which is slightly more than at present full week's output, some makes were advanced slightly and the market was firm. The Liverpool market this morning is much better than due and unless additional rains are coming in Texas over Sunday, a higher market for next week is more likely. A good portion of the extended long interest in new crops has been liquidated and a rather large short interest built up. Spinners were the best buyers of contracts on the decline, and it is thought that any further break in prices would increase the buying from this course.

Logan & Bryan's letter says: "The end of the week having brought lower temperatures and a few showers in Texas found the market less inclined to show any spirit, still the absorbing power was so great that prices did not yield. Partly cloudy conditions and a rather low barometer furnished the suggestion that it might rain in that section, and so much interest is given to the question of moisture for Texas that the rest of the belt is ignored, and it is barely possible that the eastern portion of the belt is having more favorable weather. The spinners have been rather free buyers for the past two weeks, and their buying has absorbed all the increased level has brought in the way of offerings, and a much more careful survey of crop possibilities is following and the deeper the investigation the more convincing it becomes that the growing crop is an inadequate one.

"The professional trade seems more mixed, the scalping crowd rather inclined to be against the market and the spinner is aggressively bullish in his actions at least. The promise that spot cotton will carry a remarkable premium over contracts in the early portion of new crop prompts some of the spinners to provide for their wants through the medium of the contract market, where the deliveries are of excellent spinning character and this looks like it might create a new bullish force for our market when a relative contrast is drawn with previous years. Mistaken ideas exist in regard to Texas and while many are now willing to admit that Texas had a drought last year, they seem to think such is not the situation this year, and are prone to include rainfall at Galveston, Houston and Corpus Christi, which points are not near the cotton belt. Selecting the points used by the Financial Chronicle we have the following records of rainfall this year and last.

"The first figures are for all of July this year; the second for July, 1909; the third for rainfall during the past and four figures for same week last year.

SPECULATORS AWAIT EVENTS.

NO IMPORTANT DEALS IN THE STOCK MARKET.

Demand Cautious and Meager, But Supplies of Stocks for Sale Also Scarce, So That Prices Were Easily Affected by Light Transactions. Foreign Exchange Rises Again.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Nothing of importance appeared in the stock market today. Speculation halted to await events. Expectation of a strong bank return and belief that the government reports on condition of the grains to be published on Monday would prove favorable, strengthened the tone of the market. The demand was cautious and very meager, but supplies of stocks for sale were lacking and prices were easily affected by light transactions. Amalgamated Copper was influenced to some extent by the cheerful views of the trade outlook expressed by the head of the company. A denial from the president of the United States Steel Corporation of yesterday's report that the price of steel rails had been cut, seemed to harden the price of shares. The conservative tone of the commercial views and reports of further severe curtailment of cotton goods production had a restraining effect on demand for stocks. The small demand for commercial paper by the New York banks, and the scanty offerings of funds for time loans, in spite of the surface redundance of money supplies, does not escape notice and is taken to reflect the anxiety over the fall money markets. Foreign exchange rates rose again today, but the London supply of South African gold arrivals is expected to be taken by New York on Monday. A coming offer of British Treasury bills is affecting the London market, although it is believed the attractive interest rates prompted the offering as much as treasury needs. Intimation from Washington that the $20,000,000 of government bonds for reclamation might be offered in October, made a new factor for consideration in the money market. The bank statement showed that the week's private settlements of distressed stock market accounts had affected loans in liquidation elsewhere than the clearinghouse banks, that item in the statement of actual conditions, showing an expansion of $12,551,000. The influx of cash had more than kept pace and there resulted an addition to the actual surplus of $7,153,300, bringing that up to the extraordinary figure of $52,800,000. The actual cash reserve now stands at 29.29 per cent. of the deposit liability. Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $828,000. United States bonds unchanged on call.

Four Thousand Dollars a Month For What?

The Bill Goes to the Taxpayers

[AUTHORIZED ANNOUNCEMENT.]

The people of Los Angeles are paying $4000 a month for the "sanitary" collection, removai and disposition of garbage. They are paying this sum to a contractor for a service which is far less satisfactory than one which would cost them nothing and which has been formally tendered with a cash guaranteed that it would be satisfactorily fulfilled.

To the earnest citizens and taxpayers, who are footing the bills and suffering the disadvantages of this system, we believe that a full and fair statement of conditions is due. One ordinance has been adopted by the City Council and set aside by the courts as unconstitutional. Another has been adopted which makes no improvement in the method of disposal of garbage. Why keep the courts clogged with cases brought against unconstitutional ordinances by citizen drivers to the courts to protect their business?

These are the facts. The garbage was formerly collected by livestock feeders daily at all points where collection was allowed. The garbage was handled in a thoroughly sanitary manner, it was collected in sanitary tanks and wagons and was removed beyond the city limits without rehandling. It was fed the morning after it was collected.

It is now collected under the city ordinance from three to six times a week, it is rehandled within the city limits despite the repeated protests of a large number of residents and in violation of the ordinance, and the garbage which is collected on Saturday cannot be disposed of until Tuesday. It is being dumped in the bed of the San Gabriel River and in time of freshets is certain to cause an extremely objectionable condition there.

Restaurants and hotels are compelled under the new ordinance to turn over their garbage to the city contractor. The hotel man suffers some of the heaviest burdens of the present system of garbage collection. He gets a six day collection in place of the seven day service offered him, and the storage of two days garbage is a big problem. The collection of garbage also comes at a less satisfactory hour. The ordinance obliges him to set the garbage on the sidewalk where it is an offense and an obstacle to passersby—where the stockfeeder was perfectly willing to remove it from any part of the premises. If he were desirous of maintaining sanitary conditions by paying for the removal of garbage on the seventh day of the week or if he were to go to the expense of providing his own wagons it would still be illegal for him to remove his own garbage.

The garbage of a large hotel or restaurant may have a value. Under the present arrangement it is confiscated and turned over to a contractor, not for the city's benefit but at the city's expense. If there were an improvement in sanitary conditions or in service it might be a question of how much it is worth. The ciy contractor cannot fulfill the terms of his contract. It is impossible for him to remove the garbage in wagons five miles beyond the city limits.

These arguments are presented with the idea of antagonizing no one, but of placing before the people of Los Angeles a situation in which they are interested more than anyone engaged in the collection or disposal of garbage.

The service that was offered to the city in place of the present one was the collection of garbage in every form—tin cans, ashes and all non-combustible refuse and offal. The collection was to be made seven times a week in every place where garbage could be secured. A sufficient bond was offered to insure the carrying out of such a contract.

In place of this we have secured a collection that serves a part of the city three times a week and another part six times a week. There is no provision for the removal of non-usable garbage. There has been protest after protest from the district in which the rehandling of the garbage has created a nuisance.

The new ordinance permits the contractor to feed all of the garbage if he chooses. There is no change in this feature of its disposal from the old method. It is impossible for him to feed it and it is dumped where it will in time become a nuisance.

The residents and taxpayers of Los Angeles are interested in the collection and disposal of garbage to see that it is done by the most sanitary, most complete and most economical system. The livestock feeders are interested only to the extent of protesting against a monoply in favor of individuals. The people, however, have not been consulted and many of them have not been informed as to what is going on. The livestock feeders through their position have information and a knowledge of the conditions which they believe should be made public.

We stand for the most sanitary and the most economical method of collecting the garbage of Los Angeles. We do not care who benefiits or profits by it—that should be a matter of open market conditions. Anyone who investigates the present system will find that it is neither sanitary nor economical. That is the point we believe the public should be informed of.

The ordinance first passed by the City Council took away the rights of certain property owners and gave them to others. That was a matter which concerned the livestock feeders. It was disposed of in the courts by the defeat of the ordinance.

The Council has passed another ordinance in the effort to maintain the same system. The point we would bring before the people of Los Angeles, is that it is not in the interests of sanitation, efficiency or service or economy.

The garbage situation in Los Angeles is by no means fully stated in this brief space. There are explanations of why the present system of garbage collection has been established and maintained in the face of so many objections. There is no reason why we should enter into these as we believe that the people will demand a satisfactory disposition of garbage under conditions which have nothing to do with politics or special privileges.

These statements will be borne out by the evidence of any unprejudiced citizen whose business gives him an inside knowledge of the problem of garbage disposal.

We offer this unqualified statement of the case to the taxpayers and challenge contradiction—

The present system of garbage collection is costing the people of Los Angeles $4000 a month more than a service which is guaranteed to be more complete and more sanitary, that guarantee being a cash bond.

Do the taxpayers and residents approve of this as a business method?

WOMAN WRITER DECLARES THEY STAND PRE-EMINENT.

Mrs. Lathrop Says in America Their Advancement Has Been the Most Rapid of Any Country—Likes Englishmen Better Because Not Obsessed With the Commercial Spirit.

"The American woman stands preeminent," declared Mrs. Annie Wakeman Lathrop at the Alexandria yesterday. "I say this even though I am a resident of England, where most of my sympathies lie.

"In America," she continued, "the advancement of woman has been the most rapid of any advancement. She has grown faster than have the cities, the industries or anything else. I like her better than the English woman."

Mrs. Lathrop, formerly Annie Wakeman, is one of the literary lights of the United Kingdom. Her "Autobiography of a Charwoman" ran through the popular editions of the English press, and has found favor among the American reading public.

Much of the material which Mrs. Lathrop has worked into her story was contributed by her to American newspapers many years ago, when she was sent by one of the Boston dailies to make an investigation of the London slums.

"The American woman, as I knew her," she went on," "has changed—and for the better by far. I find that she has taken up more the artistic side of life, enjoys the finer things, and is proving the lifting influence on the lives of the entire nation.

"American men? Well, I can't say I like them as well as the Englishmen. Here, everything is commercialism. There is none of the leisure one finds among the English. They haven't time to talk or think of anything but money. With the money, though, they have made the best use. They have elevated their women, look up to them, are proud of their accomplishments and, in return, the women are bringing the men up to higher standards.

"My ideas of California were certainly changed when we reached the orchard country, and later, when we arrived at Pasadena. A boy boarded the train with a tray of pinks—not the society-bred carnation, but the old-fashioned pink, and I wanted to buy them immediately, only to be handed some with the compliments of Pasadena. It certainly typifies the spirit of California, the welcome which awaits the traveler after his hard journey across the sands.

"This was accentuated when I found at the hotel a dainty packet of sachet on the dresser with the compliments of the hotel."

Mrs. Lathrop will remain here a week while visiting with friends. She will be the guest of former Senator Bard of Hueneme for several days, and will then visit a sister of her husband who is living at Santa Barbara. Her object in America is a psychological study of women. Mr. Lathrop is himself a well-known English author and correspondent, writing under the name of Andrew Lorin.

PAINTERS' STAGE BREAKS.

Workmen Fall Forty Feet and Sustain Serious Injuries, One's Skull Being Fractured.

Harry Sheehan, aged 23, living at No. 821 Mallard street, and Harry Erskine of No. 1285 South Fremont avenue, while painting a sign at No. 326 West Second street, were precipitated about forty feet to the ground when the staging broke upon which they were working. They fell on a pile of brick and lumber. Erskine's arms were broken and his face badly cut. Sheehan sustained a compound fracture of the right leg, a fracture of the skull and internal injuries which may prove fatal. They were taken to the Receiving Hospital.

The men are employed by the Erskine System Sign Painting Company and were working on a ladder stage, suspended by two ropes when the staging parted. It was an hour before the nurses at the Receiving Hospital, with the help of benzine soap, got the patients ready for the operating table as they were smeared with red paint.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES.

The July report of the industrial department of the Associated Charities shows that the demands upon the association for food, lodging and groceries, in each item, increased almost 100 per cent. over the preceding month. The number of men registering at the free labor bureau, in search of work, fell off from 300 to 198, and the number for whom work was secured fell from 214 to 94.

HARBOR AT SAN PEDRO.

San Pedro harbor. The expenditures of these large sums of money are not being made for speculative purposes, but for actual use by the owners. If there were not a prospect of a large amount of business it would not pay them to invest such sums of money. I confidently look forward to a city of 25,000 at San Pedro within the next few years."

WOULD BUILD TUNNEL.

How to reach the municipal docks on the outer harbor, where the sum of $2,000,000 is to be expended, when the recently voted $3,000,000 are sold, is a problem which has not yet been solved. It has been suggested that a tunnel could be built under the city and thus avoid all the complications that would arise over the securing of a right of way along the present business front of the city.

SEEING SAN PEDRO.

Most every one who passes through San Pedro sees only the business district near the water front and wonders where lives the population of 7000. It will pay any one to climb the hill up to Library Park and from there see where the residences of the city are, but get one of the finest views of the entire harbor. To the south you will see the breakwater stretching away two miles in length leaving an outer harbor several miles in extent where the largest ships that float can enter. Just below you the miles of wharves, of the many companies that are doing business on the bay. Three miles up the inner harbor you can see masts of the vessels at the wharves of the Consolidated Lumber Company the farthest from the entrance to the harbor. You can see the sandy beach of Terminal Island where the people of San Pedro would like to have a bathing resort. You can see the waters of the upper harbor where the city will expend $1,000,000 in dredging so that there will still be a greater area for the uses of shipping. Beyond this lies the level country that extends even into the heart of Los Angeles, twenty miles away. It is an easy matter to sit on the benches provided for the public and speculate on what this same scene will be in twenty or, even ten years from now.

EXHIBITION OF CANDIDATES.

Representatives of All Parties, Who Seek Nominations at the Coming Primaries, Invited to Talk.

The Property Owners' and Voters' Protective Association, organized for the improvement of conditions in the southern part of the city, has called a mass meeting for Lomax's Hall, Central and Vernon avenues, on Wednesday evening. Candidates of all parties have been asked to be present and state their position upon various questions affecting the general welfare. Those who pass through the ordeal with the most credit to themselves may expect to get the votes of that section. The meeting is being widely advertised and an effort is being made to secure a full representation of voters and property owners of the district.

FACT AND COMMENT.

weeds and his house to suffer for lack of paint. There is no law against either form of neglect. Then let him attempt to get the real value out of his property, even from a man who knows and understands real estate. He won't be able to do it. This is an extreme way in which to get the lesson home, but the supposed case is entirely applicable. If good property appearing at its worst and looking worse than it is, is a drug on the market, it follows that every bit of care expended on both house and lawn will add a little to the selling value. In fact the gain is out of proportion to the cost of the improvements in almost all instances, especially in a neighborhood where there are anything like concerted effort on the part of the residents to brush up a bit. Here again is the money argument, and indeed it is hard to get away from the idea of considering civic pride in almost any form as a money asset, so patently is it that very thing. Suppose that every owner or renter of a house in Los Angeles who has never planted a vine or shrub on his premises should suddenly come to a realization of the beauty which both will lend to a place. The result is not to be calculated in dollars and cents, for it would literally transform whole neighborhoods in a year's time. If every house which would be improved in appearance by a mass of vines over the porch and front were to be thus beautified Los Angeles would instantly become famous for that kind of good taste, for every house, big and small, in the city would be vineclad. Thousands of Los Angeles people have already discovered the value of vines, but it can nevertheless be truthfully said that, considering the fact that vines and plants of all kinds grow here out of doors all the year round, there has been surprisingly little attention paid to this kind of house beautifying.

It Pays.

A cheap frame house devoid of architectural merit is transformed into a charming home if the front is covered with vines and if a few rose bushes are permitted to trail over the porch. Many people who are exceedingly careful about their lawns apparently never realize what can be done with vines. There is nothing else in the world which gives a house, school, public building or church the same appearance of stately dignity and respectable age as a mass of vines over the walls. Vines more than anything else make buildings in the East look their age. In Southern California it is possible to get rid of the newness and to obtain the effect of centuries of aging in two or three years time. Yet there are thousands upon thousands of people who overlook the fact entirely. Most of these people would be highly indignant if told that they lacked any in civic pride. Yet it strikes the writer that any man who neglects to improve his own house and lawn to the extent of their possibilities is just a little bit inconsistent when he complains of the failure of the city to make some public improvement. In a low area not far from the river bed and in a manufacturing section which no one would for a moment consider a lovely spot for residences the writer has often seen from the windows of a certain street car a row of cottages which come near to exemplifying the practical kind of civic pride which is applauded in these comments. The occupants of these humble houses are all without doubt laborers who do not possess any great amount of worldly wealth, but they are setting an example for all the rest of the city. Every tiny lawn is as trim and well sodded as a century old English grass park and every bungalow is literally covered with vines and climbing rose bushes. The effect is altogether charming. Thousands of individuals in the city can be commended for the same kind of civic pride, and it is only because there are so many other thousands of every degree of financial standing and on every fashionable boulevard and humble side street, who haven't developed it to the full that this is written. The "lecture" is for Californians only. People outside of the State never picture a California home without its bower of roses and cloak of vines, and this comment is in no sense intended to be of the nature of an exposé.

Organizing Civic Pride.

The various improvement associations of the city have accomplished wonders for the city at large by their consistent and steady plugging away in the interests of the various sections. Their work cannot be too highly commended. Without exception, these associations, organized to boost for street improvements or park or improved lighting or some other public benefit, have always stood ready to endorse any and all measures which have tended to advance the moral and esthetic interests of the neighborhoods they represent. It would seem that there is one thing more they could do and that would be to unite in stirring up the kind of civic pride discussed here. If the residents of a certain section can to advantage band themselves together in asking the city to improve their streets or give them other advantages, why can't they get quietly together and sign a pledge to "brush up" individuals. Anything like that ought to spread like wildfire if some of the real live associations were to get behind it. Activity of this kind would give many an association an excuse for being and many another something to do between whiles. Individual emulation can accomplish wonders, once it is stirred up, and if every individual in a neighborhood could be aroused to the point of attempting to outdo all his neighbors in beautifying his premises, the result would be of incalculable benefit to any section of the city. An organization which had promoted successfully such an emulation or cooperation in the beautifying of its district might then, for want of anything else to do, go after the owners of vacant lots which are defaced by flaring bill boards. It could point out to the man who rented his property to these disfigurements that he was the only man in his block devoid of decent and consistent civic pride. In such a neighborhood, however, it may be doubted if vacant lots would remain vacant lots very long.

BOOST INDUSTRIAL GROWTH.

With last Saturday's issue the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer, a local weekly that has in the past three years placed itself in the front rank of western building and engineering journals, started a commendable movement to encourage new industrial and commercial enterprises to locate in the Southwest. The first week's issue of each month will, it is announced, be a special industrial number devoted to this cause, the current issue being the first of the series. In its foreword the editor states: "This issue is designed to be a preliminary review of the local field of industrial opportunity as suggested by two noteworthy factors, harbor and aqueduct development. Without such a general review of these two public enterprises, the industrial record to be written in succeeding numbers would be incomplete. These industrial numbers will be for some time in the nature of pioneering. They will show the resources and opportunities which the Southwest offers for new industries and commercial to record, issue by issue, of industrial growth in phases; to discuss questions this form of the develop Southwest; to describe followed and equipment terprises already estab have been factors in their The first number contain pages and is well illustrated

JUST BEGINNING.

BUYERS GRAB AT BARGAINS.

Realty Men Anticipate Most Active Season.

Best Summer for Rentals So Far Known.

Eastern Investors Appear Ahead of Time.

There is one great obstacle to general real estate activity in Los Angeles at the present time, according to the leading realty men, and that is the reluctance of owners to part with their holdings at any price. It is surprising to find that, as early as the first week in August, the demand for property of all kinds has taken a sudden jump and in every large office in town there is an anticipation of the busiest season yet known in legitimate real estate transactions. The opening of new tracts has given way to the steady transaction in houses and lots and investment rather than speculation in vacant property.

"We cannot keep a bargain on our books over night," is the common testimony of real estate men. Wherever there is a weakening of price for some specific and individual reason, there are a dozen buyers waiting to take advantage of the situation. Property does not have to be sacrificed to find an immediate market—it is only necessary to cut the market price by a small margin to force an immediate sale. Real estate agents are hunting for what they can offer as "bargains," and complain that they cannot supply the demand.

There has never been as heavy a business in rentals as at the present time. It is extremely difficult to secure a desirable house in Los Angeles for a reasonable price. The rental departments have been kept more than busy during the past week, by those who are in search of homes for the coming winter.

BEST SUMMER YET.

"I can say without qualification," said P. D. Rowan of R. A. Rowan & Co., "that this is the best summer we have ever had. The main difficulty from our point of view is that prices hold so stiff. This is a good indication of the healthy condition of the market and it promises well. We have a deal pending that involves a million dollars and I believe there are more big sums of money seeking investment in Los Angeles right now than ever before.

"There is very little good property for rent. Everything seems to be occupied and there is a constant call for more good residence property. As for business property it never was held stronger an dif there is any one who has a desirable location for sale he has only to make it known and it will be snapped up at once."

TWICE SOLD IN A DAY.

H. R. Callender, of Wright & Callender, says: "We have been surprised by the activity of the first week in August this year. I don't remember anything like it. We had a bunch of lots brought in the other day and the owner was forced to sell them at less than they were really worth. Before night they had been sold once and we had an offer from a second purchaser to take them at another good advance. If there were any property, except a piece here and there, that we could get under value, it would all move just like that.

"The indications in the rental department point to one of the best years in the history of Los Angeles. On August 1, when things are ordinarily at the quietest, we had 106 customers in our rental department, and the week has kept up at much the same rate. The supply of desirable houses is going to be exhausted very rapidly at that rate and we can be assured of an active demand for residence property this winter.

"Los Angeles is getting to be a summer metropolis of the Southwest, as well as a winter resort, and we are just beginning to appreciate it in a business way. We have more demand for rooming-houses now than we can supply. They have been built so rapidly in the past year or two that it was expected they would be a drag on the market, but instead of that they are full and there is a demand for more. The people keep right on coming to Los Angeles and while we have lots of room it is being taken up more rapidly than we realize. We are going to have a busy fall season."

MONEY COMES FROM EAST.

Oscar Farish, of Mines & Farish, says: "There is no feeling of uncertainty in the real estate market at the present time. We had a customer in from the East this week who made two large purchases of property and who has gone back to get $150,000 for investment here. He has been traveling for months and says there is no such attractive place in the world for investment as Los Angeles today. I feel that the banks are making a mistake in urging their customers to hold all their money for loans. A great many wise individuals are letting their money make 25 per cent. a year and taking no more chances than they are on a loan. We do not want speculation in real estate, but we do know that confident investment in land, buildings and general improvements is making Los Angeles what it is and there was never a surer time for investment than now.

"The men who invested five or ten years ago thought they were taking some chance. With the position of the city established as it is now, and the promises of those days more than demonstrated there is very little element of chance left.

"Every year the demand for country lands increases tremendously. That is just as sure an indication of city growth as any other. The building up of the country is the surest foundation of a big city.

"We hear some complaint that money is tight right now. There is no real reason for this in the general condition of this part of the country. In fact, we have had two seasons of prosperity and plenty. There is this to be said in explanation, however, that several millions of dollars have been taken out of here for investment in oil lands and oil supplies and machinery. Then we find that the automobile dealers and others whose business runs into big money have been drawing on the banks for hundreds of thousands of dollars to send East for the season's stocks. That is money that will all come back again. I cannot see anything but the best of times coming and I believe that we are going to do a big business this fall."

CONFIDENCE IN VALUES.

Edward Silent says: "There has never been a better indication of sound business activity at this season of the year than right now. We are going ahead with plans for bigger business than we have ever had before. There is a strong undercurrent of confidence in Los Angeles realty values that insures business. Values have become so thoroughly established in the past few years that buyers will jump at anything offered below the market value. They are also ready to invest in good properties, at market values, knowing that the growth of Los Angeles is rapidly adding to present values. This has been the best summer in the history of our rental department, and it has been extremely difficult to secure enough good houses and bungalows to fill the demand."

WILL BUILD APARTMENTS.

Handsome Modern Structure Is Planned for Alvarado Terrace Tract.

A lot fifty feet south of the southwest corner of Pico and Westlake, with a frontage of fifty feet on Westlake and extending east 160 feet to a paved alley, was purchased last week by Mrs. J. W. McDonald from James Mackel, for the consideration of $5500. Mrs. McDonald is having plans made for a modern building of twenty apartments, each apartment to contain three large rooms and bath. The exterior will be of the mission type, the front of the first story to be veneered with artificial stone. It is the owner's purpose to make the rooms of exceptional size, as these apartments will be surrounded by some of the finest homes in Los Angeles. The building restrictions on this lot expired January 1, and this is to be the first apartment-house erected in the Alvarado Terrace tract. The building and furnishings will represent an expenditure of $30,000. The transfer of the property was made through Giles & Kells, managers of the house and lot department of the Wright & Callender Company.

NEW HOTEL LEASED.

Seventy-Room Hostelry on West Third Street to Be Opened Next Month.

E. W. Cason & Co., Associated Hotel Brokers, report the leasing of the new seventy-room hotel in course of construction at No. 722 West Third street. R. F. Bennett & Co. are the owners. The building is a three-story brick structure, modern throughout, and is equipped with the latest appliances. There are two stores on the first floor with a large lobby with a marble entrance in the center of the building.

The lessee is T. W. Harvey, an experienced hotel man, who will completely furnish and equip the house. He expects to be ready to open for business about September 15. The face of the lease calls for approximately $50,000.

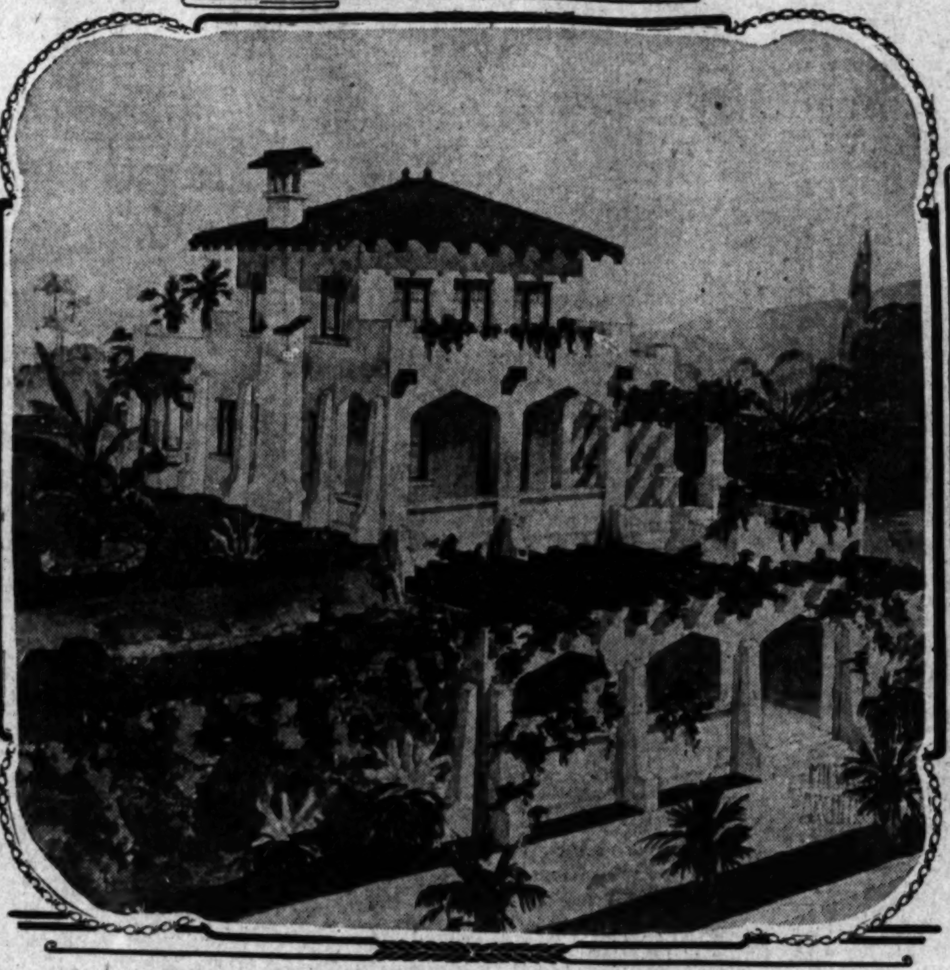
NEW BLOCK FOR HILL.

A building of a single story in height, but with foundations of sufficient strength to support five additional floors, will be started soon on the east side of Hill street, just south of Sixth, by the Central Broadway Investment Company. The structure will be of brick and steel construction and 100x125 feet in size. It will provide for six large storerooms. Plans are being prepared by S. Tilden Norton.

TO BUILD ON CORNER.

The northwest corner of Long Beach avenue and Forty-ninth Place has been purchased by Abner L. Ross from Mary A. Sidy for $1000 cash. As soon as the avenue is improved Mr. Ross will erect on the lot a substantial two-story brick building to be occupied by stores and apartments.

PLANS FOR SANTA MONICA SEASIDE HOME.



Mrs. Carl Schader will build first residence on site of old Arcadia Hotel grounds, which are now being remodeled.

SPANISH VILLA.

FIRST HOME ON ARCADIA SITE.

MRS. CARL SCHADER HAS PLANS FOR RESIDENCE.

Rapid Changes Are Taking Place in Heart of Old Santa Monica, and Seaside Terrace Will Soon Be Open to Building—Unique Plans for Beach Dwellings.

The rebuilding of the famous heart of Santa Monica has begun and within a few months the site of the old Arcadia Hotel, with its spacious grounds, will be a district of handsome beach homes. With the shovels and teams still at work grading streets and opening roads through the cliff to the beach, Mrs. Carl Schader, wife of the owner of Seaside Terrace, has already completed plans for the first residence.

It is to be built in the Spanish style with a tiled roof and will have an advantageous position above the street level on one of the terraces. The plan under which the Arcadia grounds are being worked over for building sites will provide many beautiful locations for residences. An elaborate scheme of gardening is included in the plans for the house, and a pergola porch will extend to the street, covering the entrance stairway.

The transformation of the Arcadia grounds into residence sites has been a good instance of the rapidity with which big things are done in Southern California. Not only the old hotel but scores of buildings down on the beach were razed in making the new improvement. The scope of the improvement has been increased as the work progressed.

In the first place, Mr. Schader proposed to unite all the property owners along the beach front and build a cement walk. Some objected, but he bought them out and increased his own holdings. He has recently given to the city of Santa Monica the beach between the property line and the sea for a park, on the condition that the cement walk be improved with rest rooms at the street intersections and otherwise beautified to make it attractive.

Seaside Terrace, which will be opened to building as soon as Mr. Schader's house is started, will be a unique subdivision. A part of it will be located on the high cliffs and another part on the shore level. The higher lots will be sold for residence purposes only, while the lower lots will permit of three-story apartment-houses. The main streets will slant down to the beach from the car line, while others will descend from the terrace by stairways.

Mr. Schader is one of the newcomers who has been largely responsible for the reawakening of Santa Monica. It was through his instrumentality that the cement walk was completed from Ocean Park to the North Beach. The building of a handsome residence for Mrs. Schader has been one of the essential plans in the development of Seaside Terrace throughout. It was designed by the Milwaukee Building Company.

IMPORTANT LEASE CLOSED.

Fireproof Hotel at Eighth and Grand Taken Over for Term of Ten Years.

A five-story class "A" fireproof hotel building to be erected by Crichton Smith for R. J. Copp at the southeast corner of Eighth street and Grand avenue has been leased for a term of ten years to Guy Woodward. The total rental consideration is $130,000.

The structure, an architect's perspective of which appeared exclusively in The Times of June 26, will have a frontage of 91 feet on Grand avenue by 105 feet on Eighth. It will be handsomely faced with white tile on both fronts. Its cost will be something over $100,000.

The building will contain five large storerooms on the Grand-avenue frontage of the first floor and 125 hotel rooms, with 56 baths, on the four upper floors. Plans are in the hands of Garrett & Bixby. The site has already been cleared.

EXODUS FROM OIL FIELDS.

MANY MEN SEEK COAST DURING THE HEATED SPELL.

H. P. Mason Tells of the Fast Work Done for the Creme Petroleum Company With a Rotary Rig—Controversy Over Depth of a Well Near McKittrick.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Aug. 5.—W. H. Graham, a well-known driller in the west side oil field, has come to Bakersfield, and will in all probability remain here for a month. He states that owing to the hot weather that prevails in the west side oil fields many of the employés are leaving for the coast, thus necessitating the laying off of many other men by the oil companies. It is understood that one company alone laid off twenty-five men the past few days. Mr. Graham states that the oil companies on the west side have much difficulty in securing the delivery of lumber and material for the building of derricks. The oil companies are badly in need of lumber, but it is difficult to get it as quickly as it is needed.

H. P. Mason, who ten years ago was connected with the Sterling Oil Company of the Kern field, is a visitor in the city from San Francisco. Mr. Mason is one of the interested parties in the Creme Petroleum Oil Company located in the Coalinga field. He says that in just forty days by means of a rotary the first well of this company was drilled 2030 feet. At 2400 feet the well will be cemented to shut off the water, when drilling will be resumed. The derrick for well No. 2 is ready for the rotary as soon as it has completed well No. 1 and the material is on the ground for well No. 3.

Well No. 3, belonging to the M. P. Oil company in the Kern field, was perforated yesterday and placed on the pump today. This well promises to be an excellent one.

S. P. Wible of Bakersfield yesterday went to the west side field in his auto. The driver was told to hit only the high places on the road. Mr. Wible was telephoned that oil had been struck at a depth of 3000 feet. This well is on section 35, 29-21, not a great distance from McKittrick. Two predictions had previously been made as to what depth oil would be struck in this well. The members of the geological survey claimed that oil would not be encountered at a depth of 3000 feet but would have to go a great deal deeper. W. R. Jewel of this city had made a prediction that oil would be struck at a depth of 3000.

The Taft Oil Company, with a capitalization of $200,000, has been organized under the laws of Arizona. The papers have been filed in Bakersfield, E. J. Boust of Fresno and L. Samuels of San Francisco are among the stockholders in this new company. This company in addition to handling oil lands will handle the Taft townsite property.

The Gate City Oil Company has been made defendant in the courts here. The King Lumber Company has brought suit against this oil company for $2522 alleged to be due for material furnished.

ORANGE GROVES SOLD.

A. Fitch, Pomona, has sold for W. H. Tuttle, Pomona, to R. F. Brubaker, San Dimas, his five-acre orange grove, north of San Dimas; consideration, $1,000. The same agency has sold for H. J. Cowper, Los Angeles, to Edwin T. Brink, late of the Philippine Islands, a 20-acre orange grove, on Archibald avenue, Cucamonga, near the Santa Fé station and packing-houses, ten acres in Valencias, ten acres in navels. Mr. Brink buys for a home and an investment: the consideration is not stated. Dr. A. Parker Lewis, of Reno, sold to Luman Rutty, Pomona, a 10-acre orange grove, on East Grand avenue, Pomona. This grove is mostly Valencias; the consideration was $13,000. The same agent put the deal through. L. D. Temple has sold to B. H. McCurdy, Pomona, a ten-acre grove, on the corner of San Antonio avenue and Eleventh street near Upland. This grove consists of eight acres in lemons, the balance being in oranges. Mr. Fitch reports that these were cash sales.

RICH STRIKE IN OLD MINE.

High-Grade Ore in Central Eureka Property.

Farmers Force Closing of Balaklala Smelter.

Allegheny Awaits Finishing of Transmission Line.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Aug 5.—The Central ureka mine at Sutter Creek, one of he famous properties of pioneer mining n the Mother Lode, sprang into the potlight a few days ago as the result f a sensationally rich strike on the 300 level. The vein is several feet ide, with the pay streak showing a idth of ten inches. The ore is being aken out in candle boxes and stored n vaults, under guard. Developments ave not progressed sufficiently to de- ermine the extent of the discovery, ut the vein appears to be the old one ost several years ago, and is showing ll of its former strength and addi- onal richness

The Central Eureka is located be- ween the South Eureka and the Eu- ka mines, and has had a most ro- antic history. In pioneer days it was eld by the Tregione family and yield- d ore of remarkable richness for any years. It next passed into the ands of Amador capitalists, and un- r the management of W. R. Thomas ecame one of the principal producers the Mother Lode and paid a num- r of dividends. After maintaining is pace for several years, the vein ulted and efforts to find it proving navailing, the big property was osed down.

t remained idle for a number of ars, and was so generally believed be a worn-out property that most of e old machinery was dismantled and ld for what it would bring. Two ars ago local people, encouraged by e splendid showing of the neighbor- South Eureka mine, secured the mine for a small consideration and mmenced vigorous prospecting. The aft was carried down to the 1200- ot point and work recently com- nced on a drift. One hundred and ty feet from the shaft the long- ght vein was encountered and the hest ore ever found in the mine is ing extracted.

he Eureka mine is owned by Hetty een, the richest woman in America, t she has steadfastly refused to op- te it herself, nor will she sell it, or rmit others to operate it on any ms. The property was formerly a nderful producer, and is still re- ded as one of the best mines on the ther Lode. The South Eureka is porarily closed pending the erec- n of a new hoisting plant and other chinery. Work will be resumed hin a short time, as this mine is one the best in California.

Balaklala Smelter Closed.

y a decisive vote, the members of Farmers' Protective Association e directed that the Balaklala smel- at Coram be entirely closed until Cottrell fume-controller has been talled. This means that the great nt will be idle until well in October, that the efforts of the company to p one furnace in operation have n in vain. The company was par- ularly anxious to keep one furnace commission to avoid the scattering ts splendid corps of trained men, as n resumption General Manager R. White will be compelled to break in entirely new force. The unrelenting ion of the farmers is not kindly eived by the company or the busi- s interests of Shasta county, as it enerally felt that the Balaklala ple were doing all in their power complete the fume-controller with utmost celerity.

uring the first six months of this r the Balaklala Copper Company ated the largest tonnage in its his- , the ore yielding 6,746,232 pounds copper, 341,124 ounces of silver and ounces of gold. The copper cost m 9.75 to 11 cents to produce, and marketed at 12.5 cents per pound. net profits of the company for this iod were $167,011. It is feared by ny of the business houses that ing to the low price of the red al the Balaklala will be in no hurry resume operations.

lleghany is quietly awaiting the pletion of the electrical transmis- line of the Middle Yuba Hydro- ctric Company to the mines, and ng to the absence of milling facil- and the enormously high cost at- ding developments by hand drills, t of the companies are making lit- effort to mine their ore bodies. Con- rable prospecting is being conduct- but in most cases it is felt that n this work can be done better with employment of power drills. The mbago, Rainbow and Bear Creek s are in constant operation, and e companies are maintaining a dy production at good profits. The htner is developing its big vein in lower adit, with the wonderful e showing continued strength with ther depth. As soon as power con- ons improve this property will com- ce heavy production of high-grade rtz. The Kenton, controlled by An- os, is also looking well. Prospect- at the Sixteen-to-One, Rainbow ension, Red Star and a score of rs, continues steadily. The boom apparently subsided, but has been ceeded by an era of active develop- ts and important explorations.

the Cleveland, controlled by W. Wharton and associates of Los An- s, the mill has been started on low le ore from the lower adit, where ledge is thirty feet wide. The com- y has accomplished much work taking over the property and is eloping the mine into one of the t promising milling propositions in county.

e Phoenix Company has been re- rporated by all of the old claim- of the property, and after lying for nearly fifteen years, the mine resume activities early in Sep- ber. The property is equipped with n-stamp mill, eight-drill compressor four machine drills. The mill is g repaired and a Pelton water- el installed to operate the com- sor. The adit is being retimbered, it is understood that sufficient ore blocked out in the old workings to ble the mill to run for an extended od. The Phoenix was formerly an ortant producer, but was closed use of friction between different ies claiming ownership.

Tuolumne Cons. of California.

is company, operating immense el properties near Phoenix Lake, umne county, will shortly install pioneer dredge, and is considering purchase of a second gold boat in near future. About eighty men are employed in completing the extensive system of ditches and flumes and in constructing company buildings. The big dam is practically finished. Developments are progressing steadily at the mines, and the work is proving the gravel to be of excellent quality, with values uniform. With the installation of its dredge, the company will be one of the largest gravel producers in the central portion of the State. Southern Californians are largely interested.

Gold Ship Making Good.

The Gold Ship Mining Company, in which Angeleños are interested, has struck gold-bearing gravel in its properties near Groveland. The pay gravel was encountered by the drift being extended from the bottom of the shaft and it is expected to reach the bedrock within a short time. The gravel is of splendid grade, and it is planned to install a gravel mill as soon as arrangements can be perfected for the receipt of electric power. William Graham is manager.

Lucy Gray Active.

Developments on the 200 and 240 levels of the Lucy Gray mine, near Lyons, are disclosing good shoots of ore, with the main vein in the Wabash shaft assaying $6 to $12 per ton. The company is seriously handicapped by the lack of water and the Wabash shaft being sunk as rapidly as possible in the hopes of striking an ample supply of the precious fluid. The shaft is down 240 feet on the vein at this time. Considerable work is going on from the Lucy shaft, the workings at this section of the mine comprising approximately 3000 feet.

Plumas Copper Fields.

The Engele Copper Company is rapidly completing its 100-ton furnace and will soon commence production. Other companies are very active in the Genessee and adjoining sections, the low price of copper not retarding work.

TWENTY CLAIMS CHANGE HANDS.

NEW MEN TAKE OVER THE DIXON MINING COMPANY.

First Payment Is Made on the Cobre Grande Group of Claims in the Aravaipa District—Output of the Warrior Property Averages Better Than Ten Per Cent. Copper.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Aug. 5.—The property of the Dixon Mining Company, nine miles northwest of Globe, has been transferred to the Globe-Arizona and El Paso Copper Mining and Smelting Company, an El Paso corporation, wherein David G. Baldwin, a sanatorium owner, is president. The largest stockholder is John O'Keefe, a prominent El Paso realty and mining operator. H. Vincent Wallace of El Paso will be consulting engineer. The property embraces twenty claims, developed only to the depth of 130 feet, mainly by means of two tunnels. The formation indicates the presence of an immense copper body at depth. One feature that especially interests local miners is an announcement that the new company is considering the erection of a custom smelter, capable of caring for the concentrates from the Miami country and for the occasional ore shipments that mean so much to the small mine owner.

A first payment of $10,000 has been made on the Cobre Grande group of claims in Aravaipa district, twenty-three miles west of Fort Thomas. In the group are fourteen claims, contracted for by A. F. S. Cooper on behalf of Wheeler & Shaw, Boston mining brokers. Development is being pushed under Mr. Cooper's direction. A large body of ore lately opened shows values of 4 per cent. copper and gold averaging $1.50 a ton.

Eight drill holes sunk on the Live Oak property all have penetrated commercial ore. The average thickness of the ore body is 100 feet.

Fifty men are employed on the Warrior property, sending out daily smelter shipments of 100 tons of ore averaging better than 10 per cent. copper.

In Tombstone District.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TOMBSTONE (Ariz.) Aug. 5.—There has been renewed interest of late in Courtland over reports of rich gold discoveries. The principal find was on property owned by Cummings & Wolcott of Tombstone, who have twelve feet of ore at the depth of 100 feet, with stringers of extremely rich rock. The vein has been sampled for the Copper Queen Company, which may purchase the property. Little is doing just now in the Courtland copper mines, where values at depth are said to have been unsatisfactory to the Copper Queen and Calumet and Arizona companies.

Right within the city of Tombstone, in some old workings that lately caved in, a four-foot ledge of high-grade gold-silver ore has been found by John Rainey, who has a lease on the old Honeycomb mine. In the vicinity is a great stope which yielded $1,000,000 in value in the olden days of the camp.

Tombstone has just lost two of her best citizens, through the resignations of General Manager W. F. Staunton of the Tombstone Consolidated Mines Company and of Arthur Gage, who has been secretary of the same corporation. Mr. Staunton came here from Congress, where he had been in charge for years of that property, the deepest workings in the Southwest. He will take up residence in the East, to take up work as a consulting mining engineer. Mr. Gage will go to Los Angeles to attend to important realty interests acquired by him.

WILL TEST THE ORE.

CLIMAX MINING COMPANY.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Aug. 4.—President R. M. Martin and Director F. K. Haynes of the Climax Mining Company have taken several hundred pounds of ore to Los Angeles, for treatment and analysis, with the object of determining the best process for reduction, as it has been agreed that the time now has come for erection of proper reduction works. An immense amount of ore has been blocked out in the company's mines on the Hassayampa, eighteen miles south of Prescott. The ore carries tellurium in places. J. K. Truman is in charge at the mines.

F. L. Dwight, manager of the Grand Mountain mines, who passed through Prescott lately on his way to Los Angeles, states that on the 100-foot level to the gold and silver values has been added copper ore that assays better than 5 per cent. There has been no decrease in the gold and silver assays, while the vein is stronger than ever along 120 feet of drifting. A carload of ore is now being taken to the railroad for shipment to the Needles smelter.

It is reported that work is to be resumed on the Crown Point mine in the lower Bradshaws. This is the mine so long managed by Col. A. O. Brodie of the Rough Riders, formerly Governor of Arizona and now in the regular army at St. Paul, Minn. The property has a rich vein of gold ore and has a small stamp mill, with the handicap of a short water supply.

A big electric sinking pump is being installed at the bottom of the main shaft of the Jerome Verde company at Jerome, to go down 150 feet from the present 450-foot level, to cut the primary formation.

A novel wet-washing machine is being installed on placer ground on Milk Creek, a branch of the Hassayampa, near Walnut Grove. The plant has capacity for twenty tons of gravel a day. The ground carries from 50 cents to $1 a cubic yard in gold.

URES DISTRICT SHOWS COPPER.

MUCH INTEREST IS BEING SHOWN BY MINING MEN.

The Cubana Mining Company, Owned by Los Angeles People, Has a Promising Property—Gireaux Consolidated May Resume Operations in the Sultana Mine.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Aug. 5.—Much interest is manifest in the new copper district recently denounced in the Ures district in Sonora, Mexico. The new district is located at Palmerita, east of the Southern Pacific Railroad, and the station is Carbo. Bostwick and Dickson, owners of the Washington Mine in the Arizpe district, are working a force of men on their property, and after cutting through a leach zone, are now running a tunnel to cut the ore at a depth of two hundred feet, where sulphides are looked for at a depth thirty feet below water level. These mining men have two miles of the six mines included in the known vein, the district comprising all told between 1500 and 2000 pertinencias. W. H. Worthington, and Muhelm and Shattuck are also interested, as is the original denouncer, Fain of Ures. The surface markings are said to be as distinct as any in Sonora, and the copper vein resembles that at Butte more than any other property in Northern Mexico.

Another payment has been made to James Finch for the Veta Grande, sold to O. L. Neer. This mine is located in the Bocoachi region of the Arizpe district, and is a promising silver proposition. R. E. Russell of Nacozari, has been making a trip over the northern end of Sonora for the purpose of making contracts for the selling of ore. There are in Sonora many properties which have small amounts of ore on the dumps, and Russell is marketing this output.

The Cubana Mining Company has resumed operations on its property twelve miles north of Arizpe. Los Angeles people own this property, and George McClain is manager. The mine has big showings in carbonates and oxides, which it is thought will result in good sulphide ores at depth. Three hundred feet of development work has been done. The company shut down just preceding the panic in 1907. Already $75,000 has been expended.

L. A. Lindsay is developing a big porphyry copper showing near the Washington mine. He is employing churn drills to sound the depth of the ore body. The Colorado Mining Company of Huepac is doing little at its property. The stockholders are in Cananea. The company has a four-stamp mill on the ground, and fifteen hundred feet of development work.

It is reported that the Gireaux Consolidated may resume operations at an early date at its well-known Sultana mine. The mine is located 20 miles east of Carbo, in what is known as a good field. The mine is distinct in that it was originally a copper proposition but developed later into gold. Its history is connected with the history of the Ely district, as the profits from the Sultana went into the development of the Gireaux at Ely.

A new gold field has been developed north of the city of Alamos, in southern Sonora, which promises to attract wide attention before fall. The gold is in quartz ledges, and runs about $16 an ounce. The ore shutes average from one to six ounces in gold, and are from 3 to 6 feet in width, and even up to eight feet in width. In the same district are a group of parallel ledges of silver, with veins having a calcite fillings. Gilbert of Cananea and Obermiller and associates, the owners of the famous Promontoria mine of Alamos and others are interested in the new field. All the ground is denounced in small blocks, having originally been worked by the gambuscinos in little denouncements of from one to ten pertinencias. On the Obermiller ground a mill will be put in at once.

UTAH CAPITAL INTERESTED.

Golden Trail Group of Prospects in San Francisco District Taken Under Bond.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Aug. 4.—The latest arrival of outside capital into the county is that of a strong combination of Utah men, headed by William Ochs, mining engineer and metallurgist of Salt Lake City, which has bonded the Golden Trail group of prospects in the San Francisco District, about four miles northeast from Gold Road. Though developed by open cuts only, the general conditions, formation and actual mineral showing are so favorable that the consideration is placed at $100,000, a top figure in this county for a prospect developed so little.

The claims were located last January by Link McKesson, who in a short time proved a ledge about 11 feet wide, averaging $7 per ton in free milling gold. This is a much better surface showing than that of the Gold Road mine, with which it is nearly identical in formation, and Manager Phillips of the latter was so favorably impressed with the find that he called the attention of his company to it, but they were unable to come to terms.

The McKesson group is the first indication of a mine on the east side of the range for a distance of ten miles in the San Francisco District, and has every advantage of accessibility to the railroad and electric power besides being well supplied with water. The property is within two miles of the Kingman power line and only ten miles from the Santa Fé road. Ochs proposes starting development work at once.

The Owl prospect, adjoining the Ruth mine in the Silver Creek District, was bonded by C. B. Van Deman of Jacksonville, Fla., who recently took over the property of the Rattan Mining Company, and is to be used as a site for the old Rattan mill, which is to be moved up from the Colorado River.

W. L. Clark of the United Verde, who has been making an examination of the Keystone, Pinkham and Midnight mines at Mineral Park and Chloride, left today for Hackberry to examine the Copper Giant.

Eli Hilty and associates have bonded the Big Wonder and Baldwin mines, three miles west of Gold Road, owned by Brattlund and Gardner, and will start sinking at once.

FRIENDLY FEELING.

INDEPENDENCE OF MEXICO.

CENTENNIAL TO BE CELEBRATED DURING SEPTEMBER.

School Authorities of United States Asked to Hold Exercises in Commemoration of Mexico's Separation from Spain—Martyrs Who Fell in the Cause of Freedom.

[Chicago Record-Herald:] In asking through the medium of letters sent to the public school authorities of large cities of the United States, that exercises in celebration of the centennial of the beginning of Mexico's successful struggle against Spain for independence, be held in the schools on Friday afternoon, September 16, the educational authorities of the republic south of the Rio Grande have given an evidence of a desire for closer relations between the two countries. That public education is improving rapidly in Mexico is the claim of people familiar with the subject, and those who consider the schoolhouse synonymous with civilization see in this a hopeful sign of Mexico's real progress. The "teaching of patriotism," so much desired by enthusiasts in all lands, may not be possible, but intelligent citizenship certainly depends on the schoolhouse for much. And Mexico evidently desires to be known of her neighbors' children, with an eye to the future.

"These exercises in the public schools of the United States," says the letter of the Mexican authorities, "will develop in the minds of 30,000,000 American boys and girls an interest in the location, government, sympathies, pleasures and resources of the people of the Mexican nation, and will result in a more complete understanding, a lasting friendship and a concerted sympathy between the two nations and their people, which is so much to be desired."

The public schools of Mexico as well as the nation generally, will hold exercises in celebration of the beginning of the struggle for independence. Public schools are not numerous in the southern republic. Elementary schools number about 9200, and have about 620,000 pupils enrolled. The need of schools is shown by the fact that in 1895, the last year for which statistics are available, 10,345,899 out of a total of 12,491,573 population could neither read nor write, while 323,336 could only read. The difference between Mexico's political conditions and those of the United States seem to be in part explained by these figures. Republics do not flourish when they are unsupported by a large middle class of intelligent voters, and the middle class is what Mexico, like other Latin American republics, lacks.

It was on September 16, 1810, that Miguel Hidalgo, the parish priest at Dolores, near Guanajuato, upon learning that some of his fellow conspirators for freedom from the tyrannical rule of Spain had been arrested, rang his church bell and called upon his people to follow him and make Mexico free. His rallying cry was "Long live religion! Long live our Holy Mother of Guadalupe! Long live America, and death to bad government!" Hidalgo is one of the world's martyrs to the cause of political freedom. Born at Corralegos, he had studied at Valladolid before he was given charge of the parish of Dolores. His dissatisfaction with Spanish rule had been smoldering for a long time before it burst into flame September 16, and seems to have been prematurely fanned into fire, for he had conspired with the Indians to raise a general insurrection on November, 1, 1810. The fear of discovery, some writers say, as well as indignation over the arrest of his fellow plotters, drove Hidalgo into sudden action. Whatever the cause, he became another Peter the Hermit, preaching eloquently and with powerful effect to the people and giving the character of a crusade to his insurrection by bearing aloft as he went through the country the banner of Our Lady of Guadalupe, patron saint of Mexico.

Hidalgo captured the towns of Guanajuato and Guadalajara and gathered under his banner an army of 50,000 men. Had he been a statesman and a military genius as well as a strong-hearted, passionate protester against political oppression, he might have accomplished in a short time the end he sought. But as he advanced against Mexico City a decree of excommunication was issued aaginst him, the spirit of discord filled his followers, and his ammunition became so low that he was obliged to retreat. He succeeded in rallying his forces, and, indeed, increased their number to 100,000, but his army was little more than a disorderly mob. The 6000 Spanish volunteers sent by the viceroy speedily and pitilessly crushed his followers, and Hidalgo fled to the United States. There he sought arms and assistance, but was captured, taken back to Mexico, degraded from his priestly office and finally shot in Chihuahua. A few years later he was extolled by the people as a saint, and the place of his execution was shown to travelers as a holy spot. The newly formed republic that sprang from his efforts and those of succeeding revolutionary leaders erected a magnificent statue to him, and the town Goliad, now in Texas, was named after him. At the time the name was given to the town Hidalgo was still proscribed by the Spanish authorities, and so the letters were rearranged, the H being left out as silent—an ingenious way of evading the law.

With serious troubles at home from the Napoleonic wars, Spain could not devote much of her energy to subduing the Mexican revolutionists. José Maria Morelos, another priest, and a pupil of Hidalgo in both theology and war, took up the sword that had fallen from the hand of the dead leader. He won a series of victories, in 1811, that completely paralyzed the Spanish power for several months, and became known as "the hero of a hundred battles." He also was a martyr to the revolutionary cause, and, like Hidalgo, was betrayed into the enemy's hands. Executed in December, 1815, his remains now repose in the cathedral at Mexico and his name is revered throughout the country.

Not until August 23, 1821, was Mexico declared independent by the treaty of Aquala. Another military leader, Vicente Guarrerro, won the final victories over the Spanish troops and reorganized the revolutionists. In January, 1821, he, with Augustin de Iturbide, another revolutionary leader, joined in the "plan de Iguala," by which Mexico was to become independent under a ruler from the Spanish royal family. The plan failed because no satisfactory ruler could be obtained, but the negotiations with the Spanish government resulted in the independence of Mexico.

From the treaty of Aquala down to 1884, when Porfirio Diaz became President for the second time, the history of Mexico was one of alternating revolutions, disorder, conflicting policies, political plots and counterplots, military rule and financial disorder. But for the strong arm of the United States to support it there can be no doubt that the country long ago would have become an appendage of some European power. The Diaz rule, while arbitrary and despotic in the eyes of a citizen of the United States, has been beneficial to the country in many ways, and appreciative of the interests of foreign investors. The meeting of Presidents Taft and Diaz at El Paso last autumn was an evidence of cordiality between the nations they represented that was more than superficial or formal. There are those who, after having studied closely the people of Mexico, say they are in a process of change that will eliminate, in time, the obstacles now in the way of the country's enjoyment of a republic of the most enlightened kind.—[Chicago Record-Herald.

A Twelve-Million-Dollar Theater.

Three years more, at least, will be required to finish Mexico City's $12,000,000 white marble theater. No attempt will be made to crowd the work of building the marble facing to the edifice in time for the centennial celebration except in the matter of the front, where the best of the statuary and decorative work will be put. The heroic figures to ornament the arch over the tympanum are now being put in place. The stage floor will have eight powerful elevators, operated by electricity, for special scenic requirements. Three large hydraulic elevators will operate the orchestra pit, so that the elevation of the musicians in front of the stage may be varied for grand opera and other necessities. This stage is pronounced to be absolutely the best in the world at present, a force of from fifty to seventy-five men being required to operate the scenery mechanisms during a performance.—[The Argonaut.

An official of the United States Smelting, Refining and Mining Company states that all properties of that corporation are being operated at normal capacity except the Real del Monte and Pachuca mines, where production has been restricted on account of insufficient power for the last six months but that in the near future there will be available all the energy needed and that one of the mills will be increased in capacity 50 per cent.

Real del Monte is pushing work at the San Ignacio shaft, the deepest at those diggings, having reached the 1700-foot level and being rigged up as the main avenue of extraction. About 300 men are at work in this one place. The shaft is being re-timbered from top to bottom and provided with equipment for the self-dumping skips already on the ground. A new 250-horse-power hoist will be implanted and in the meantime haulage is effected through the Difficultad shaft. Heavy steel has been laid for a length of two miles at the 1300-foot level on the Santa Brigida lode and the railway will be operated with electricity.

Santa Gertrudis has an army of men employed in building the mill, shops of various kinds and divers other improvements. New compressors have been installed, cozy dwellings have been erected and a big store provided. Since the present management came into power the Santa Gertrudis's San Francisco shaft has dropped 430 feet and there will soon begin the driving of laterals at a depth of 1660 feet, the best depth in that section of Pachuca. High-grade was cut in the last section of the San Francisco shaft. The Guadalupe mill, owned by the Santa Gertrudis, is running steadily.

Trenching has demonstrated the presence of a healthy vein system on the Don Carlos group, adjoining the Santa Gertrudis on the south and owned by the Santa Gertrudis South Company, of London, which has appointed E. E. Barchard general manager in supervision of the lively exploitation inaugurated.

Sinking of the main shaft on the Sonora y Ures, of Pachuca, has resumed with the thorough unwatering of the diggings, which apparently have the extension of the famous La Blanca lode. Lack of power, which has proved a serious hindrance, has been cured by the advent into camp of the Mexico Light and Power Company's service.

An English corporation has paid $600,000 for title to the Cinco Señores and La Purisima mines, mineral territory that lies to the north of La Blanca and Santa Gertrudis. Development of the virgin estates will commence within a few weeks.

London capital is interesting itself, also, in the Dona Phoebe mine, which abuts the Santa Gertrudis and the Dos Carlos. Engineers are en route from England to make a critical examination of this and the Tres Banderas, which lies to the west of La Blanca and is under option to Britishers at $800,000, gold. These deals with Englishmen as parties of the second part have all followed the purchase of the Santa Gertrudis by the Camp Bird Company of London, and John Hays Hammond.

Development, recently resumed at the Potoina mine, Pachuca, is being rewarded by alluring revelations. The mine, near the San Rafael group, has been idle for more than twenty years, the cessation having been caused by a ruinous run in the main tunnel. Engineers believe the great Polo Norte lead will be uncovered within Potosina lines.

Contractors are driving an exploration shaft on the Santa Inez Carretera, one of the promising prospects in the Santa Gertrudis region, an agreement having been drawn for 812 feet of depth as a starter. A seventy-five horse power electric hoist will be installed.

BIG MINING PROPERTY.

One of the big things of the State of Sinaloa is the Panuco Mining Company, which, according to the report just issued, paid $425,000, Mexican currency, in dividends in the year 1909. In that year the total revenues were $884,182.53, and the profits $476,838.53, silver. There was left a reserve fund of $270,250. Since the company was organized, 1877, with a capital of $200,000, it has paid out in dividends $7,465,000. Water power is secured from a dam that cost $200,000, and which saves the company $50,000 a year. Most of the stockholders are citizens of Mazatlan.

W. C. West and H. L. Roper have taken over the 20,000-ton tailings dump of the San Javier mine, northeast of Culiacan, and will cyanide the ores, which average about $9 a ton, two-thirds of the value being in silver and the balance gold. The old mill on this domain will be remodeled and brought up to modern measure. West and Roper have gone to New York to make ready for their operations.

Operations of the Teziutlan Copper Mining and Smelting Company have not been affected by the finding by a Mexican court of a judgment for more than $11,000,000 (gold) against George D. Barron, president of the Mexican Mine Development Company, whose other officers were the plaintiffs. Some of the properties of the Teziutlan company are alleged by the men who secured the heavy judgment to have formerly belonged to the Mexican Development Company.

The Teziutlan Copper Company's new smelter is running at fair capacity and 2500 men are employed at the plant and the mines, near Teziutlan, in the State of Puebla. There are two furnaces blown in, each of 500 tons' capacity, and completely equipped with converters for production of blister copper. Power for generation of electric energy, used in the mines and reduction works, comes from a 1000-foot falls. Shipments are going forward regularly to New York. The mine, which has a capacity of 15,000 tons a month, owns its railroad to the town of Teziutlan, a distance of ten miles.

CLARA MAKES STRIKE.

HIGH GRADE COPPER ORE.

Several rich strikes of commercial copper have just been made by the Clara Consolidated Gold and Copper Mining Company, at Swansea, Ariz., additional ore bodies opened and many million of tons of copper ore blocked. The most important of these strikes were in Nos. 6 and 7 churn drill holes. Ore was encountered in both cases at a depth of 380 feet, and continued to a depth of 496 feet, showing a body of ore passed through of 110 feet. Assays of the ore taken out by the drills ran from 2 per cent. to 13 per cent. No. 7 drill hole could not be driven deeper on account of the collapsing of the casing, but the drill was in ore when drilling was suspended. This gives the Clara tremendous ore reserves. Systematic exploring and blocking of ore bodies is being prosecuted with the churn drills, and the Clara Consolidated Mines bid fair to become one of the largest copper mines in Arizona. A depth of about 568 feet has already been attained on the ore body. It shows a tonnage, far in excess of the conservative estimate of the management, of 7,000,000 tons. The drills in several instances passed through an ore body 225 feet wide.

The company expects to be in continuous operation immediately upon the completion of its big water power plant within the next twenty to thirty days. The smelting plant, at the present time, on account of lack of pumping facilities to supply water enough, has only been running in campaigns of eight to ten days. On account of the promising large tonnage of customs ores available, the Clara is installing its own sampling works for the economical handling of all custom ores. The recent strikes in the Clara are of the utmost importance on account of the high grade of the pyrite, which ran from 6½ to 7¾, the general value of the ores in that district heretofore running around 4¾ per cent. In addition to its copper, the bullion returns show good gold and silver values. President George Mitchell is personally directing the mine and smelter operations, and is pushing the development of the property at a rapid speed. The plant at Swansea is one of the finest and most modern in the West, many labor and money-saving devices having been installed by Mr. Mitchell that will make a marked showing in the Clara's bullion record.

Mutual Home Building Corporation

A Great Victory

The effort is over—the result is a victory almost beyond comparison.

The campaign of MUTUAL HOME BUILDING CORPORATION for July, laid out in the early part of the month, was expected to produce subscriptions for 10,000 shares, possibly 15,000 if fortune favored. It produced bona fide subscriptions of over seventy thousand (70,000) shares, and developed prospects for many thousands more the coming months.

And why such an overwhelming result? What combined and conspired to produce it? July—the midsummer month—with many away, and the remainder busy—is not the month to "look for the unexpected." And competition among stock-selling corporations both keen and aggressive—yet the new one—only a couple of months old—seems to have distanced all in its first effort. Over 70,000 shares subscribed and many subscriptions paid up in full in one short midsummer month—July. The record is open to all.

Of course MUTUAL HOME BUILDING CORPORATION had some of its competitors "upon its payroll," while others gave it a sincere welcome into the field of legitimate "Home Builders," "Founded on Land and Homes," well knowing that honorable and upright methods are assured. It was this, in addition to a peculiar combination of circumstances, that made the astounding record possible.

Accordingly, MUTUAL HOME BUILDING CORPORATION thanks its competitors, as well as its patrons who so generously responded with a TANGIBLE VOTE OF CONFIDENCE, inspiring beyond comprehension.

But to the future—the gratifying record of the past being closed—what has the future in store? MUTUAL HOME BUILDING CORPORATION has twelve hundred (1200) close-in, beautiful lots to improve and market. They cost only $166.66 on an average, and will sell for $500 to $2500 (some $3000 and a few $3500 each) and they will "sell like hot cakes" when the time comes—just as stock is selling every day.

At the time of purchase these lots were worth one-half more than they cost, thus making shares of the corporation offered for a short time at $1.10 worth $1.50—an advantage never before offered investors in a home building enterprise.—An opportunity to share in the full profits made from real estate bought right, the building of homes built both before and after being sold, the interest and from other profits and savings.

Very soon the price of shares will be advanced to $1.20 each, making a profit of 20c a share for those who bought in July, and 10c a share for those who buy now—with future profits assured.

Terms easy—10 per cent. cash, 5 per cent. monthly, or all cash—the more cash you can pay in, the more dividends you will receive each quarter. Get a copy of "Mutual Investor" and for further particulars please address or call upon

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY

To Correspondents.

This Department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not the exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send also, with the specimen, a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed. Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address, invariably, The Times.

Vanadate and Tremolite.

BARNWELL, June 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am mailing you today six small specimens, from one to five miles from this place, all being from the New York Mountain mining district, this county. No. 1 is from the Red Hills mining claim about five miles northwest. I believe it carries some vanadium and uranium, also the material streaked with a blue mineral like azureite and both taken from the same place. No. 2 from the Arrow, supposed to be uranium or vanadium. This claim is about two miles west of here, and No. 3 is from the same hole on the claim. I would like very much to know if these small yellow spots which seem to be carried all through the vein—which is twenty feet wide—are uranium or vanadium-bearing. Will you also let me know what the white gangue rock is carrying this material? No. 4—this specimen is in the same vein, in the sale hole as the last, but lies between the yellow shoot and the west side of the vein. It has a width of from two inches to two and one-half feet; it looks like gray copper and carries gold. No. 6—is this specimen any form of asbestos, and if it is, is it of any commercial value? Kindly publish in your mineral department an analysis of these specimens and if they are of commercial value.

Respectfully, W. J. U.

ANSWER: In your appreciated communication you do not refer to sample No. 5.

Sample No. 1 is probably silica, colored with iron; No. 2 is quartz, coated with impure lead vanadate; No. 3 is quartz, with a very thin coating of the same mineral as in No. 2; No. 4 is lead carbonate, with a little galena, stained with copper carbonates; No. 5 is gossan, stained with azurite, and No. 6 is altered limestone, containing tremolite (thin white needles.)

There is no tetrahedrite (gray copper) present in any sample.

There is absolutely no uranium present in any specimen submitted.

The crystals in sample No. 6 show tremolite, but not asbestiform variety, and represents material of no commercial value.

Indications point to the fact that, probably, your section of country will, in time, be a producer of vanadates.

We have tested your samples with great care and have been "checked" thoroughly by Washington, D. C., authorities, for the reason that certain buyers of vanadium ores are "purposely turning down" some western deposits of vanadium minerals. The "parties practicing this manly (?) act of deceptive information have, also, much to impart regarding "Monterey shale," of which more later.

Copaline.

TUSAYAN TRADING POST, KEARN'S CANON (Ariz.) June 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Two Navajos brought me some samples—of which I send you two pieces from scattered find near Yuba City. They look like amber to me. Please state in your rare minerals department what the find amounts to, and oblige, yours respectfully, "K."

ANSWER: Copal fossile and copaline are one and the same substance. It is a fossil resin of a yellowish (sometimes of a dirty brown) color. It is of difficult solubility in alcohol, easily cut with a knife, brittle, hardness 2.50 and sp. gr. slightly over 1. The highgate copaline is composed of carbon 85.408 hydrogen 11.787, oxygen 2.669, and ashes 0.136—in 100.000 parts, respectively. "It emits an aromatic and resinous odor when broken and heated. Melts easily to a limpid fluid. Volatizes in the air by a gentle heat, and burns with a clear yellow flame and much smoke, leaving very little residue." The "find" is of mineralogical interest, and of commercial interest if quantity at hand is sufficient.

Low Grade Glass Sand.

CORONA, June 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly tell me if enclosed sample—found near Corona—is of any value as glass sand, and if so please give name of some firm who handle such commodities. Respectfully yours, G. A. W.

ANSWER: There are several California buyers of glass sand; it would not be proper to specify any particular firm.

Why not make inquiry of Messrs. Braun & Co., wholesale chemists, Los Angeles?

The sand would have to be washed and selected before a successful sale could be made, however.

Altered Limestone.

LOS ANGELES, June 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you three samples, marked on the sacks Nos. 1, 2 and 3, of rock that has been sent to me to forward to your department, and which comes from along the line of the Santa Fé Railroad, known as the "Parker Cut-Off," about twenty-five miles west of Parker, in San Bernardino county, California.

Will you kindly state whether you believe these to be samples of oil shales or not. Sample No. 1 is from the upper strata, sample No. 2, the intermediate, and sample No. 3 from the lower strata. There is quite a cropping of this material, and I respectfully request your opinion as to the character of the rock. Yours very truly, O. S.

ANSWER: The samples submitted are not oil shales, but represent material on the order of a cement proposition.

Sample No. 1 includes a number of aluminum silicate specimens, with lime silicate, limonitic iron oxides and other (in the lot) specimens of same character as those mixed with No. 2. Sample No. 2 includes porphyritic and quartzitic rock, with limonite present in siliceous calcite and lava. Sample No. 3 is made up of two specimens, one of them is a slaty calcite (silica present,) with traces of hydrogen sulphide; this rock is an impure anthraconite (stinkstone.) The remaining sample is shale (rock,) but not of the kind representing oil indicators.

Onkosin.

PALA, June 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please identify this rock sample from this locality. I figure it as limestone, but the round, green material mixed with it may be nickel ore. Please tell me in "In the Earth" what the ore is and give its commercial value. Thanking you kindly in advance, yours truly, S. L.

ANSWER: The sample (matrix) is dolomitic limestone with mica present. The rounded, clay-like, apple-green inclusions are composed of silica some 50 per cent., alumina 30 per cent., with potash, magnesia, iron protoxide and water, each in small percentages. Nickel is not present.

Onkosin is soluble in sulphuric acid, but not soluble in hydrochloric acid. Before the blow-pipe it fuses to a glass. The commercial value of material represented by sample is nominal ohly.

Vanadic Acid Absent.

JEAN (Nev.) July 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The enclosed specimens were found in the Yellow Pine mining district, Clark county, Nev. Can you advise me through your "In the Earth" column what o have them assayed for if they carry any values at all? Thanking you in advance. I am, yours truly, E. F. B.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is a mixture of quartz in part jasper; manganese and iron oxides present. On one end of specimen is a bare trace of scheelite, but percentage is so small that it represents no practical value. No. 2 is a lava-like jasper, with seams of botryoidal (microscopical) dolomitic limestone, a conglomerate, as it were. No. 3 is a siliceous hematite, in part micaceous iron ore. No. 4 is somewhat on the order of No. 3, but carries (in addition) yellow iron oxide (limonite.) We did not test samples for old or silver, but analyzed for vanadic acid with result—none present.

Unless a change occurs in your formation—especially so if samples represent ledge matter—the prospect is not good as a money maker.

Actinolite.

RANDSBURG, June 30.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I herewith send you for classification a local sample of asbestos.

Yours truly, T. R. J.

ANSWER: The sample is a light green; massive actinolite, with some acicular (needle shape,) actinolite scattered throughout the mass; it is not actinolite, however, of asbestiform variety.

Jasper and Obsidian.

TEHACHEPI, July 3.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Enclosed are two rock specimens from this locality. Please state in your paper if this rock has any commercial value, or if it would be liable to contain any mineral.

Yours truly, J. E. S.

ANSWER: Sample No. 1 is impure jasper with opal silica present, one sample is flint and the third specimen of No. 1 samples is obsidian (volcanic glass.) Material represented by sam-rock. Material represented by samples is of no commercial value.

Vanadic Acid Present.

LOS ANGELES, July 5.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The enclosed specimens of rock were taken from a well-defined ledge about 50 feet wide, and traceable for 200 feet on the surface, within 15 miles N. E. from Silver Lake, San Bernardino county, Cal.

I have had assays made for gold and silver, but the assayer reports no trace of either. I can not but feel that the rock contains values, and I wish you would make such tests of same as you deem necessary to ascertain values, if any, and oblige.

Very truly yours, Dr. W.

ANSWER: In the ferruginous quartz we find a few scattered, microscopical crystals of vanadate of lead. To justify expenditures of large sums of money (on development), the Vanadates should carry a much bigger percentage of lead and vanadic acid than the sample submitted.

Impure Fluorite.

WHITTIER, Cal., July 6.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly give me your opinion concerning these samples. No. 1 occurs in the ledge matter along with massive quartz on one side of the hole which is some eight feet deep, this stuff (which I call fluorspar) being mixed with lead matter, quartz, clay and such. This spar carries about two dollars gold per ton ore. Now may we expect values to increase with depth and will the spar, probably, come in massive—the quartz, so far, carrying less values than the spar. What is your opinion—No. 2 is the ledge matter occurring along with the fluorspar. No. 3 I call quartz porphyry, and shows about three feet in width at the surface, gold values small, and apparently without walls (definitely) at the surface. Would it be well to follow this? Sample taken about 25 miles south of Daggett, California.

Very truly yours, G. I. H.

ANSWER: A peculiar proposition, sure! Sample No. 1 resembles certain crystals (stalactitic) taken personally from the roof of a cave near the cinnibar deposit of Terlingua, Brewster county, Texas; but the resemblance is a physical one only. The sample is impure fluorite of doubtful commercial value No. 2 "ledge matter," represents a mass of conglomerates, carrying impure fluorite with silica, and other quartz, porcellanite and aluminum silicate. No. 3 is impure ferruginous jasper in part pseudomorphic after pyrite (iron disulphide) and arsenapyrite (arsenical pyrite) with fluorine present.

In such a formation it is doubtful that massive fluorite will be found at depth, and it is impossible to predict whether precious metal values will increase, or decrease, at depth.

No. 3 is probably the best lead you have. It is seldom that great values are found in "eight foot holes."

Nickel Not Present.

VICTORVILLE, July 8.—[Editor of The Times:] Enclosed please find three samples of rock from the southeast side of Ord Mountain, and about thirty-five miles from this place. No. 1, I think, is biotite? Some of the boys here say it is Nickelite (arsenic, nickel and cobalt.) No. 2, I think, is blende. No. 3 some kind of iron. Please tell what kind?

Will you please tell us what these ores are, and their value, if any? Thanking you for this and the many other favers we receive from you through the "In the Earth" department of The Times.

Yours truly, F. W.

ANSWER: Sample is not biotite (black mica.) It carries iron oxides, with (on one side) a bare trace of tungstic acid. No. 2 is hornblendic with fractured tourmaline of no value. No. 3 is made up, chiefly, of various iron oxides (a mixture of hematite, magnetite and limonite.) Zinc is not present in any sample.

Mineralogical Specimens.

GLENDALE (Cal.) July 11.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Would it be possible for me to get any mineral specimens from you for a mineral collection? I am starting a collection and thought if you had no use for the samples sent you after you had named them I would like to have them. I am a subscriber to The Times and have got a lot of information from your section every week.

Sincerely,

"BRAND BUILDING."

ANSWER: Gladly would we comply with your request, but it is impossible for the reasons that when specimens are submitted to the tests of acid, heat, etc., they are of no value for collections of minerals. Most of the samples received are massive, impure, and decidedly "off color," as it were

It is well to suggest to correspondents that we prefer samples of not over one ounce in weight; indeed, it is coming to the point when we must insist that samples submitted should be as requested, and as appears further in paragraphs at head of column. There is absolutely no necessity for "chunks" of rock or mineral of the size representing a certain variety of "Schooners."

We have no interest in recommending any one to dealers in minerals, but colleges, physicians, students and collectors should be proud of the fact that mineralogical specimens—prop ly labeled are obtainable from Mes Braun & Co., wholesale chemists Los Angeles, at nominal prices cheaper (in price) than anywh else in the United States or in rope.

Barytes.

GOLD MOUNTAIN (Nev.) July [To the Editor of The Times:] T is considerable discussion over rock enclosed both here and in R The sample comes from an uprais an abandoned claim here and, in from the hanging wall or roof o small cave in the upraise.

It is the crystals that cause discussion, some say "tremolite," ers call it "lead carbonate," while others pin their guess on "schee dolomite and lime." in some form

With many other prospectors I thank you, in advance, for na and describing the mass of cry in the "In the Earth."

Yours very truly, J. T. M

ANSWER: The specimen is in "massive and somewhat curved."

Some of the crystals were te microscopically, and other cry with the microscope. Hardness crystals over 3; sp. gr., 4.5.

B. B., the crystals "decrepitate lently, and melt with great diffi or only on the edges impartin greenish-yellow color to the fla Not acted on by acids.

OUR COMMERCE IN FRUITS AND NUTS.

Fruit and nuts valued at $458,000,000 have passed through ports of the United States during the last ten years. Of this amount, $285,000,000 represents the value of imports from foreign countries, $156,000,000 exports to foreign countries, $12,000,000 receipts from noncontiguous territories of the United States, and $5,000,000 shipments to those territories.

The value of fruits and nuts imported into, and exported from the country in the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1910, was in round terms $55,000,000, of which about one-third represented exports. A compilation made by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor states the year's imports of fruits and nuts at $36,000,000 and exports at $19,000,000.

A study of the commercial movements during the last decade or two develops the fact that domestic production is rapidly supplanting certain classes of fruits, formerly imported in large quantities This applies especially to raisins, prunes and oranges. Certain other lines, in which local production is still insufficient to meet home consumption, continue to increase in value of imports; notably bananas, figs, walnuts, cocoanuts, and almonds. Comparing the imports of the year just ended with those of one and two decades ago, imports of fruits and nuts as a whole have increased from $21,000,000 and $19,000,000 in 1900 to about $36,000,000 in 1910. Oranges, which in 1890 showed a total importation of $2,000,000, had by 1900 decreased to $1,000,000 and by 1910 to less than $100,000 in value. Raisins in 1890 were valued at $2,000,000, in 1900 at a half a million, and in 1910 at less than one-third million dollars. Prunes showed in 1890 an importation of $1,750,000; in 1900, $48,000, and in 1910, an even less value. Lemons were imported in 1890 to the value of $3,333,000; in 1900 were $3,666,000, but in 1910 decreased to $3,000,000, or less than the figures of 1890. On the other hand, bananas, valued at $4,666,000 in 1890, increased $6,000,000 in 1900, and nearly $12,000,000 in 1910. Almonds, valued at less than $1,000,000 in 1890 and 1900, showed in 1910 imports to the value of more than $3,000,000. Cocoanuts in 1890 were imported to the value of $822,000; in 1900, $703,000, and in 1910 were about $1,333,000. Walnuts, first separately enumerated in 1903, have increased in value of imports from a little over $1,000,000 in that year to $3,500,000 in 1910.

On the export side a far more rapid growth has occurred since 1890. In year the total value of all fruits nuts exported from the country but $4,000,000; in 1900 the total ha creased to nearly $12,000,000, and 1910 about $19,000,000. The prin articles contributing to this growth apples, prunes, oranges, raisins, cots, canned fruits, and nuts. Exp of dried apples have increased $1,000,000 value in 1890 to $2,250,0 1900 and a little over $2,000,000 in apples, free and ripe, from less $1,250,000 in 1890 to $1,500,000 in 1900 $2,000,000 in 1910; apples as a w thus having from $3,000,000 to over 000,000 in 20 years. Oranges of do tic production increased in value o ports from $250,000 in 1900 to over 000,000 in 1910; dried apricots, $178,000 in 1902, the earliest yea which shown, to $1,000,000 in prunes, from $1,666,000 in 1900 to 000,000 in 1910; and canned fruits $666,000 dollars in 1890 to $3,000,0 1900, and less than $3,000,000 in 1910. exports of nuts was $28,000 in 1890 in 1900 were stated at only $15 compared with about $400,000 in year just ended. Of the latter peanuts is the chief factor, the ports in the last five years amo to nearly 30,000,000 pounds, value $1,233,000.

INTEREST IN NEW OIL FIELD.

Report Made on Toyah District in Texas.

July Operations in Eastern States Fall Off.

General News of Interest from Oil Fields.

There seems to be no doubt that the nding of oil in the Toyah district, ear El Paso, Tex., has caused some citement among the Lone Star operors. In the last number of the Ming World, Charles A. Dinsmore ha h article descriptive of the Toyah disict, which includes an interview with r. C. F. Z. Caracristi, who has made geological examination of the field.

In this interview Dr. Caracristi says: 'I am satisfied that the Toyah field a good one. I was the first one, in ct, to state publicly that the field was valuable one. I have the utmost conence in the field, but should not reict it to the name Toyah field, beuse the petroleum is found throught the region embraced by forming a adrangle with Blue Springs as the rtheast point; thence following the rra Guadaloupe to a point known as Capitan, a peak raising 9000 feet ove the sea level; thence east to the xas and Pacific Railway; thence ng this railway to Pecos City, and m there again to Blue Springs, N. In my opinion there is no petroleum derlying the heavy-bedded dark blue estone of the Guadalupe Mountains. The general dip from the Guadape Mountains is southeast, and subinate folds have been formed over e region, forming a series of pininas that are secondary to the genl uplift of the territory. The probaties are that petroleum will be found commercial quantities on Salt Flat, bably a part of Crow Flats and in Toyah Flats. People owning land in territory covered by the Toyah baand those having similar lands g Delaware Creek and along the as-New Mexico border, will have an ortunity not only of discovering peum, but also artesian water. For reason the drilling for petroleum is as risky as it is in other localities, use of the fact that, if the wells judiciously placed under expert ce, either petroleum or artesian s will be found, and the money exded in the drilling of wells will not lost to the operating companies; ided, of course, that these comes also own the surface rights to land.

ne of the crying needs is to have ilroad connecting El Paso directly Carlsbad or Roswell, N. M. Such ad would open up the extensive ur fields of the region; offer facilfor the development of petroleum; the world its largest deposits of gypsum of the finest grade, and give incentive to the development orticultural and agricultural purs."

HARVARD'S EXPERIENCE.

USE OF OIL AS FUEL.

rsons interested in the oil indusare pointing to the recent experiof the Harvard, of the Metropol-Steamship Line, as an important reason for the burning of oil as el by steamships. Fire destroyed pier of the Metropolitan Line in York a little while ago, and, acing to an official of the company, Harvard would have been a total had it not been for the fact that it able to get up steam within a te after the fire was discovered.

hen the alarm was given, the Hardid not have an ounce of steam r boilers, and was utterly at the y of the flames at that time. In t one minute her boilers were hot, in five minutes the vessel had a head of steam and was able to get ide the fire zone. The loss to the vard was less than $1000, consisting listered paint.

pany expects to bring in its well No. 6, in the Kern River field, within the next few days, the drill now being down 630 feet.

The 30,000-barrel storage tank on the company's section 30, Midway field, is nearly completed and two of smaller capacity are being set up. Eight cars of oil per day are now being shipped from the well, and the amount will soon be increased.

There are indications that the drill in the well on section 15 of the Consolidated Midway will strike oil sand sooner than was expected, probably within three weeks' time.

CONTROLLING GUSHERS.

COALINGA MAN'S DEVICE.

A. C. Mortensen of Coalinga has just invented a combination capper which, it is claimed, will work successfully in bringing under immediate control any oil or water gusher or gas well. It is along the line of a casing elevator in that is fits around the casing below the ring, and when set in this manner is screwed up, when it works automatically so that the more pressure there is against it the tighter it closes.

It will be combined as a casing head, and in this way a gusher can be brought under control and kept there without having to take off the combination capper. The inventor is having a model made at the Bunting Iron Works, and his papers have been sent on to Washington. Mortensen will make a thorough test of his device in the Midway field where gushers are rather plentiful this time of year.

Brad Gets a Gusher.

The Brad Oil Company, operating on the northwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 15-33-23, Midway, has completed its first well. It landed a ten-inch casing on a shell at 1900 feet, after going through forty-five feet of very lively oil sand. When the gates were opened the well was found to be in the gusher class. The bringing in of this well establishes another record for drilling time and for the length of twelve-inch and ten-inch casing used. A second well will be put down immediately. A. E. Harris, field superintendent for the Canadian-Pacific Oil Company, at Whittier, and F. M. Bradford have had charge of the Brad operations.

The Canadian-Pacific Buys.

The Canadian-Pacific Oil Company has just bought the lease of the Warner property at Whittier, paying $40,000 cash for the forty-acre lease, and has leased, with option to purchase at the same figure, forty acres from W. E. Savage in the same field. The recent purchase and lease of these properties gives the Canadian-Pacific Oil Company twenty producing wells and 100 acres in the very heart of the ven Whittier field. It is operating a standard rig on the Savage, and has developed a large body of productive oil sand at a comparatively shallow depth in a well located on the northeast corner of the Savage and adjoing the Warner Oil Company's forty cres. Heretofore there were no wells on this side of the Warner property, and the Savage well of the Canadian-Pacific has developed and proven its west side holdings. The northeast corner of its holding has produced to date nearly 400,000 barrels of oil. The Canadian-Pacific Oil Company has been paying regular dividends for the past three years. It is a California corporation, officered by Los Angeles men, cked largely by Canadian capital.

Doubt About the Diamonds.

The new reporter on the Centerville Times meant well, but he was not always careful in the wording of his sentences. When the father of Mrs. James Bowles appeared at his desk two days after the wedding, the reporter knew from the irate mein of his visitor that something had gone wrong.

"You are responsible, in the absence of your chief, for this report of my daughter's wedding," and Mr. Cobb tapped a paragraph in the paper published the night before.

"Yes sir, and I thought it was a mighty good send-off I gave them," said the reporter.

"You did, did you?" thundered Mr. Cobb. "Well, perhaps you will be kind enough to explain these words."

He pointed and following the compelling finger the reporter read:

"The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a brooch of rubies and diamonds, and there were many other beautiful things in cut glass on that table."—[Washington Star.

Raising Deer for Profit.

"The business of raising deer as a matter of profit may sound strange, but there are a number of people in various parts of the country who get lucrative returns from their herds," said W. G. Adams, of Washington, D. C. "A friend of mine began raising deer in the District of olumbia over thirty years ago, and has made money in their propagation. For his bucks he gets $50 each, and the does bring $75. Deer will eat almost any kind of grain or grass, even preferring the rankest weeds to the choicest hay. They should always have an abundant supply of clear, running water. About the greatest item of expense connected with raising deer is the cost of fencing. The fawns are usually born in the spring or early summer. Does, as a rule, have but one fawn at first, but subsequently twins are born, and in rare cases, triplets."—[Baltimore American.

TREE WEALTH IN SOUTHLAND.

New Lines Are Opening Up Vast Virgin Forests.

Mexico Presents Extremes of Wood Famine Problem.

Ebony Used for Fire Wood in State of Sinaloa.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 1.—The London Times, which in a lengthy article finds grounds for and against the forecast that the world will witness a timber famine within the next thirty years, could discover in Mexico data to support an argument, pro and con. Here, as elsewhere, increasing consumption and depleting supply is noted, with appalling losses suffered from fires and ruthless cutting, and withal, an inadequate system of reforestation enforced by the government, but there are also exhibits from A to Z in defense. On the other hand, Mexico has vast tracts of finest forest never even surveyed, and of unestimated footage. Choice hardwoods mature here more rapidly than in most other corners of the globe. There is a general awakening to the imperative importance of reforestation, the revival spreading especially among foreign investors, who are devoting to trees great estates that were quondam and primeval jungles. On the whole, as between the thirty-year pessimist and the no-time-limit optimist, the latter has the better of the outlook in Mexico.

Mahogany in New Forestry Region, along line of Pan-American Railway, Mexico.

Ties employed in the extension and betterment of the Pan-American Railroad, directly after the line passed to the control of David E. Thompson, retired American Ambassador to Mexico, were imported from California and other Pacific commonwealths of the United States. Only a few months later the Santa Fé Railroad closed a contract for fifty millions of ties and millions of mahogany logs from territory adjacent to the Pan-American, a virgin country opened by that line. The first shipment has been made, a cargo of 15,000 hardwood ties which was sent from Vera Cruz to Port Bolivar, Tex. Experiment has proved that ties from the Isthmus of Tehuantepec are more durable than any of the hardwood product of the United Sates, and henceforth many millions will be shipped annually. The supply within the radius tapped by the Pan-American and other Isthmian lines is incalculable at this time, since some of the densest forests have never been penetrated.

Extension of the Mexico Northwestern Railroad, familiarly known as the Dr. F. S. Pearson line, across the Sierra Madre to the Pacific will exploit vast tracts of fine timber which will be added to the forest holdings of the Pearson interests. All the Pearson mills in divers towns of the State of Chihuahua are running full capacity.

Three years' litigation between the William Randolph Hearst and the F. S. Pearson interests has been settled out of court, the Hearst crowd having made good its contention that the Pearson syndicate had encroached upon its timber preserves to the extent of 50,000 acres, and the Pearson company having been awarded the privilege to retain improvements made and to purchase the lands involved.

Ebony of the finest quality, purchased at $4, gold, per cord, is used in large quantities as firewood by various manufacturing plants of the State of Sinaloa, being about as good a steam producer per ton as coal. A proprietor of one of the foundries of that State has in his home a beautiful table that was fashioned from a log wrested from the wood pile at his plant. For years the mines and sugar factories of that domain have burned ebony, and uncounted additional acres of it have been opened by the extension of the Southern Pacific Railroad of Mexico, increasing the ruthless consumption. That road is using ebony ties. Quantities of mahogany, Spanish cedar and rosewood are destroyed as fuel.

Guerrero is one of the Mexico States virtually unscratched, from the timber standpoint. A new railroad that will build down the Balsas River from Balsas Station to the port of Zihuatanejo will tap a vast area of virgin forest, mostly oak of a cohesive strength greater than that of the Virginia product. There is also pitch pine trees that measure 75 to 100 feet to the first limb, and magnificent stands of soft white sugar pine. Cedar and mahogany are among the other species. The Mexican Pacific, another projected line, will penetrate a country to which hundreds of thousands of acres of untouched timber will ultimately become tributary. The Guerrero Mining and Milling Company, operating at Noxtepec, near Taxco, has bought 400 acres of timber near the diggings, oak predominating. This will be used in construction and as fuel.

It has just been discovered that there are vast forests of visnaga in Mexico, especially on the island of Santa Catarina, off the Pacific Coast. The trees are the largest of their kind known in the world, being fifty to sixty feet high and more than three feet in diameter. Visnaga is a light wood, too brittle for anything except the manufacture of toothpicks, but by virtue of its rarity and its adaptability to that form of manufacture it commands a high price.

The National Railways of Mexico owns an 18-000-acre nursery at Tampico, whence there has just been made a shipment of 400,000 eucalyptus, cedar and other trees which the railroad is distributing free among eighty-two different haciendas of the republic, the consignment going out in three special trains of seventy-five cars. The same trees will be bought at maturity by the National Railways of Mexico for ties and other purposes.

Arrest of several people has been ordered by authorities in the State of Hidalgo for wanton destruction of timber in the big Cahuehuete forest on the banks of the Tula River, and near the town of Tula. This and other States of the republic are taking vigorous steps toward the preservation of their timber wealth. Effective measures for protection from forest fires have been adopted by the State of Sonora since the disastrous conflagration in the Yaqui region of two months ago.

The manufacturers of lead pencils are finding it difficult to secure red cedar, and the old-fashioned red cedar rail fences of Middle Tennessee are being drawn upon for the supply. It is reported that these fences are about the sole remaining source from which to make the best grade of smooth whittling cedar pencil.

RUIN.

DESTRUCTION BY UNIONISM.

BUSINESS INTERESTS ARE ALWAYS THE SUFFERERS.

Peculiarity of the Union Quarrel With the the Otis Elevator Company—San Francisco's Depressed Industrial Condition the Result of Union Domination an Extortion.

The quarrel among the unionites of Chicago as to what union shall be recognized by the Otis Elevator Company is about the best evidence that the safety of an employer cannot rest upon unionism. For a long time certain unions have been making the elevator company trouble. One strike after another has been called upon buildings wherein elevators were being installed.

The quarrel does not involve the employment of union labor by the company, but is a quarrel between two unions as to which shall have the right to do a certain part of the work of installing the Otis elevators. The Otis Company has been notified by each union not to give the work to the other. No question of wages is involved. The work will be done by either the elevator constructors or by the machinists, and the determination of the unionites is that the company shall decide which one, and to compel the company to take this action a number of other union comprising more than twenty trades are to go on a sympathetic strike, and thus tie up construction work in the city, and thus disturb all kinds of business.

There is neither a promise nor a probability that the defeated union will accept the decision of the Otis Company, but will start a strike and thus keep building conditions in a continued turmoil. The situation is not a new one. Only a few months ago a strike occurred in Muncie, Ind., of precisely the same nature, growing out of the claims of rival street-car unions to the monopoly of the employment on the trolley lines. The upshot of that was the derangement of the business of the trolley lines as well as of every other kind of business, loss of employment, boycotting and violence, in which the public suffered the damage and footed the bills, just as it will in the Chicago case.

The fact is that unionism has gone wild. Every trade must have a separate union, and there must be no overlapping of employment—the members of one union shall not do any work belonging to another union. The employer must suffer in the quarrel, but the unions do not care. The success of a business interest does no count so long as a union may triumph, and the result of such triumphs is well expressed by the Portland Spectator in speaking about conditions in San Francisco. The Spectator says:

"Almost every line of industry has suffered from the dictation of the unions. Because of the demands of the labor agitators, the government allowed the ship builders of San Francisco more for constructing cruisers than the builders in the East received. This was made the excuse for extorting higher wages, and the extortion continued until with all the bonus the builders received they could not bid on the ships, as the item of wages made it impossible to secure the contracts. San Francisco's shipbuilding business has died; she hardly repairs a vessel; her other manufacturing industries have also suffered from the 'closed shop' blight. The city is on a sick bed suffering from the unionism that has dominated every line of effort and business from the pulpit to politics, and it will not stand erect again until the hands of the employé are taken from the throat and pocket of the employer, and the grafting, criminal union bands are driven from office."

The San Francisco News-Letter also adds its testimony, and says:

"Right in line with the above is the act of the Labor Council in issuing a letter placing the ban of the boycott on each and every box-making shop in San Francisco. All of the San Francisco box factories are 'open shop,' so the unions are advising the consumer not to patronize home industry, but to send to far-off Washington for 'knock down' boxes, and thus thousands more of dollars find their way out of San Francisco to other localities. It is only a question of time when the labor unions's way of testifying its love of home industry will reduce San Francisco to the standing of an agricultural village, with one blacksmith shop and a saloon. The open shop is the only thing that is now keeping things alive.

"The Labor Day parade, we are told, is to be a 'home industry' parade. Carrying a banner behind a blazing band, the poor fools will walk their legs off in an enthusiasm for home industry, while their leaders take their money and send it to other communities and advise business men to trade elsewhere. The labor leader 's always busy shearing some one, and it makes little difference to him if it is one of his own followers, providing the shearing yields long wool at a good price." and interesting fact about is that the precipitin in the serum of the blood of the humanised rabbit will not cause a cloudiness in diluted dog's blood, nor in that of cattle, sheep, or, in fact, in that of any other animals except man and his nearest "blood-relations" amongst animals, namely, the apes and monkeys. It is found possible to compare the degree of precipitation or cloudiness in different examples, and the result is firmly established that the blood of the chimpanzee and of the ourang-outang, when tested with the humanised precipitin holding rabbit's blood, gives a precipitate nearly as great as does that of man, whilst the common organ-grinder's monkey (the macaque) gives a good deal less, the South American monkeys (which differ in the number of their teeth and in their prehensile tails from man and the old-world monkeys) the merest traces, and the lemurs none at all!

Similar experiments have been made on a great variety of animals by Prof. Nuttall of Cambridge, who has published a book on the subject. Cat, lion, tiger, leopard, hyena, dog, wolf, seal, whale, pig, cattle, sheep, goat, antelope, camel, llama and their allies; also birds, reptiles, frogs and invertebrates have been tested. The general result is to show that a precipitin is produced when the blood or serum of one kind of animal is injected into a living individual of another kind. This individual may be called "the factory" or "factory animal," whilst the animal whose blood is introduced into the factory animal may be called "the infecting animal." The precipitin produced in the serum of the blood of a factory animal is found always to give a precipitate when added to diluted blood taken from specimens of the same species as the infecting animal, and to give a greater or less cloudiness in those kinds of animals zoologically allied to it, the quantity of deposit or cloudiness becoming less as we test kinds less closely related to the infecting species. Thus, when the cat is the infecting species (the rabbit being used as factory,) we find that the hyena, as well as the lion, tiger and other large and small cats, give a strong precipitate, whilst the dog and seal give very slight cloudiness. This agrees with the conclusion arrived at by a consideration of their structure, that the hyena is more closely related to the cats than to the dogs. The investigation has been varied by using other factory animals than the rabbit, and may yield further results as to the blood-relationships of animals.

It is well, perhaps, to point out that the word "immunity" in regard to disease, has been of late somewhat forced from its proper meaning. Under the one term are often included (1) absolute freedom from the attack of an injurious microbe, and (2) the very different conditions which are those of tolerating, or, again, of successfully combating an attack, so that the invaded animal may be said to be "immune" so far as death is the result held in view, but not immune so far as injurious temporary poisoning is concerned. For instance, every man is absolutely "immune" to the microbe which produces the fowl-cholera of chickens; it cannot even effect a lodgment in his body or begin to grow in him. On the other hand, negro children tolerate the presence and abundant multiplication in their blood of the microbe of malaria without suffering any illness; they become "reservoirs" or "reservoir hosts" of the malaria microbe, which they do not "repel," but "tolerate." A third variety of so-called "immunity" is that of a man inoculated against typhoid who is frequently not able to resist an attack of the disease, but is able—on account of the special powers of resistance conferred—to cope with it successfully, and recovers after a short illness. Obviously when we talk about "conferring immunity," or "natural immunity," we ought to use words which will distinguish between these three cnditions. The word "immune" originally signified exemption or freedom from service or duty to which others are liable.

LOOK OUT FOR METEORS.

Astronomers Declare They Are Fraging Comets.

If astronomical predictions are fulfilled there will be seen during this month and next dense crowds of meteors equal in luster to the brightest stars, darting from east to west across the sky, with enormous apparent velocities. They are said to be by the best astronomical authorities the dust of decaying comets.

Halley's comet has just passed out of our solar system, and has left in its wake a disintegrated tail from which fragments will revolve independently in parallel orbits, first as a swarm family, then developing into slower moving particles, similar to the August meteors that moved in the same orbit with the bright comet of 1862, thus verifying the prediction that the comet would appear under another form, that a star shower might have sprung and would commemorate its dissolution.

This month there is to be an active display from Aquarius, which, apparently, reaches its maximum from July 27 to 31, although the meteors may continue to fall from the same center during the first half of August. Many early Perseids are displayed this month, although the latter are a different class of meteors from the Aquarids.

Those which are directed from Perseus are of the swift streaking order, while those from Aquarius are of the slow trained variety, with long flights radiating from a low altitude.

This year astronomers say that both the Aquarids and Perseids may be observed to advantage, as the moon will offer little interference, as August 12, when we are led to expect the greatest abundance of meteors, the moon will set at 10:09 p.m., and leave us with the darkness of a starlight sky, a time in which meteors may be seen at their best.

What is required is a series of beautifully transparent skiesñ such as is often seen during the first half of August. Observers should seize such opportunities as are available and determine the place of the radiant and horary rate of meteoric apparitions on every clear night. The individual path of those meteors equal to or brighter than first magnitude stars should be carefully recorded.

The last five years have furnished average display of Perseids, and it is now the consensus of opinion from the leading astronomers of the world that there is some reason to expect a richer shower of midsummer meteors than there has been for many years.

They say that countless thousands of those meteors are but the minute fragments of the masses of decaying comets passing through our solar system, and when the earth encounters a swarm of these fragments a meteoric shower is produced, thus proving that a loosely agglomerated mass such as there is every reason to believe cometory nuclei to be, are but the aftermath of dying comets, of which science does not pretend to track their further wanderings through space.

he is familiar with every rock and rill. At the time of year when the excursion is to be made the weather will be much more comfortable than in midsummer. The nights in the Owens River Valley get to be sharp and bracing, while the days are warm. It is possible that some of the party will become so enthusiastic they will want to continue on up to the town of Bishop, where agricultural development has made no little progress. In that vicinity are a number of famous ranchos.

The invasion of the Owens River Valley by a long line of automobiles on an excursion, will be one of the impressive facts in modern development and progress. But a few years ago the Owens River Valley was hardly known in Los Angeles. When it was first mentioned as the source of a future water supply, there were many who had to consult maps to locate it. Now it is within two days' run of the city by motor. It was then a matter of a long and tiresome journey by stage, and only the desert wanderers and prospectors came in to any extent.

The excursion will be open to as many as can be provided for. It will be the first formal celebration of the building of the aqueduct, and as such is arousing a great deal of interest. According to Mr. Mulholland's estimates, it will precede the celebration of the opening of the aqueduct by little more than fifteen months.

INVESTMENTS.

MARKETING OF BOND ISSUES.

OVER A BILLION DOLLARS' WORTH ANNUALLY SOLD.

Technique of the Business of Underwriting Such Collateral—Work of Syndicates, and the Value of a Good Reputation to a Banking House.

The business of selling and distributing the great volume of bonds issued in this country every year is an important and interesting feature of commercial life. A writer in Moody's Magazine declares that the amount of such annual bond issues is from $1,000,000,000 to $1,500,000,000, par value.

Investors may get these bonds in two ways, by purchasing them on the stock exchange, or buying them directly from banking houses. Twenty-five times as many are sold in the latter way as in the former. The strongest of these private banking houses, associated with the largest national banks, form the class of great underwriters.

They may be considered wholesale dealers, each of them buying and selling annually from $100,000,000 to $300,000,000 worth of bonds. They act as fiscal agents of railway groups, and railroad issues constitute the greater part of the underwriting done by these houses; but they often bid for entire issues of municipal and State bonds or even large blocks of government bonds.

The retail dealers are more numerous. The more important of these latter banking houses buy and sell from $50,000,000 to $150,000,000 worth of bonds a year. Some of them deal exclusively in steam railway securities, others in electric railway or industrial issues. It is chiefly through these firms that the investing public is reached.

One of the most valuable assets is their list of customers. A million dollars would not purchase some of these lists. An offer of $25,000 was made not long ago by one firm for the return of a duplicate copy of its list which had been carried off by a former salesman.

There are in this country several hundred thousand persons of independent fortunes. Banking houses not only advertise extensively in an effort to reach these prospective investors, but many of them have traveling salesmen. Within the house itself elaborate systems have been developed. Information in regard to securities is catalogued and indexed.

Because of the high reputation that these bond houses have established they enjoy the absolute confidence of hundreds of investors, many of whom have not the time or facilities to study the investment value of a security. Indeed if they had they could not arrive at any sound conclusion because of a limited understanding of the subject. The fact is that fully 75 per cent of the customers of these bond houses purchase securities largely on the recommendation of the house because of its character.

The organization of all bond houses is similar. In a general way it comprises three departments, known as the buying, selling and financial departments. To the first is delegated the duties of analysis of securities offered the house. Critical points must be investigated, whether railway, industrial or municipal bonds are in question.

Upon the selling department obviously devolves the responsibility of marketing the issue. It must know almost immediately about when or where the securities may be disposed of. The training of the managers of these departments enables them to form quick judgments on these points. It is in this department that the selling literature so broadly advertised and distributed is prepared.

The financial department assumes all duties not specially delegated elsewhere. Its operations involve the relations of the house with its lenders, who are the banks and also some private individuals. When the credit of the house is of a high type it is comparatively easy to procure vast amounts of money by giving as collateral the bonds purchased. The bonds of course drawing interest practically always, return more than the cost of the borrowed money in the market, and from this source alone rises substantial profits when operations are conducted judiciously.

The nature of its collateral enables a bond house to borrow money to greater advantage than under other circumstances. Numbers of these bond houses in addition to establishing intimate connections with financial institutions at home develop relations with foreign markets through some foreign bank. In this way they are enabled to borrow to advantage in a foreign market if money rates at that point are lower than at home.

In addition to these purely financial functions of this department it has the administration of the house in its charge. There is of course the greatest possible co-operation between all departments. An issue of bonds is not bought until the selling and financial departments have passed judgment as to their ability to sell and to borrow upon. That a bond that is bought with discrimination and at a good price is practically sold is the judgment of many houses.

The distribution of securities is often accomplished through syndicate operations. It will be noticed that in the case of many large issues that are advertised several firms, even of the strongest type, are indicated as offering the bonds. Any one of these houses could if it chose, care for the whole amount, yet it is associated with two or more others.

The governing motive in these syndicate formations is not fear as to the soundness of securities but the possibility of not being able to dispose of them as readily as expected. Sometimes each of the participating bankers forms a sub-syndicate in order further to minimise the risk. This is composed of individuals of wealth, men who can command capital, trust companies, banks and smaller bond dealers. Theirs is the task of final distribution to private investors.

If the issue promises to yield considerable profit this sub-syndicate will not be large. A very limited group may conduct operations without any formal document of agreement. But it is the custom to have written record of the conditions and terms.

This is known as the syndicate agreement. The management of the syndicate is generally the work of the bankers, but it is expected that all the members will work to dispose of the securities. When the syndicate is closed the unsold portion of the issue, if there is any, is pro rated among the members.

For the assumption of risks and the exertion of their influence the bankers demand and recieve a substantial reward. It has come to be recognised that commissions must be paid to the bankers. In consideration of this the bankers loan their credit and reputation by placing the bonds directly or indirectly with the public.

The price at which a corporation sells its bonds to bankers is of course a matter between the house and the company. They may get five point profit, although on high grade securities this is not usual. If the bankers make two points and the syndicate as much it would be considered good. A strong company and a strong banking house means fair commissions; a weak company with the same house would produce more profit.

One variation of underwriting is to undertake the disposition of a block of bonds without actually purchasing them and to pay over to the company the proceeds of only those as are sold. The purchase price, of course, is stipulated and the bond house may obtain profits varing with the success of the salesmen or the locality where sold.

From the facts stated it may be readily appreciated that the reputation of a banking house is to be most jealously guarded as the foundation for a long and successful existence. Many of the large and strong houses make it a boast that no investor has lost money or been led into poorly judged investments on their recommendation. And a further boast with some is that no issue ever sold through them has defaulted on a single coupon.

Under such conditions it does not excite wonder that such great amounts of securities are floated with such comparitive ease. The facilities which corporations enjoy in raising new capital and the sense of security that the investor has by relying upon these strong banking institutions are full justifications for their profits.

Good Trade This Fall.

Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, says in reference to the steel trade: "I am not a rampant optimist, neither am I a pessimist. I am taking a conservative view of the situation. While there has been a falling off in orders over the last several months in steel as well as other branches of business, I look for a spirited revival in steel in the fall. It will follow assurances of substantial crops. The country is on a solid foundation, and business will become stronger with the gradual restoration of confidence, the basis for which will be good crops. Orders already booked assure fair operations for the steel mills through the summer months."

Rules of the Road for Aeroplanes.

American aviators will study with interest a set of rules governing flights drawn up by the Aëro Club of France and submitted to the French government as the basis of a law. For the protection of aviators it is recommended that owners of high buildings and other structures be required to illuminate their property at night at each level of 250 feet; that electric wires and conduits strung above 120 feet from the ground be marked each 600 feet with a white flag by day and a white light by night.

Aëroplanes and dirigible balloons, it is suggested, should keep at least 150 feet distance from spherical balloons, so that explosions or other accidents to dirigible machines may not endanger the spherical airships.

Following are some of the club's other suggestions:

Aërial craft, whether aëroplane or dirigible balloon, must not circulate lower than 150 feet above private property.

Flying above cities requires a permit from the municipalities.

Flying in fog is not allowed.

Transportation of explosives except for hunting ammunition is prohibited.

The fixing of routes is recommended as a way of avoiding collisions.

M. S. CHENOWETH, M.D.
THE MASTER SPECIALIST.

The photograph which I publish above is one taken of me in May, 1910, and is a perfect likeness. I do not hide under a false name, nor publish a false picture, nor make a false statement of any kind. I personally conduct my own office, see my patients, and treat them personally from the time they come to me until I discharge them as cured. I have no incompetent assistant to treat my patients after their first visit. It is important for the patient to know these facts, for no matter how much a specialist may know he cannot delegate this knowledge to any one nor can any other doctor do things exactly as he does. This has been my experience, and I do not permit anyone but myself to treat my patients at any time, for I feel that the man who comes to me for treatment is entitled and should receive my personal attention and should not be experimented upon. A mere statement by me or any other specialist that I am, or he is, the greatest specialist of the age does not mean anything if it is not backed up by years of experience, and this experience must be the right kind of experience. Fifty years of experience, if it was not the right kind of experience, would not be of any value to a doctor, and less value to a patient, for if you do a thing wrong, or with no success, the number of times you do it only makes you a greater menace to those who are suffering and who unfortunately come to you for advice and treatment. Do not take for granted the self-praise of any specialist, but investigate for yourself and satisfy yourself that he is all he claims to be. Do this before you begin treatment, and not after, when it is too late, and the harm has been done. Learn the truth first and save yourself the bitter disappointment that surely will come to you after you have been humbugged by so-called specialists and left in a condition far worse than when you began your treatment.

WHO IS DR. CHENOWETH?

I am the oldest licensed and longest established specialist in California. I am a graduate of one of the largest medical Colleges in the United States. I was physician in outdoor clinic, St. John's Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., 1888-1889, and railway surgeon on Harriman lines of Colorado for four years. Member of American Medical Society six years, and the author and publisher of medical works of recognized authority. My years of experience, the right kind of experience, together with the cures I have effected, has earned me the title, The Master Specialist.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

Before beginning treatment elsewhere take my friendly advice and ask the doctor to tell you of his qualifications to cure you, and then be sure he shows you the proofs of his ability. Mere talk means nothing; promises and guarantees without ability behind them are of no value to you or any one else. After you are satisfied and begin your treatment it is up to you to see the promises are carried out. If you should be unfortunate enough to select the wrong doctor and find it out in time, come to me and I will be glad to do all that can be done for you.

I will cheerfully donate $1000 to any charity if any statement in this announcement is not absolutely true.

MANY CASES PERMANENTLY CURED IN ONE TREATMENT.

It may seem strange to you that I am able to cure these cases in one treatment while so many other doctors treat them for days, weeks and months, and even then without effecting a cure. My large and special experience along these lines has fitted me to do this work without resorting to experiment and the hundreds of cures I have effected are the best proof of my ability to do just as I claim. I know just what is to be done in each case, and lose no time in doing it. You do not suffer any pain or lose time, and can keep right on attending to your business without the slightest inconvenience. My cures are not only for the time being, but I guarantee them to be permanent.

Just think what it means to you. Think of the time and worry you save. It's the greatest thing in the world. To the man who has been calling on his doctor for weeks and months and has not been cured I make a special appeal to lose no time in calling on me. To each caller I cheerfully explain my method of curing Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins and Hernia. It is so simple, so positive, so easily demonstrated that you will gladly take my treatment, fully convinced that I will permanently cure you.

PILES.

Piles are common among all classes and ages of men and women. They are indirectly caused by a defect in nutrition and constipation. If anything tends to make life a burden it's a well developed case of Piles. The whole system is thrown out of working order, and the pleasures of life are denied to the sufferer. My method cures the most obstinate case without pain. I do not use a knife; there is no cutting, no pain of any kind; no after inconvenience but immediate relief and a permanent cure. Most of my cases have come to me after other specialists and drug store doctors have failed, and I have yet to treat a case I did not cure.

FISTULA.

There is no more annoying and dreaded disease of the rectum than Fistula. It requires the strictest observance of almost impossible hygienic laws to maintain cleanliness and may result fatally if neglected. Only a few days under my treatment and the worst case of Fistula is cured. No knife; no bleeding; no pain; no after misery; just a permanent cure.

HERNIA.

Hernia or Rupture. This is a condition which does not permit neglect. You cannot afford to be used as an experiment, and you will be, unless you choose the right specialist. Neglect of Rupture has proved fatal to many; neglect may cause strangulation, and if this occurs surgical relief is the only means of saving life and in most cases proves fatal. My treatment cures in a few days. You leave my office knowing you are going to get well. I do not use a knife; there is no pain, no detention from pleasure or occupation. Absolutely no danger. You come to my office wearing a truss; you leave your truss behind; there is no further use for it; your Rupture is cured.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Varicose veins do more to destroy human vitality than many other diseases put together. They sap up the strength of the body. You come to my office with your varicose veins and you leave absolutely well. Only a few days' treatment is all that is necessary. Not weeks nor months of endless doctoring, but in many cases one single visit. I permanently cure you without the loss of time, no pain whatever and no after trouble.

CONSTIPATION.

Constipation is the mother of most of these diseases. The clogging up of the bowels is the beginning, then comes depression, and indisposition to do anything; headache, backache and all other aches. Drug store remedies may give temporary relief, but why take medicine all your life just to get relief when my treatment cures constipation forever? Neglect gives birth to Piles, Fistula and so many other diseases that it is hard to tell of them all. My treatment permanently cures. It is a blessing to suffering mankind.

I guarantee to cure these diseases just as I say I do, or refund every dollar paid to me. If I fail, the fault is mine, not yours. Why should you pay? I have no home treatment; I do not treat by mail. All patients must come to the office for treatment.

Free Consultation and Advice

I offer not only FREE Consultation and Advice, but of every case that comes to me I will make a Careful Examination and Diagnosis without charge. Ailing persons should not neglect this opportunity to get expert opinion about their trouble. My offices are open all day from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sundays from 10 to 12.

SANTA MONICA, A CITY OF BEAUTIFUL HOMES.

Era of Building.

The homes of Southern California constitute one of the features of life here that appeals most surely to the visitors from environments colder and more formal in both climate and architecture. Among the beautiful homes of the seashore, Santa Monica has more than its proportionate share. Mansions, villas, bungalows and cottages of similar designs may be found elsewhere, but in Santa Monica they have the advantage of commanding location, the crest of the Palisades, the rim of the cañon, the slopes of the mountains and everywhere the wonderful sweep of crescent bay for an outlook. The recent building movement has maintained a standard that will make Santa Monica one of the show cities of the Pacific Coast.

Many old residents of Los Angeles, who think they know Santa Monica, would be astounded by a day's drive through the new city that is building. From Brentwood Park on the far northeast to Pier avenue on the south, there is an era of building and improvement that is working a transformation in the mother of beaches. The municipality has a magnificent area and is now engaged in making it all into city.

Leaving the center of Santa Monica for a drive along the cliffs, the first of the imposing homes is that of Senator Jones, a landmark of the older Santa Monica. Surrounded by spacious lawns and hidden by semi-tropic trees and shrubbery, it is one of the few points at which the wealth of Southern California vegetation and productiveness comes into touch with the sea.

COMMANDING THE SEA.

Property has become valuable along
e ocean frontage of the Palisades, it there is still room for such a row dwellings as attracts attention to asadena's Orange Grove avenue, and e start that has been made promises omes rich in architecture and well set by gardens and grounds. B. Nebecations on the coast, occupying a d down the coast. The building oc-pies a large corner, having a double ontage with corner entrance. Above e two stories of entrance salon and aded with pergola and vines, and ofring glimpses of sea and mountains

ngement of garage and inner garden.

en more attractive than that from Turning away from the sea along the n of Santa Monica Cañon there ap-ars a cluster of small cottages some tance back, nestling against the l like the homes of seabirds. On arer approach they become more im-sing in themselves, although the im-nsity of all their surroundings conually minimizes their importance.

o of them especially are typical of cosy, homelike, comfortable style
California architecture. They are residences of R. C. Gillis and H.
Gorham. Mr. Gillis has brought toher some attractive ideas from various quarters. There is a sheltered porch with white pillars that suggests the comforts of Virginia colonial homes. A brick walled garden with rose arbors and lily pond suggests the French Chateau. There is the intimate touch of house and garden, the windows opening into rose bushes, the sense of living close to the earth that belongs to the California bungalow.

COSY PATIO AND GARDEN.

Mr. Gorham's house across the way is a combination of the California mission with the Italian villa style of building. The spacious patio garden walled in is its most attractive point of view. On one side of the patio is a comfortable porch, covered with a projection of the roof, and on the other an open garden and sun porch. The exterior rooms of this house are furnished as comfortably as the interior. A sea breeze broken by the wall and sweetened by the flowers that clamber over it steals gently around the corner of the house and makes the patio a place "to loaf and invite the soul."

The people who are building Brentwood Park are keeping the future Southern California in sight. There has been little disposition to boom this attractive slope on the hillsides above the sea, but the improvements are all of a substantial character. The suburb appeals to those who tire of the practical commonplace way of building city homes in long, straight rows. Here are winding roads with parks and flower beds breaking in at all the angles and circles. Dr. Herman Janss has just completed a residence and is now working on a Japanese garden that will become famous. In a comparatively small space his Japanese gardener is building a park that will contain everything — mountains, lakes, rivers, bridges, pagodas, tea rooms, lily ponds, fountains—all that goes to make up the best and biggest of parks.

PALATIAL HOME.

F. C. Paulin has one of the finest residences of the West in a commanding part of Brentwood Park. His home is palatial and his grounds are spacious enough to give it the requisite setting. In a land of scenic marvels Brentwood has one of the favorite locations. The row upon row of Santa Monica Mountain ridges with blue and purple haze marking the cañons between, the green valley below, the wide Pacific with its gorgeous sunsets on one hand and the high Sierras in the distance on the other give it a wonderful outlook for beauty and variety of scenery.

These are but a few examples of the type of homes now building in Santa Monica. The heart of the city will be transformed when the old Arcadia grounds, the site of the Crystal Plunge, and the ocean frontage as far south as Hollister avenue, is transformed by the building of elegant homes into a beautiful seaside park. Hundreds of pretty bungalows and smaller homes have been built on the wide boulevards and avenues of the city within the past few years. Santa Monica is holding the ambition of becoming distinctively the City of Seaside Homes.

CITRUS CONVENTION.

Growers to Meet at Pomona.

Preliminary work has been done upon an order of business for the State Convention of Citrus Fruit Growers which is to be held at Pomona on the 13th and 14th of September. It will be held under the direction of the State Commission of Horticulture, and if possible the proceedings will be published in the usual form for State conventions of this character. An attempt will be made to have in attendance Federal and university experts upon plant-life, and also practical growers who have given definite attention to present orchard conditions, and men who have had wide opportunities of observing the present status of the citrus fruit groves of the State. No doubt arrangements will be made for reduced rates upon all the railroads leading to Pomona. The people of that city have already made arrangements for this conference, which promises to be one of the largest meetings ever held in the south.

Broadly speaking, the discussion at this conference will be confined to the physical condition of our citrus fruit groves, eliminating as far as possible the effects of insect pests and considering questions relating to plant physiology, pathology and botany and their correlatives of plant propagation, varieties, soil physics, active diseases and decadence of citrus trees from climatic and other ulterior causes.

In many of our citrus groves deterioration has been expressing itself in barrenness, in lack of health and vigor and in poor quality of fruit. The problems involved in these effects are of great obscurity; they are found in every locality in the State; if they are not met with wisdom and understanding the citrus fruit business cannot remain prosperous or our land values be maintained. It will be the business of the coming conference to get together the sum of the views and experiences of trained observers, scientific investigators and practical growers, and to unite in business-like council the factors able to solve these obscure problems or at least able to provide some plan for their solution. To do this the order of business and the discusion will be directed toward results, and the elimination attempted of all matters that may be narrow or valueless in their application or whose consideration would lead to no definite results.

As soon as the order of business is prepared a more complete prospectus of the conference will be published. Men of definite views, of valuable experience and of capacity to clarify and determine will be expected to make this meeting a success and a large and helpful convention will assemble to consider the problems now confronting some of our best citrus fruit centers. All citrus fruit associations and independent shippers should take official action in favor of this conference, and send delegates to properly represent them. Every citrus fruit grower is urged to attend.

NEW BANK EMPLOYEE.

Business Woman Placed in Charge of Getting Women's Accounts—Calls on Ladies.

One of the new departures in banking methods is the bid that is made for women's accounts. City banks have had a department for women for some time, but only lately have country banks and trust companies taken hold of the plan.

The women's department of the Portland Trust Company of Oregon was established something over three years ago. It is really a branch of the advertising or publicity work, proceeding upon the lines of popularizing the bank and making it the subject of conversation among the women of the city.

A competent business woman is in charge as superintendent of this department, says System. Every accommodation and courtesy is extended to women patrons in the way of explaining matters of business with which they are unfamiliar, assisting them in the preparatin of checks, drafts and other papers, when they open an account.

In this way they soon learn how to transact all ordinary matters of business for themselves, and the feeling of satisfaction that arises in each woman's mind when she finds that she is no longer dependent upon her male relatives in this respect makes each and every one of them a good friend of the bank and an earnest advocate for the extension of its business among other women.

In addition to her duties in the bank the superintendent makes frequent calls upon women whose business it is desirable to obtain and also extends assistance to those who may need it. If, for example, one of the bank's clients or a stranger is ill and desires advice or assistance in the preparation of any paper or in the handling of any business, the superintendent waits upon her at her home and spends as much time as may be necessary in aiding her. In this way some very desirable results have been gained.

Another means of securing business is that of having an occasional lecture given by the superintendent before women's clubs or organizations of different kinds; this is fruitful of good results.

DEATH'S LURE IN THE AIR.

Aeroplaning Classed as the Most Dangerous of Sports—Secret Risks in Flying.

However cold and unsympathetic the statement may seem, it is only the literal truth to say that every persistent navigator of an aëroplane is absolutely certain of death in the course of time if he keeps at the sport. Man has solved a part, but not all, the mystery of the air. It still holds secrets that are beyond human ken, and until they are more fully known the best of aviators will continue to move hand in hand with death every time a flight is made.

Greatest of these secrets is that which relates to the flight of an aëroplane of such substantial construction that it will not buckle and break under the influence of a mere zephyr of the air. Nothing more fragile than the aëroplanes with which such startling feats have been accomplished during the past few months has ever been used as a vehicle of locomotion. It is as insubstantial almost as a toy borrowed from a kindergarten.

Perhaps experience will bring improved construction to diminish the danger. For the present, however, aëroplaning must be classed as the most hazardous of sports, and week by week there is bound to be a regular toll of death.—[St. Louis Republic.

Former Des Moin
Man Strikes It

MAKES ONE HUNDRED THOUSAN

State Senator James E. Bruce Has Personal of the Facts.

In the month of January last a former well known business man in the city of Des Moines, Ia., who was twenty years ago the equal of the best in the financial and business circles of the city, was helped off from one of the morning's trains on the Rock Island from the east in a truly pitiable and deplorable condition. He was sick unto death," and wandered about the streets and in the saloons of Des Moines until he was finally landed in a hotel, where his identity was discovered. Friends were sent for; a prominent and leading physician of the city was called to see him at the hotel, and after examination, pronounced his case hopeless and advised that he be taken to a hospital at once. His friend fortunately had heard of the Neal Drink Habit Cure, and as a last resort, and as he said, "With but little hope of success" took him to the Neal Institute at 802 Fifth street in that city about midnight on Sunday night. This man had been a continuous drinker for many weeks and months, and was so bad that he actually had no recollection to this day of where he came from or why he came to Des Moines or of anything that transpired after he had been at the Institute under treatment for about twelve hours. Remarkable to state, this man was perfectly—yes, almost miraculously cured in just three days' time, and on the following Saturday, Senator Bruce met him by appointment, recognized his remarkable ability, and put him to work at once on a salary that but few men command today in the state of Iowa, as an assistant to him in the extension and territorial department of the work of the Neal Cure, which today covers the country from ocean to ocean and from the lakes to the gulf. Notwithstanding the fact that this man was "down and out" financially, physically, mentally and every other way, the Neal Cure placed him back to that splendid manhood which was his prior to his capture by old General Demon Drink. In this condition no salary could retain his services and time, and he returned to an eastern city, the scene of his former brilliant accomplishments, and downfall through drink, where he has already taken his place among the brainy men and financial giants of that great city.

The works contain a glass-smelting furnace, glass-tempering furnaces, and two cooling furnaces, fired with generating gas, and connected with a chimney ninety-eight feet high.

Mussel-Shell Industry.

The fresh-water shell supply of the South is becoming one of the South's great raw material resources. About 70,000 tons of shells are annually used in the manufacture of staple products, and of this quantity the South is now supplying a very large proportion. Thousands of tons of mussel shells are now being shipped to northern and eastern factories and to Germany, at a value on the river bank at from $4 to $15 per ton. Every ton of these shells may be turned into finished product at a value of not less than $150.

Drouth-Resisting Corn.

The botanical department of the Kansas State Agricultural College is experimenting in the production of drouth-resisting corn. About a dozen varieties of western corn which have originated in various places in the dry western counties of Kansas are being used as stock for the experiment. These are now being close pollenated to insure their purity in future breeding work. In addition, crosses are to be made this summer between the Western Dent varieties and an extraordinary variety of Chinese corn obtained by Prof. Roberts from the United States Department of Agriculture. This corn has singular drouth resistant characteristics which anable it to grow and make a crop where all other varieties fail. The grain of the Chinese corn is inferior, but the effort is being made to combine the drouth resistant characteristics of the Chinese corn with the grain quality of the Western Dent varieties by crossing.

Rev. Dr. Hinckley G. Mitchell, the one victim of Heresy-Hunter Cooke's bow and spear, has received a unanimous election to the chair of Hebrew and Old Testament literature in the Tufts Divinity School.

ANOTHER DEFEAT.

BUILDING TRADES STRIKERS BEATEN IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Contractors Take Heart from Los Angeles and Band Together for Protection Against the Extortions of the Unionites—Suspicious About Funds Contributed for Los Angeles—Oh, Oh, Pinhead's "Scab" Tobacco.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.—The so-called strike of the iron workers in Los Angeles is apparently forgotten by the trade-unionists here, so engrossed have they been in caring for the situation which has arisen as the result of the strike of the hod carriers here for an eight-hour day.

There were some 5000 building mechanics out of work as a result of the hod carriers' strike, and it took all the time, energy and money that the unionists could muster to straighten out the tangle without giving any attention to the wage earners in Los Angeles, who were foolish enough to quit work at the suggestion of the labor agitators here, relying upon their promises to furnish them with food, clothing and shelter, and in the end recognition of the union by their employers.

Two hundred buildings were tied up as a result of the war precipitated by the hod carriers. The contractors stood to lose large sums, in addition to the loss of wages by the men. Mayor McCarthy endeavored to make light of it all; but the employers would not look at it that way; they made a determined resistance and won. The strike is over, and the strikers have abandoned their demands.

The building contractors, including even the California Metal Trades' Association, have banded together for their own protection against the unjust demands of the unions. They take the stand that heretofore they have always backed down, but that a halt must be called some time, and there is no time like the present.

The hod carriers, backed up by the Building Trades' Council, were demanding a reduction of one-half hour in their working day. The building contractors say this is equivalent to an increase in wages, as it means the employing of an additional crew of hod carriers, and as they are now receiving an average daily wage of $4.50, the contractors refused their demands and won the fight.

LABOR COUNCIL'S MISSTEP.

Driven to desperation by the refusal of many of the unions here to contribute to the Los Angeles strikers, the Labor Council last week invited all unions having failed to "come through with the coin" to withdraw from the council, as that organization no longer cared to associate with that brand of trade unionists. This was paramount to suicide on the part of the Labor Council, as it will cause some twenty or more of the oldest and strongest unions in the city to sever their connection with the central labor body.

Of course such action was intended to "bluff" the unions into paying the assessment, but it had the opposite effect. Indignation is rife among unionists here over the action of the council, and instead of these unions being "bullied" into paying the assessment they are preparing to obey the order of the council and sever their affiliation with that body. Other unions are preparing to follow suit and many here predict the dissolution of the council.

SUSPICIOUS.

General dissatisfaction is expressed among the laborites over the manner in which the Los Angeles strike committee here is handling the funds. It has been announced from time to time that so many thousands of dollars have been sent each week to Los Angeles; but who got the money, or what it was spent for, or how much strike benefit was paid the men in Los Angeles the members of the committee have thus far failed to state. This is another thing that is causing the "men at the helm" considerable anxiety together with the pressing demands being made by the unions on strike here for financial assistance. This has caused them to determine to look elsewhere for the money, without which these "noble labor leaders would cease their efforts in behalf of the downtrodden," and they have authorized that great financier, Olaf Tveitmoe, for ten years secretary-treasurer of the State Building Trades Council, and Andrew J. Gallagher, former prize fighter, now "labor leader" and secretary of the Labor Council, to tour the State and visit all unions "demanding" that they contribute money to help their "brothers in bondage" in Los Angeles.

What Gallagher and Tveitmoe will receive for their services, or what sum will be set aside for their traveling expenses, has not been made public, but it is safe to say that it will be a sum sufficient to keep a number of families from want for many a long day. That they will be successful in raking in the golden sheckels is very doubtful, as it is the general feeling here that the unions throughout the State have been taxed to the limit, and that it will take but little to cause them to kick over the traces as they are doing in this city.

UNION'S WOMAN WORKER.

Funny, is it not, that San Francisco, the "strongest union city in the United States," must needs send to Los Angeles, that "awful scab town," and import a woman to arouse an interest in union label goods? But it is a fact. The woman was Mrs. Herminia Howe. She came here and taught, or tried to teach, trade unionists of long standing that they should purchase union made goods. "Look for the label," was what she told them, but it is to be hoped that she did not know what an awful mess she was stirring up. People began to look for the label on everything. They even began to examine one another's clothes and other things. And then something dreaful happened. It was discovered that the Hon. Patrick Henry McCarthy, Mayor of San Francisco, and among union labor men "the noblest Roman of them all," was using "scab" tobacco. Goodness! but there was an awful howl. Then it was found that Olaf Tveitmoe, president of the Asiatic Exclusion League, and "Teddy" Yoell, secretary of the same organization, both union men, were drinking beer and whisky served by "scab" bartenders in Flannery's "booze joint"—the same Flannery who recently resigned as president of Mayor McCarthy's Board of Police Commissioners. Then it was discovered that about 50 per cent. of the delegates to the Labor Council and the Building Trades Council could not show the union label on any of their wearing apparel, and that there were about half the delegates smoking non-union tobacco. It raised an awful storm, and when the clouds had blown over Mrs. Howe had flown back to Los Angeles where it is to be hoped the people are at least consistent.

OF COURSE.

The papers here have made much of the fact that P. H. McCarthy was this week unanimously reëlected president of the Building Trades Council. Of course he was. There was not a delegate brave enough to vote against him. Mac rules as a Czar over the council, even though he has not attended a meeting for nearly three months, and any one who dares oppose him is marked for slaughter.

In this connection it might be stated that McCarthy has mingled with the labor people but little since his elevation to the office of Mayor. He hobnobs with the gentry, and his disciples don't like it.

The strike committee here had set August 8 as the date when active preparations should begin to vote Los Angeles "dry," but since the brewery workers' union here exposed the little bluff by announcing that their organizations were opposed to prohibition in Los Angeles or anywhere else, the plans of the committee are up in the air. By the way, the man who made that statement and called their bluff will have to answer to the committee for his action. Sentence, however, has been deferred, and Emil Muri still walks the streets a free man, and laughs at the idea that Los Angeles will ever be a "dry" town.

Carpenters in Alameda county this week made a demand for $5 a day. They were getting, or claimed they were getting, $4 a day, and they wanted the same as the union carpenters were receiving in San Francisco. They may get it. But what a surprise it will be when they are handed $3 a day for their work, for that, it is claimed by the contractors, is the wage paid the average union carpenter in San Francisco, although they boast that they are being paid the schedule, $5 a day.

New Kinds of Farming.

UNCLE SAM IS GROWING SPONGES, AND MASSACHUSETTS GROWS FLIES—SOME FARMERS GROW BACTERIA.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

FOR the uninformed and unimaginative who hold that there is nothing of the fanciful about the gentle art of farming, the alarm of a rude awakening should be set. There are farmers who plant bugs to grow in the ground and then put these bugs to work for them. There are farmers whose crops are alligators, rattlesnakes, and even the odorous skunk. There are farmers who go forth with a burning torch to feed the cows by singeing thorns from the prickly pear. There are farmers on the tops of New York's high skyscrapers and mushroom growers in her basements. There are farmers whose crops are regularly planted on the bottom of the ocean and whose crops are sponges. The housewife is farming germs by the million when she puts her bread to rise. The State of Massachusetts is raising hordes of flies to sting the caterpillar that is devouring her trees. The Department of Agriculture states that rat farming might be made a profitable industry and that the silver fox lends itself to husbandry. Deer and buffalo and hippopotami are money makers for the farmer and the Japanese pheasant is being farmed for the sportsman's pleasure. Jimpson-weed may be raised at a profit for the brewing of drugs and a woman in California sells the seed at $200 an ounce. The freak stunts are without end but here is the detail of a few of them.

The only submarine farm in existance is operated by Uncle Sam and its product is the festive sponge. The old gentleman has a big and profitable farm at Biscayne, Fla. There he sets about showing his sponge fishermen that they should be sponge farmers and thus put the business on a mores table foundation. As it is they are denuding the sponge grounds and thereby killing the goose of the golden egg. Which means, waiving the allegory, that they are harvesting a small sponge that would have been ten times as big if left to grow for three years, and would have left the seed for a score of young sponges.

Uncle Sam is showing the sponge men that a big sponge may be cut up into small pieces, that these may be judiciously planted and that as a result of this planting there will soon be a hundred sponges in its place.

Uncle planted an acre of sponges at an expense of $133. In four years he harvested the crop of the successful acre and the returns amounted to $968. In the meantime there were no weeds to hoe, no furrows to plow, no smudges to set in the orchard to keep away the frosts. It is a panacea for the lazy man if he can but work up a spirit of speed once in four years. The remainder of the time may be spent under the spreading banyan tree waiting for the harvest. If he plants a hundred acres once in four years he will have $84,500 to spend between crops.

The government is experimenting on various methods of artificially growing sponges. They are trying stringing the small ones on a wire like clothes on a line and putting it out to sea for years and pulling it in. They are trying planting them on a peg set in a cement triangle and placing this on the bottom of the sea. Then the sponge grows larger and rounder every year until it is eight inches through and is taken up looking like a round Japanese ornament tree in a landscape garden. This is so far the method that is yielding best returns. The government believes in its new method of farming on the floor of the ocean and is urging its citizens to get in on the ground floor.

The muskrat farms of Dorchester county, Maryland, yield $100,000 annually. Muskrat land in that section was formerly worth 40 cents an acre and is now valued at $20. Skins that we sold for five cents, when boys, are now worth a dollar. The great majority of the sealskin coats worn by my lady of fashion are the product of the humble black muskrat.

Wherever a man has a piece of marsh land he should introduce the muskrat and realize upon it. If he has become discouraged with the fish-pond he experimented with some years ago, he should put muskrats in it and grow wealthy. If he has a plot of back yard he has but to introduce a pair of muskrats and lo! in a few months the place will be alive with them. Any of the bulky plants that grow in the waters roundabout are food for the creatures and they multiply prodigiously. A pair in the spring will be a hundred in the winter and there will be a multitude next season.

The fur bearing animals are being extinguished, but the mink and the muskrat remain in abundance. Five million of the latter find their way into London every season. The Cedar Point Hunting Club of Toledo, O., took 5,000 muskrats on its preserve in a single month last year. The muskrat itself is becoming popular in the market as a food, being equal to rabbit or squirrel. There is not a piece of marsh land in the country that could not be turned into a producer through the breeding of these creatures. The owners of marsh lands around Baltimore, which is the American center for muskrat production, are getting returns from those lands that were never thought possible. The Department of Agriculture vouches for the soundness of the basis upon which the business is being placed and advises its extension.

Wherever farmers grow legumes, that family of plants represented best by clover and alfalfa, they must grow bugs first. There must be a certain small kind of bacteria in the soil before the legumes will live. When clover was first introduced into the South it refused to grow. When alfalfa was first taken to the State of Washington it did likewise. The book farmer found the reason. The needed bacteria were absent from the soil.

These bacteria attach themselves to the roots of the legumes. They feed upon them, but they pay their board by giving the plant a certain element without which it cannot live, and which it cannot get for itself. This element is nitrogen which the bacteria extract from the air.

If the bacteria be introduced into a certain field they spread rapidly. Finally the farmers in Ohio loaned the farmers in Mississippi some of their infected dirt. Those in Missouri accommodated Washington. The farmers of the uninfected States scattered this infected dirt over a small area. The bugs in it took hold and multiplied prodigiously. Then the infected farm loaned dirt to all its neighbors. All these, after farming the bugs for a season, planted their clover and alfalfa, the bacteria gave them the necessary amount of nitrogen, and the new crops brought added profit and productiveness to the sections in question.

Just now the State of Massachusetts is the proprietor of the greatest of the bug farms. The gipsy and brown-tail moth have been introduced into New England through imported nursery stock, and are devouring all the foliage of the New England trees. They are destroying entire forests and threaten to so spread as to become a national menace. The best way to fight their increase has been found to be the multiplication of their enemies, the parasites that feed upon them and kill them. In Europe the balance between the moths and their parasites has long been so delicate that the trees have not greatly suffered. But in America the moth found no parasite and consequently it flourished unhampered. The parasite has been introduced and the attempt is being made to develop such numbers of them that the moth may be checked.

These parasites are varieties of flies, not greatly different in appearance from the ordinary house fly. But the caterpillar of the gypsy moth is their favorite food. The mother fly lays her eggs in the body of this caterpillar. They grow and wax fat in feeding upon their host. In the end the host is devoured, and the larvae of the fly emerge full grown, and go forth and lay other eggs in other caterpillars.

The Federal government has long been experimenting on the development of these flies in great numbers. Now the State of Massachusetts, under its State forester, has established a farm for their culture. There are hatcheries, nurseries, feeding grounds, playgrounds—everything that will lend itself to the development of great numbers of the enemies of the caterpillar. When the flies are mature they are liberated in sections where the caterpillars are abundant. They find conditions where they will thrive. They multiply rapidly through feeding upon the common enemy. Already their influence is being felt in alleviating the pest. As more fly farms are established, and their product increases, it is hoped that the enemies of the trees of America will be checkmated and that freak farming will have scored another victory.

Bee farming is at best something of a quaint and interesting operation. But doubly quaint is it when the farm happens to be upon the top of one of New York's great skyscrapers, and the little models of industry ply their trade over the heads of that human beehive of the four millions that lies below. It happens that there are scores of apiaries on the tops of great buildings in New York. There are also such "farms" on the roofs of Chicago, of Washington, of San Francisco, and practically every other city in the Union. As a matter of fact, there is more honey produced in the cities and towns of the nation than in the country. The mass of this is, to be sure, in the smaller towns and the apiaries are in yards of cottages rather than upon roofs. But the house tops are ideal places for the bees. There is neither animal nor man there to disturb them. The very position of their homes gives them the advantage over their brothers downstairs for a bee circles to a considerable height before it starts on its journey for the sweets of the flowers.

To be sure, an occasional difficulty is presented. There was a time in New York when for a few days there were no flowers in the parks or fields. At this time the bees of a certain skyscraper apiary invaded a near-by candy factory. Consternation ran riot among the girl workers and some of them, in fighting the bees, were stung. The proprietor of the candy shop sued the beeman, but was unable to prove that it was his bees that stung his employés. In another case a marketman's place was invaded. He had been a countryman and was alive as to bees. He placed flour about his invaded sweets and bees crawling through this became marked. Then he smuggled an employé on the roof and this man testified to seeing the marked bees returning to the hives. But the flowers had bloomed long before the case came to trial and the slight damage was forgotten.

There are hundreds of individuals in the United States profitably engaged in pheasant farming. The pheasant is the handsomest and among the meatiest prizes of the huntsman. They are the best prizes of the game preserves of Europe. They are developed to their best in China and Japan. They were unknown in America until introduced by fanciers.

The first successful pheasant farmer in America was in the State of Oregon. The Hon. O. N. Denny, while Consul-General to Shanghai, shipped a score of pheasants to his brother, who had a place on the Willamette River in Oregon. These were bred in captivity, but allowed to escape. They were still fed at home when hunger drove them in. Eventually they bred prolifically in the wild state. Finally they were so abundant that an open shooting season was inaugurated. On the first day of it 50,000 were killed. Since that time there has been a shooting season in Oregon for pheasants each year and much sport is supplied.

Massachusetts, Ohio, New York, California and other States have followed suit in the distribution of the pheasant. Success has not always resulted. The conditions were often different from those to which the introduced pheasant was accustomed and many generations were needed before they were entirely at home. The States have largely given over the breeding of pheasants and the industry is now in the hands of private breeders. These find a ready sale for their product to the owners of estates and shooting preserves. The States are also buying from the private breeders for the purpose of liberation. Success is assured to the breeder if he uses ordinary skill and observes one rule—that of getting his parent stock from a section of the world which is similar in climate and vegetation to that into which he is to place the offspring. The birds breed rapidly and invite handsome profits while furnishing a fascinating hobby for diversion.

Anybody with a two acre plot and a roll of net wire can lay down the groundwork for a fox farm. The two acres should be tucked away where there are no passing throngs for the sensitive fox does not thrive under the gaze of the vulgar public. The inclemencies of the weather have no terrors for hem, captivity does not affect their well being. They will eat and thrive on the same food that is bestowed upon Towser. Each mother brings up a family of half a dozen each season. The expense is not great.

Any silver fox skin is worth $100. The dark ones are worth more. Pure black skins bring almost fabulous prices, ranging from $500 to $2000. Any good pair of foxes is worth $500 alive for breeding purposes. The fancier does not need many families to bring him in a competence from fox farming alone. There is millions in it if rightly carried on. There are a number of men making good money out of it today.

There are farmers in the southwest who are selecting the thorniest prickly pear on those thorny plains and cultivating them for hay. The yield is fifty tons to the acre and no barns nor harvesting is required. There is not a dairyman in the vicinity of San Antonio who has not given over hay and all manner of other roughage for the prickly pear.

This is the native growth of these plains. It grows abundantly despite drouth or cold. The crop never fails. When cultivated the yield is multiplied ten fold. The prickly pear remains green and adds to itself year after year. It need not be harvested but remains immune from decay or deterioration in the open field. No creature may touch it for the thorns are its protection. It need not be even fenced.

Then when feeding time comes the southwest farmer goes about the chores in the strangest way in the history of all the business. He goes into the prickly pear patch with a torch and singes the thorns off the portion of the crop that he wants the cows to devour. They fall upon it ravenously for it is sugar to their mouths. But when the singed section is eaten they may go no further until the torch is again applied. The mowing machine may rust in the shed, for there is no use for it. The barn itself has outlived its usefulness, for there is no hay to store. The drouth has lost its terrors. The despised prickly pear stands ready to save the land that God forgot to the people who have so long scorned it.

OPEN SHOP GAINS STRENGTH.

INSTANCES PROVE THE FUTILITY OF UNIONITE CLAIMS.

The Lithographers' Union Was Put Out of Running by Determined Employers Four Years Ago—Portland Unionites Proved Their Numerical Weakness at Recent Election.

The "open shop" movement goes on apace among municipalities, the city of Portland being one of the latest to declare broadly for entire freedom from labor domination. The country through, there are more strikes that fall than there are that win. One of the most notable defeats of unionism was that of the Lithographers' Association in 1906. The Lithographers' was one of the strongest labor unions in the country, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. In August of that year a national strike was called. The association of employing lithographers was anxious to avoid the strike, and was willing to submit the grievance to an arbitration board. But the employés would have none of it. In Buffalo 800 employés walked out. Ten out of fourteen lithographing firms in Cincinnati had to shut down. In New Haven 300 men walked out, and all over the country union men did the same.

The employers declared an open shop on August 3 of that year, and an open shop it has been ever since. For awhile the union kept up the fight, but gradually the lithographing plants resumed full time. Some of the workmen were new hands, some were old employés who returned with the understanding that they could belong to no labor union. Today there is no forceful union in the lithographing trade.

Whenever the unionites are compelled to prove their strength they are not so strong as their noisy demonstrations would indicate. This was conclusively proved in Portland a short time ago, in an attempt of the unionites to get one of their number on the Board of Education, so that they could run the schools on the closed-shop principle. They conducted their favorite sort of campaign—villification and vituperation; the polling places were in districts easily accessible to their men. The hours of voting, from 2 to 6, offered plenty of time for men who work eight hours a day to vote. No one was asked any questions as to citizenship, nor was anyone annoyed by inquiries regarding property qualifications. The newly-arrived strikemakers and the recently-imported walking delegates and business agents voted as freely as they could have done in their distant homes. And when their wives and sisters and sweethearts appeared the gentlemen in line gallantly stepped back and permitted them to vote without unnecessary delay. Wagons and automobiles gathered up the union voters, and with merry rattle and cheerful honk bore them to the polls. It was a great day for the unions. And when the ballots were counted it was found the union candidate had polled 2359 votes. That included men and women—many men who probably would not have been allowed to vote at a regular election; women who, had the property qualification been strictly enforced, would not have been allowed to vote, and all the people who could be coaxed, cajoled and frightened into voting against Mr. Fleischner by teachers who had been dismissed for incompetency or other excellent reasons. The vote cast for the union candidate is significant, says the Portland Spectator. Altogether, it was just about half the votes given Mr. Fleischner, who had no organization, and "it proved the extreme limit of the vote the politicians are afraid of; the union strength that merchants grovel to, the union numbers that employers fear, the union influence that newspapers dare not antagonize. It proved that the labor vote and the strength of the unions are the stuffing of a bogy that need frighten us no more."

The disposition to violence noted in the strike in this city is of the same brand found elsewhere. A few days ago about fifty of the striking employés of the New York Sugar Refining Company attempted to return to work, but when they came out of the works they were greeted with a volley of bricks and stones, and it required the charge of thirty policemen before the rioters were dispersed.

A unionite picket named William Gray at Long Branch, N. J., a few days ago, became so incensed because Pierson H. Dennis should remain at work in the Calvin Cummings planing mill that he assaulted him with a blackjack. Judge Foster, before whom Gray had his hearing, said he had looked up the man's record, and found he was in the habit of beating his wife as well as intimidating non-union workmen, and he sent him to State's prison for eighteen months.

Given a righteous judge and equality before the law gets an emphatic indorsement whenever union rioters are arraigned for disturbing the peace.

The demand for American flour from the Orient is looking up. Orders have lately been received at Seattle for thousands of barrels, which are going out to the Puget Sound millers, and will keep the mills busy at a time of year when they are ordinarily idle. The July and August shipments to China alone are expected to aggregate a quarter of a million bags.

Talks ON Teeth

BY

REX DENTAL CO.

Teeth to Eat With

One of the greatest features of the Rex Dental Co.'s Alveolar Method of supplying teeth without plates is that they are instantly available to eat with.

A certain man came to us one day not over a year ago, and we supplied him with a new set of Alveolar teeth.

"Now for a sirloin," he said as he left. He came back next day all smiles. "I have not enjoyed a meal so much in 20 years as the one I sat down to an hour after leaving your offices," he said. "These are the real thing. They are teeth to eat with, sure enough."

This is a common occurrence in these offices, but not every patient is able to voice his satisfaction in such an expressive and original fashion.

We are furnishing toothless people with teeth to eat with, so the human machine will run smoothly. False teeth on "partial" plates or a piece of ordinary "bridge" work that is a torturesome thing to bite on are simply "teeth for looks." They fill up gaps in the line, but won't do for hard work.

All we ask is that you have two or more teeth left in the jaws around which we build our structure.

We make the new teeth firm and solid, so you can bite and chew your food in a natural manner.

It is a practical plan of teeth restoration, not painful at any stage of the work, and is permanent.

There is no boring into the gums or cutting, nothing disagreeable—a comfortable piece of work from start to finish, and afterward.

You have no doubt been reading our announcements from time to time. Won't you take the next step and come and let us look your mouth over free of charge?

If your teeth are gone, you need new ones. Now, will you have the best or a makeshift?

Will you spend your money for teeth to eat with or teeth for looks. You are the one to decide.

But we would urge you to at least let us prove our claims.

Our free book goes into details about the ALVEOLAR METHOD. Send for it and read it before you come to see us. Do it today.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK--Lots, Lands and Building Developm

PASADENA.

AUGUST STARTS PROMISINGLY.

No Dullness Evident in Crown City Building.

Benton's Plans for Y.M.C.A. Are Accepted.

Southland Towns Report Hot Weather Activity.

PASADENA, Aug. 6.—Building operations for August have started out with a big impetus. While the first seven months of the year were the best in the history of the city, this month promises to be the best of the season. Usually August is rather dull, so far as starting new buildings is concerned, but this year indicates an exception.

During the first six days permits totaled $55,720, although every effort was made to get in all pending permits before the end of July. The G. Lawrence Stimson Company took out a $25,000 permit for a beautiful residence on Orange Grove avenue. If all the permits are taken out for buildings now planned to be started during August this month will be a record-breaker.

H. D. Davis is having plans drawn for a four-story apartment-house to be built on South Los Robles avenue, to cost about $50,000. The building will contain twenty-five suites of three and four-room apartments. Frank Churchill is having plans drawn for a new $10,000 residence on Waverly Drive. He states that he expects to have the house ready for occupancy before winter.

The Building Committee of the Y.M.C.A. has accepted plans for the new Y.M.C.A. building at the corner of North Marengo avenue and Ramona street, which have been drawn by Arthur B. Benton of Los Angeles. The building alone will cost $100,000, and the furnishings will cost $50,000 additional. Specifications are now being prepared and will be ready for contractors' bids within two weeks. The committee hopes to have the building completed by the first of next year.

The new Y.W.C.A. home, which is located on North Marengo, in the same block as the Y.M.C.A. property, is to be greatly improved. A contract was let during the past week for improvements to cost $5000. The small bungalow is to be enlarged by adding a large dining-room and the secretary's office. The small barn in the rear of the lot will be remodeled and made into sleeping rooms. A small gymnasium is also to be added to the buildings on the property, which is located at No. 78 North Marengo.

The Hotel Maryland Company is busily engaged in making improvements to that hostelry. The big roof garden has been changed into bachelors' sleeping rooms. The open veranda in front of the hotel is being enlarged. Work on enlarging the dining-room will be started this next week. Two new bungalows are being built on Euclid avenue. In all, there will be forty new bedrooms in addition to the enlarged veranda and dining-room.

Work is also rapidly progressing on the alterations and improvements to the Lake Avenue Congregational Church.

The northeast part of Pasadena is building up so rapidly that a petition has been started asking the Board of Education to build a new grade school somewhere on East Washington street for the accommodation of the school children in that district. Several hundred new homes are in the course of construction in that part of the city, and every one of them will be occupied before winter. The growth has been so great that the present graded schools on the East Side are overcrowded. Many of the children will have a long distance to travel to the present schools. A move has also been started to have another new school built somewhere on South Marengo avenue, south of California street.

The people living on East Washington street, east of Los Robles avenue, have secured a bonus of $40,000, asked by the Pacific Electric Company for an extension of the East Washington-street line east of Lake avenue to and including the Fair Oaks ranch property, which has been subdivided and is now on the market. It is believed that eventually that line will be run to a direct connection with the Sierra Madre line. Sierra Madre, it is believed, will some day become a part of Pasadena.

The sale of vacant lots in the district to be given transportation facilities by the extension of this line has been enormous during the past few months, and real estate dealers state that within two years the entire district east of Lake avenue to Sierra Madre will be entirely settled up. The Lake Vineyard Land and Water Company has extended its mains as far east as the Fair Oaks ranch, so as to supply all that district with water.

Real estate sales during the past week have not been so large as during the previous week. The C. G. Brown Company reports total sales of $51,500 during the past weeks.

T. C. Peck, general passenger agent of the Salt Lake Route, has just purchased the four-acre ranch formerly belonging to Mrs. Childs, at Lincoln avenue and Fig street, and has taken up his residence thereon.

NEW HOTEL PROJECTED.

MAY BE SIX STORIES HIGH.

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 6.—The aggregate value of building permits continues to increase. The total for the year to date is $1,805,000. Among new structures projected is a hotel to be built on the north side of E street, between Tenth and Eleventh, at a cost of $35,000. The builder is H. G. Crowe. The structure is to be three stories, with foundation and walls of strength to carry three additional stories. The hotel is to contain forty-five guest rooms, each supplied with hot and cold water and all other modern conveniences.

P. Hanson & Sons have started work on a building at Ft. Rosecrans to be used as a quartermasters' warehouse. The cost will be $4400. Adolph Levi has begun the construction of a garage on First and Front streets between C and B, to cost $9000. The building will be fireproof.

In spite of the lull in general trading among realty owners and newcomers, several brokers are far from idle. Transfers now taking place are evidence that the investment public that has the money to spare has great faith in San Diego land values.

J. Leighton McMurtrie's recent sales follow: Three lots, block in University Heights, improved with a new dwelling, for John Wood to a local investor, $7500; lot 50x100 feet on Third street between Thorn and Upas, for John Covert, $3000; lot 50x100 feet, southwest corner Twenty-third and C streets, with two large houses, for Dr. S. F. Wilcox, $6000; fractional lots in Cleveland Heights, Mrs. M. S. Nichris, for $2650; five lots in East Normal Heights, from M. T. Gillmore to Frank E. Barbour, $2000; fractional lots, fronting on Robinson avenue, between Albatross and First, for S. N. Barstow to Minnie E. Reynolds, $2600.

J. C. Rice has sold for Charles Josselyn to Charles F. O'Neill, 200x300 feet on Spruce, Thorn and Union streets, improved with a seven-room house, consideration $10,000.

P. L. Johnson has sold to John Purcell 100x100 feet at the northeast corner of Date and Union streets for $5850. M. Hall has sold to John Osborn four lots in Middletown for $3500. J. Don Dunnan has bought of C. F. O'Neall two lots in Florence Heights for $2500.

CHURCH UNDER WAY.

DESIGNS SLIGHTLY CHANGED.

POMONA, Aug. 6.—Work is well under way on the magnificent new church which is being erected by the First Baptist congregation of this city at the corner of Holt avenue and Garey street. Plans for the structure, which will cost about $50,000, were prepared by Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles. The first published perspective of the building appeared exclusively in The Times of June 27, 1909, since which time several slight changes have been made in the design.

The notable change from the original plans is the idea of having two small towers at the front of the building on Garey street. These enhance the effect to a considerable degree. The structure is of the classic type, with a Grecian portico of massive concrete columns. The church will occupy a ground area of 98x136 feet. It will have a seating capacity, with the Sunday-school rooms and galleries, of about 1200.

HOME FOR PRESIDENT.

TO STAND NEAR UNIVERSITY.

REDLANDS, Aug. 6.—Plans have been prepared by Norman F. Marsh, of Los Angeles, the architect who designed all the present buildings of the University of Redlands, for a handsome residence to stand on the hill near the Administration Building and to be occupied by President J. N. Field. The house will be of classic architecture and of artificial granite exterior.

The lower floor of the dwelling will an unusually wide stairway. Reception, dining, and breakfast rooms, together with library and den, will also be situated on the ground floor. The second story will contain five chambers. The finish throughout will be in white enamel and hard woods. The conveniences will be of the most modern type.

Beautiful New Home for J. N. Field, resident of the University of Redlands. The structure, which will be of classic architecture, was designed by Norman F. Marsh of Los Angeles.

CHURCH PLANS FINISHED.

METHODISTS TO BUILD SOON.

COMPTON, Aug. 6.—Working plans for the attractive house of worship which is to be erected by the Methodist Episcopal congregation of this place are practically completed in the offices of Architects Albert R. Walker and John T. Vawter of Los Angeles. The structure will stand on the site of the present church, which is the oldest standing edifice of the Methodist denomination in Southern California. The grounds have an area of 325x240 feet.

The new edifice will be 98x74 feet in size and of frame construction. It will have a seating capacity of 500, including the Sunday-school rooms, which will be separated from the main auditorium by sliding doors. Other rooms provided for will be the choir, ladies' parlor, pastor's study and twelve classrooms. The fan system of heating and ventilation will be used.

The pastor of the congregation is the Rev. W. M. Harkness. The Rev. Francis M. Larkin is the district superintendent.

GREAT BUILDING ACTIVITY.

MANY HOUSES UNDER WAY.

GLENDALE, Aug. 6.—There is not a minute of let-up in the building of homes and business blocks at this place. Every day seems to bring greater activity and the future is unusually bright. The following progress is reported this week:

O. W. Odell is starting work on six new houses on Fairview avenue, east of Brand boulevard, to cost from $1500 to $1800 each. The Peerless Building Company will start work next week on five more modern homes on Milford street, west of Central. The Co-operative Building Company, which has just completed 16 houses on Verdugo road at Glassell Park, is building three houses for one patron on Stocker street, between Remington and Parke.

J. Krantz will soon start two houses on Fairview avenue, near Casa Verdugo. B. A. Lane is starting a home in West Second street and Carl Gould is laying the foundation on Burchett street for a house. James M. Morton is building on Stocker street between Brand and Louise. Mr. Blakely is erecting a $2500 residence at No. 228 Central avenue. S. J. Gunther, of Los Angeles, has bought the La Graff place, consisting of one and one-half acres for $4500 and will soon erect a fine residence. Frances E. Moore is putting up a $3000 residence on Parke avenue, just west of Central. Mr. Barrett, of Burbank, is building a home at Third and Remington streets.

The largest realty sale reported for weeks has just been consummated in the purchase of the Albert Dow place by a Chicago man whose name is being held a secret. The piece consists of ten acres of highly improved land on the Kenneth road and the price received was $35,000. S. L. Borthick has sold his home place on Parke avenue consisting of three lots, or 150x200 feet, upon which stands a six-room house, to Frank Ashton of Colorado. The price paid was $4000. Clay Seaman has sold his place on Boynton avenue to G. F. Latter of Los Angeles. This piece consists of 160 feet on Boynton avenue and 255 feet deep and the price paid was $1800. The Overton Realty Company reports the sale of a lot on Orange Grove avenue to Mrs. A. McGee for $550 and of a lot for Mrs. Lydia N. Thatcher to Mrs. Glenn Belzy of Los Angeles.

PERMIT TOTALS LARGE.

BUILDING CONDITIONS LIVELY.

SOUTH PASADENA, Aug. 6.—The building permit totals are the largest since the first of the year, aggregating $62,235 and, as the weeks go by there seems to be but little depreciation in the amount of building that is going on in the city. The past week shows the same healthy condition as the week previous. All permits for $1000 and over are as follows: Chas. E. Grosse, residence, $27,000; F. H. D. Banks, residence, $2000; John B. Jones, residence, $2800; A. F. Leavitte, residence, $3000; John McRobert, residence, $1650; Paul Mahorney, residence, $1850; C. C. Hudson, residence, $5000; F. P. True, residence, $1000; Ida D. Bear, residence, $1900; John Hodges, residence, $4500 and Miss Georgia Davenport, residence, $2800. F. C. Bolt expended $4000 altering and repairing his residence, and the school trustees' High School building alteration cost $3150.

TENNIS.

MACE DEFENDS TENNIS TITLE.

Defeats Browne in Pretty Ping-Pong Game.

Sinsabaugh and Dawson Are Doubles Champions.

Fottrell of San Francisco the Junior Leader.

Winnie Mace of Los Angeles again is the tennis champion of Southern California.

Ella Fottrell of San Francisco is the junior champion of Southern California.

Miss May Sutton of Pasadena is the Southern California champion in ladies' singles (and incidentally the ladies' unofficial champion of the world.)

Simpson Sinsabaugh and Ward Dawson are Southern California doubles champions.

Mrs. B. O. Bruce and Claude Wayne are the mixed doubles champions of Southern California.

The ladies' doubles championship is not yet decided, though everybody believes the champions will be Miss May Sutton and Miss Alice Scott.

With these results the Long Beach tennis tournament drew to a successful close on the Hotel Virginia courts yesterday evening. The feature of the day's play was the absolutely featureless excellence of the final rounds of the various events.

DEFENDS TITLE.

Winnie Mace successfully defended his title against Nat Browne, winner of the men's open singles, in one of the most perfect ping-pong matches ever seen on the Pacific Coast. Both men played almost perfect tennis—Miss May Sutton herself could do no better.

The match was given the place of honor at the beginning of the afternoon, as the chief event of the day's play. It more than came up to expectations, running through five well-contested sets. Those who expected to see Mace defeated were gently surprised.

In spite of the closeness of the play and the bursts of really fine tennis that were seen at times, the match as a whole was not a very thrilling affair. It would sink into one of Jane Austen's novels without leaving a ripple.

Browne was not quite up to the game that he showed Friday against Fottrell, but nevertheless played a steady, consistent game. His style of play, however, needs a brilliant opponent to make it sensational. His strong suit is getting back impossible returns, and if the other fellow doesn't send him any of that kind he just whangs away inoffensively from the back court until one of the players manages to paste the net.

His plan of attack is to drive first down one side-line and then the other, getting his opponent on the run until the chance comes for the neatly-driven ace. An almost perfect command of the high art of lobbing enables him to force this style of play against any except exceptional opponents. Time and again Winnie tried to get to the net for volleying, but was unable to leave the beautiful lobs that Nat sent over his head.

BACK AND FORTH.

Mace plays a game somewhat similar to Browne's. Yesterday, compelled to keep to the back court for the greater part of the time, he duplicated Browne's game almost perfectly—and beat him at it. His shots at times were as finished as anything seen in this vicinity this season, but they lack the sting that usually accompanies the work of a championship player. His serve is good, but has not the distinguishing "kick" that characterizes the play of such comers as McLoughlin, Long and Fottrell. He is like a fighter with a beautiful defense, but no punch.

Mace's win yesterday was well earned by good tennis, and his pretty places were well applauded. But most of his returns traveled high above the net, and his victory carried no conviction.

The one point in which he appeared to excel was in mid-court volleying. Some of his returns made just before the ball struck the court were splendid. On the other hand his overhead work in handling lobs—a point where the caliber of a player often shows most clearly—was weak.

In men's doubles fine tennis was played before Sinsabaugh and Dawson won from the defenders of the title, Browne and Bell. Neither of the latter played up to the game they are capable of, but credit is due Ward and Simpson for their excellent work. Dawson was particuatrly effective in the first set, when his aces from the net scored many points. Sinsabaugh played as perfect a net game as on Friday in the semi-finals of the mixed doubles, earning some of the biggest "hands" of the day on his cleverly-placed volleys.

SAME OLD STORY.

In the final ladies singles' match, sandwiched in between the men's sets, Miss May Sutton came up to expectations and mowed down Sister Florence with the ease and emotion of a piston-rod. A strong wind was blowing, which at first favored Florence considerable, so that she ran two games to the champion's one. Everybody edging forward to see better, for Miss F. Sutton's customary allowance is only one game to the set—but it was only the wind, after all. May let her get only one more game that set, and with the wind in her favor, ran out the second to love.

In the junior singles' finals, played in the morning, Fottrell disposed of Sheldon in short order, 6-0, 6-2. Fottrell's only real competitor in the junior event proved to be Newell, who succeeded in taking a set from him in the opening round.

Miss Mary Browne and Sinsabaugh's win Friday in the ladies' mixed doubles proved to be little more than a flash in the pan, as Mrs. Bruce and Wayne had little difficulty in taking the finals from them, 6-4, 0-6, 6-4. The playing on both sides, however—like all other matches of the day—was above taking exception to.

The finals of the ladies' doubles were postponed, with Miss May Sutton and Alice Scott bracketed against Mrs. Bruce and Miss Browne. This was the only one of the entire card of events that was not finished up according to the scheduled minute—which certainly CONCERTED.

POLICE CHIEF STOPS BETTING

CONCERTED MOVEMENT IS ON IN COAST CITIES.

Arrests in Los Angeles Followed by Action in Portland—Pernicious Action of Gamblers to Snare Young Boys and Others at Cigar Stands and Elsewhere.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] By instructions of the Mayor, stringent orders were issued by Chief of Police Cox today to stop at once the growth of baseball gambling evil which has been flourishing in many of the downtown cigar stores where handbooks are made on the results of the games.

Three days ago when Percy Wolf confessed that he had robbed the Security Savings and Trust Company of $170 on a forged check in order that he might bet on ball games, was the first intimation the Chief had that the evil had gained such headway.

An investigation disclosed the alarming conditions and prompt measures were taken to bring about a reform. The Chief learned that in almost every cigar store gamblers have been reaping a rich harvest from enthusiastic youths who have been lured into squandering their earnings in an effort to win from professional gamblers.

It has been learned that boys as young as 15 years old have been permitted to risk small sums on the result of a game, while messenger boys have been kept busy placing bets for women fans. Loud complaints have been made by baseball fans throughout the season that gambling on games threatened to ruin baseball, but heretofore without result.

FREE AUTO SHOW.

A free automobile show is to be held in Denver from September 3 to 10, during the Colorado State Fair. The automobile dealers are to be given free space, and no admission is to be charged visitors to the fair who wish to see the cars. It will be possible for the manufacturer and dealer, without expenditure, to make an especially strong impression on prospective purchasers.

PASSING THE TIME.

GOOD FISHING ALONG SHORE.

MIDSUMMER SPORT IS BETTER THAN IN YEARS.

Small Fry Delights Angler Visiting Piers—Eccentricities of Casters Amuse Onlookers—Several Weeks More of Sport Expected at the Beaches.

"Fishing is better this year than it has been for seven or eight years," said an old-timer, who was angling off the municipal wharf at Santa Monica, yesterday morning.

"Nobody knows the reason; but it just happens that way. The fish seem to come and go with no apparent reason for their movements. But, believe me, they are coming this year and not going."

The close-to-shore angling in the Santa Monica Bay last week was a record breaker in three respects. More fishermen were on the piers and along the beach than probably were ever there before, an unusually large number of finsters were yanked out of the water and the assortment was unusually extensive.

At no two resorts were the prevailing catches the same. At the long wharf sea trout and bass held the center of the stage, at the Santa Monica pier, the toothsome pompano and halibut alternated in playing the leading role, at Ocean Park and Venice mackerel and smelt dominated, at Playa del Rey yellowfin and good-sized tomcod led the procession, at Redondo surf and mackerel were on top, at Hermosa barracuda were the bell-fish, and along the strand between Playa del Rey and Redondo the anglers who cast their lines from the beach into the breakers were rewarded with good catches of surf.

KALEIDOSCOPIC.

During the latter part of July the angling was off-color. Red water in the bay was the alleged cause of the failure of the finsters to come in close to the shore and there was very little doing off the piers. But early last week the red water disappeared and the sport began to pick up. The good news spread rapidly and by the middle of the week thousands of fishermen were having a rare time.

The municipal wharf at Santa Monica was the only place from which pompano were caught in large numbers. The fish did not visit the resorts at the southern end of the bay and the news that they were clustering about the concrete pier drew many anglers there. Between three and four hundred fishermen were on the pier every morning, and very few of them went away empty-handed. The best catches were made Wednesday. On Thursday, the pompano gave way to halibut, as the chief attraction, and the big boys dominated during the remainder of the week.

An unusually large number of women took advantage of the rare sport. They had just as good luck as did the men. One woman, who refused to reveal her identity for the reason that "I don't want friends in the city to know I was so undignified as to fish," got seven pompano and four seatrout in an hour and a half and then brought up a flounder that weighed close to three pounds. After refusing any assistance in landing and unhooking the flat fish, she quit, saying it was too much trouble to pull in the big fellows.

BIGGEST FISH.

The biggest fish were caught off the pier at Hermosa Beach, where several barracuda, some three feet long, were

JOE GANS HOME IN MAMMY'S ARMS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BALTIMORE, Aug. 6.—This afternoon Joe Gans, the former lightweight champion pugilist, was resting easily. While he is growing steadily weaker, his death is not expected for several days. He may even live two weeks.

Gans's meeting with his folks was affecting. His mother gathered the frame of her son in her arms and wept over him, while other relatives stood about and cried in sympathy. Joe has the best of everything.

SAVE BIRD AND BEAST.

GAME NEEDS PROTECTION.

U. S. Chief Shows Holes in California Law.

This State Far Behind East and Northwest.

Better Legislation Needed to Preserve Deer.

"The open season on deer should be shortened to not more than thirty days a year," said Dr. T. S. Palmer, head of the Federal game protection service, yesterday.

Dr. Palmer is visiting his father, H. A. Palmer, of No. 1741 Harvard boulevard, and though his trip to this part of the country was prompted by private matters, he has been devoting considerable study to the problem of game preservation in this State.

Dr. Palmer's official title is assistant chief of the biological survey of the Department of Agriculture. Under his direction come all matters pertaining to the conservation of game in the United States and its possessions. Not only is he charged with the duty of seeing what can be done to prevent the wanton slaughter of game by hunters, but under his supervision are all of the inspectors who stand guard at the ports lest birds or animals inimical to the game beasts and birds of the country be imported.

It was on May 25, 1900, that the law went into effect for the conservation and care of the furred and feathered denizens of the woods and prairies. Very shortly after that Dr. Palmer was placed in charge of the work, and for the past eight years he has been at the head of one of the most important departments of the Federal government.

One of the offices of the bureau which Dr. Palmer heads is to compile statistics on the quantity of game killed each year in the different States, with the view to ascertaining whether legislation at present in force is sufficient. The data thus secured is at the disposal of various State authorities who may be seeking to better the laws for the protection of wild game.

RAPID EXTERMINATION.

"The compiling of accurate data regarding the destruction of game in California is a very difficult matter," continued Dr. Palmer. "There is no doubt that deer are being exterminated very rapidly, but at just what ratio I am unable to say. This is quite the opposite from the southern New England States, where deer is increasing rapidly, owing to wise legislation.

"There is no reason why deer should not increase in this State under proper conditions. An accurate means of recording the number of deer shot each season should be secured, and after comparisons have been drawn laws should be passed accordingly.

"In two directions at least the California deer law could be materially improved. The tracking of wounded deer with dogs is now allowed. This is all wrong. It is an easy matter to wound a deer, and then if dogs can be set on its trail slaughter is sure to result.

"For another thing the season is entirely too long. Your open season extends from July 15 to November 1, 105 days. Just think, here in California where there are comparatively few deer you can shoot them for three and a half months each year. In the State of Maine, where there is an abundance they may be shot during but two and a half months. In Wisconsin and Michigan, where deer are very plentiful, they may be shot during but twenty days each year. The law in this State should be so modified as to make thirty days the absolute limit of time during which deer may be shot.

"Here in Southern California it would doubtless be beneficial to have all killing of deer stopped for say five years, but I doubt if people in the northern part of the State would stand for such an arrangement.

DOVES NOT GAME BIRDS.

"Then your dove law can stand a whole lot of amending. To begin with, doves should not be classed as game birds for they are too valuable to be killed off by hunters. The dove is one of the greatest destroyers of weed seed and in many States is protected for that reason.

"But it is probable that the dove will be classed as a game bird in this State for a good many years to come and some change should be made in the law. To begin with, the season opens entirely too early. Not only are the doves being wantonly destroyed but the laws for the protection of quail are being more or less nullified by having the embargo on doves taken off as early as it is.

"There should be no shooting of any kind of birds during July anyway. Regarding the best date for the opening of dove season I would say that in many States it has been found advisable to have the seasons for all upland birds open at the same time. There is no doubt but that a great number of quail are destroyed out of season by hunters out after doves.

"At the present time there is no protection on the wild pigeon in this State. This is probably an oversight when the game laws were framed but it should certainly be rectified at the earliest possible opportunity.

"Your season on ducks lasts too late in the spring. This State is famous for its duck shooting and an enormous quantity of money has been invested in duck clubs. The members of these clubs should entirely support legislation which will tend to increase the supply of these game birds.

"Under no consideration should it be lawful to shoot ducks after they begin mating. February 1 is as late as duck shooting should be allowed, and Janu-

SEPTEMBER 24.

ROAD COURSE LIKE GLASS.

Santa Monica Race Plans Are Progressing.

Shettler Threatens to Get Out Injunction.

Special Rule to Be Referred to the Dealers.

Fourteen cars are entered in the Santa Monica road race to date. The big event, which is to be pulled off Saturday, September 24, promises to be a great success. The dealers are entering into the plans for the race with the same earnestness which marked the preparations last year.

In the big car event the entries are:

Columbia, entered by Bireley & Young; driver to be chosen.

Lozier, entered by Nash & Fenimore; Teddy Tetzlaff, driver.

Buick, by Howard Motor Car Company; driver to be chosen.

Pope-Hartford, entered by the William R. Ruess Auto Company; Bert Dingley, driver.

Knox, entered by the Doer-Brown Company; Joe Nikrent, driver.

Apperson, entered by Leon T. Shettler; Harris Hanshue, driver.

Medium car race:

Mercer, entered by the Mercer Auto Company; Charles H. Bigelow, driver.

Pope-Hartford, by Ruess Auto Company; Bert Dingley, driver.

Buick, by Howard Motor Car Company; driver to be chosen.

Small car race;

Chalmers-Detroit, by Western Motor Car Company; Bert Dingley, driver.

Regal, by Big Four Automobile Company; R. Anthony, driver.

Buick, by the Howard Motor Car Company; Louis Nikrent, driver.

Maxwell, by the Maxwell-Briscoe Company; driver to be chosen.

Franklin, entered by Ralph Hamlin; Guy Irwin, driver.

There is a possibility that a number of other entries will be received in both the medium and light car classes. There are enough cars entered, however, to insure a good race. The committee has perfected almost all the details. The race committee consists of F. H. Greer, chairman, protem.; Earle C. Anthony, chairman; P. A. Renton, A. M. Young, Louis Schwaebe.

STRIKES A SNAG.

There is one snag, however. The Apperson car which Leon T. Shettler has entered, is a 1909 model. The rules of the race state that only 1910 or 1911 cars can be started. Shettler claims this rule is discriminating in that it bars only the Apperson car from the race. He threatens to secure an injunction against the holding of the race unless the rule is changed.

F. H. Greer, acting chairman of the race committee, is not disposed to be arbitrary in the matter. He is willing that the ruling be referred to the association for a vote on the question. If the members of the Licensed Dealers' Association, who are holding the invitation meet, feel the rule is unfair it will undoubtedly be changed, says Greer.

The committee chairman is backed up by A. M. Young, agent for the Columbia, who, while he says he can see no cause for changing the rule, is willing to submit the matter to the association for its decision. This would seem to be as fair as the committee can possibly act, says Young.

The Apperson is a 1909 model with a string of victories to its credit, and Shettler believes the car will win again this year. He does not want to be put to the expense of purchasing another car for the race.

GREER TALKS.

"Everything that could possibly be done to forward the interests of those concerned in the Santa Monica road race has been completed," said Chairman Greer yesterday. "We have settled everything satisfactorily with the officials at Santa Monica and all are anxious that the race be held.

"The course is in better shape this year than it was two months before the race last year. The Nevada-avenue turn at the Soldiers' Home will not need as much work this season as last. The course is to be put into shape for the race, and work will soon be commenced on the road. This will mean that the surface of the course will be smooth as glass.

"The course is to be guarded by the soldiers of the Soldiers' Home. We are assured that everything will be done for the safeguarding of the public. The grandstand this year will be larger and higher. We may be forced to erect a grandstand on the Palisades or on Nevada avenue to accommodate the crowd."

The prices to be charged will be much lower than last year. A charge of 50 cents is to be made for seats in the grandstands, and the same price will be charged for persons entering the parking spaces in automobiles. No charge will be made for motor cars.

BURT COMES BACK.

Visits the Auburn Factory and Contracts for a Hundred Cars, Is a Booster.

W. J. Burt, of the Burt Motor Car Company, is home from a month's trip in the East. Burt passed a week at the Auburn factory, in Auburn, Ind. He says the factory is preparing for a busy season. He has arranged for 100 Auburns for his Southern California territory. Based on the business he did last year Burt should easily dispose of this number of cars.

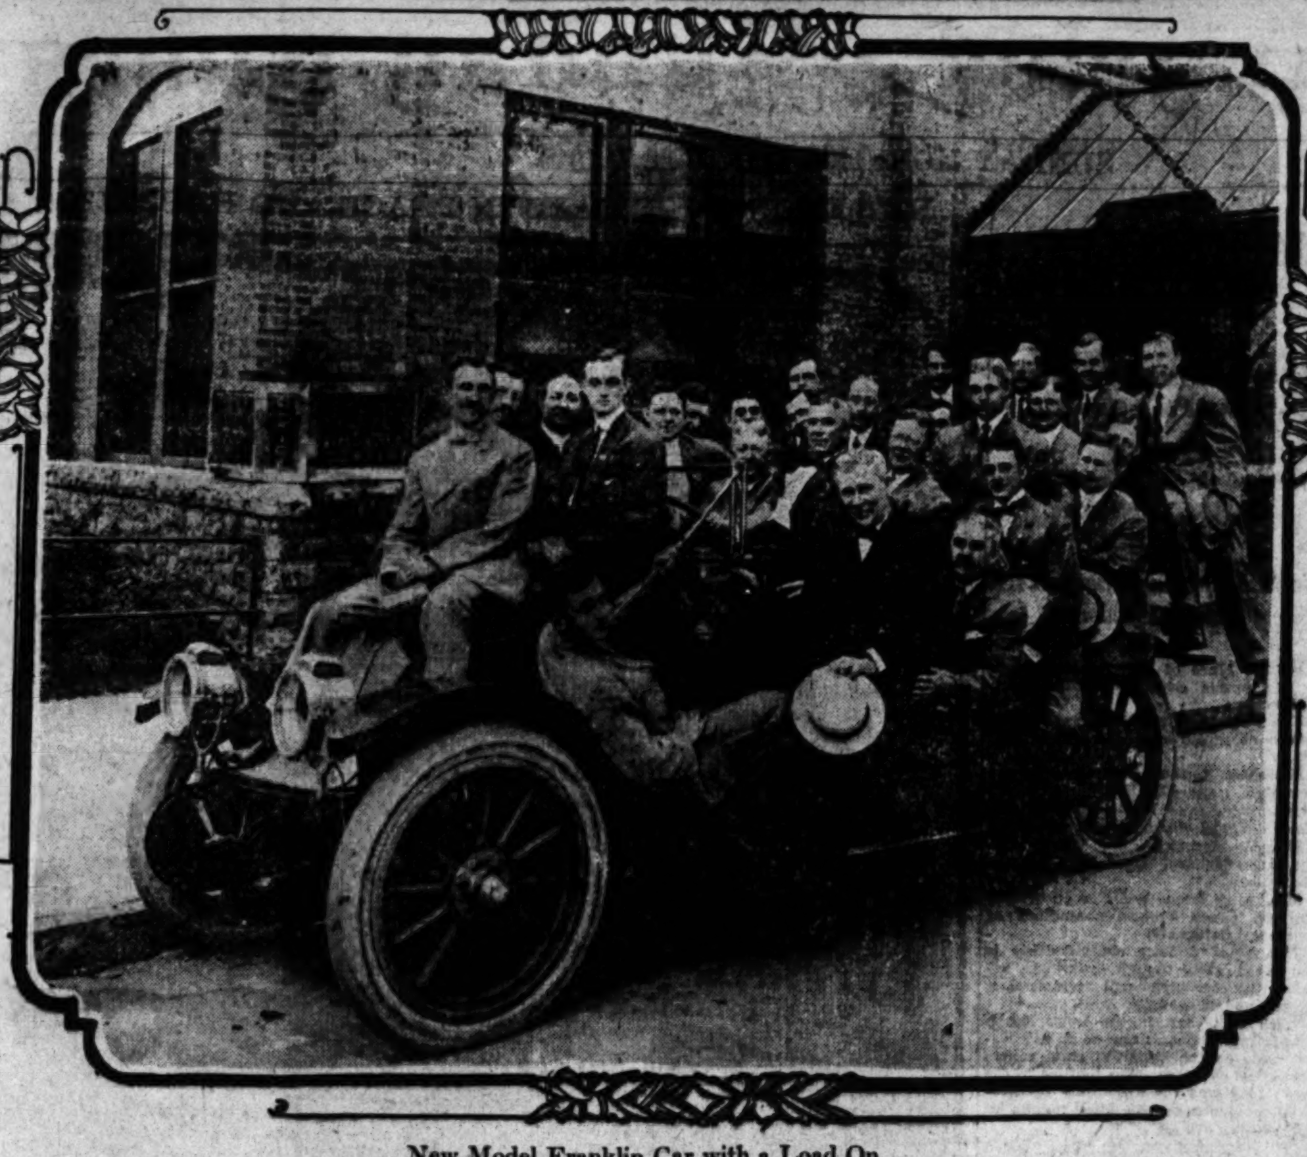
One of the important deals which Burt consummated during his eastern visit was the purchase of $10,000 worth of Tourist parts. This is a boon for Tourist owners who are assured of service during the coming year.

The repair department of the Burt Motor Car Company is one of the best equipped workshops in this city. With the extra stock of parts purchased by Burt the concern will be equipped to handle twice the trade that it could during the season that is passed.

"The automobile industry looks good," said Burt yesterday. "It looks particularly good for the Auburn and we expect to make a great record this coming season. Our alotment was easily disposed of the past year and we are ordering 100 cars and already know we can place that many in this territory.

Autos on Farms.

Guy Rankin, of Fort Dodge, one of the census enumerators for fourteen counties in Iowa, says the farm population is not as great as it was ten years ago, owing to the boys growing into men and moving to the cities. However, the farms are starting to gain through the automobile, which is causing people to want to get back to nature now that they have a certain way of going to town whenever they want.



New Model Franklin Car with a Load On.

John McClain, the San Francisco agent, is at the wheel, and Ralph Hamlin is on the extreme outer edge of the tonneau with one foot resting on the fender. The car is the latest torpedo-body type of the air-cooled line.

BIG CONTRACT.

STEARNS PLANS TO SELL THOUSAND FORDS IN YEAR.

ONE thousand Ford cars for the coming season is the mark which E. Roger Stearns, manager for the Standard Motor Car Company, has set for himself. Stearns is to leave on August 20 for the Ford factory, and he expects to sign a contract for his company to take a thousand cars in Southern California. This will be the largest individual contract signed by any Los Angeles dealer this year.

Stearns has sold 694 Ford cars in the last season. He has averaged four cars a day for several of the busy months and has continued to ship the machines out in number every week. He is winding up the 1910 season, and with the closing of August will have made a proud record. He will go to the factory with a report that more than doubles that of any previous year.

In order to do this large business the headquarters of the Standard Motor Car Company at Twelfth and Olive streets is to be entirely remodeled. A handsome two-story structure is to take the place of the present one-story building. About $50,000 is to be expended in improvements, making the place strictly down-to-date.

The salesroom in which the Ford and Velie cars are to be handled, will be one of the largest in the city. It will be 50x70 feet, and will accommodate at least a dozen cars. One of the features of the show room is to be a patent set of blowers, which are so devised that the exhaust from a car will be sucked into a vent tube and taken from the room.

In the rear of the salesroom will be the workshops, which are to be 100x70 feet. An automatic crane and a three-ton elevator are to be installed for carrying cars to the upper floor where stock rooms, and possibly a finishing room, will be built.

The general offices of the company are to be upstairs. These are to be handsomely finished. The complete stock of Ford and Velie parts are to be stored in the rear of the upstairs department.

There will be a rest room for women, a spacious show room and an office downstairs. Stearns's private office is to be located on the ground floor.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

A motor vehicle company is being organized at Indianapolis with an authorized capitalization of $1,000,000.

Huckleberry pickers in Jefferson county, Pa., now go to and from the berry patches in motor cars.

David Bruce Brown, the well-known racing driver, who is touring Europe in a car, will visit his friend Hemery, the famous French racer.

Two new sight-seeing busses are in operation at Buffalo. They seat forty-eight passengers and are painted in canary yellow with black trimmings.

It has been decided to start the Vanderbuilt Cup Race on Long Island at daybreak, which restores the event to the old time glamour and romance attendant upon a sunrise "go."

The Cleveland (Ohio) Automobile Club, has begun the work of posting signs throughout Northern Ohio. Routes will be marked from Cleveland to Ashtabula, Norwalk, Akron and Youngstown.

There are about 300,000 cars being operated in this country today, or one for every 300 persons, according to the latest census returns. Canada is thought to own about 7802 cars, or one to every 1000 persons.

A two-day reliability run from Philadelphia to Atlantic City and return, has been scheduled for August 12th and 13th, in which the competing machines are all to be commercial vehicles of various kinds.

An appeal has been presented to the municipal authorities of Atlanta, Ga., asking them to prohibit the use of open mufflers within the city limits. The petition bears the signature of some of the most prominent motorists in the city.

A gasoline motor-driven road-roller is now being used on the roads in Central Park, N. Y. It may be also used as a road plow, or a harrow, and it saves the time heretofore consumed by the workmen waiting for steam to "get up" in a steam roller.

London public conveyances, including the motor and horsed cabs, omnibuses, and tramway-cars, numbered on May 31st last, 15,777, according to latest statistics. Of the total there were 5070 motor cabs, 1063 motor omnibuses and 2289 motor tramway cars.

Buffalo now boasts of over 2100 members of its automobile club, and the trade conditions in the city are remarkably good. Fifty different makes of cars are represented by some forty agents, and every tire manufactured has a representative in the city.

Members of the Automobile Club of America who may hereafter be arrested within the confines of Greater New York for alleged violations of provisions of the automobile laws will be spared the necessity of sending for some one to go on their bonds, as the club has made arrangement to furnish bail bond to members of the organization.

A piano firm which recently went bankrupt, gave as one reason for its troubles that people now-a-days buy motor cars instead of pianos. Now it is found that the concern's liabilities were only $25,000 and it assets about half that figure.

Following a lapse into retirement, which lasted for several years, the Tacoma Automobile Club, of Washington, has been revived, and now numbers some sixty active members. Working in conjunction with the Tacoma Club is the Tacoma Rotary Club, whose object is to promote and encourage good roads.

A one-eyed chauffeur may apply for and obtain a license in New York, according to a ruling by the Secretary of State. In support of his decision that the absence of one eye does not necessarily mean "defective vision," the trick of marksmen, who close one orb to aim better, is cited.

A movement has been begun in Portland, Ore., to build an automobile road from that city to Astoria, at the mouth of the Columbia River. With the expenditure of $50,000 it is believed the present road can be put into condition so that motor cars can make the trip in ten hours.

Automobilists of Sullivan County, N. Y., were given a treat recently when two garage keepers in Monticello started a gasoline war. At one time the price of the oil was down as low as one cent a gallon, and motorists from all over the county were supplying themselves at this figure.

Automobile day will be a distinctive part of the Tompkins County Fair, which will be held in Elmira, N. Y., on September 18th, 19th and 20th. Several automobile races will be run off and there will be a number of novel driving stunts.

Reliability Tour.

The Waupaca County Motor Club has been organized in Wisconsin, with headquarters at Waupaca. The club has been formed directly as the result of the influence of the first Wisconsin State reliability tour, held by the Wisconsin State Automobile Association, July 18 to 23. Waupaca was one of the principal cities on the route.

FRANKLIN MAN BACK AGAIN.

Ralph Hamlin Is Home from Visit to Factory and Pleasant Reunion of Agents.

Ralph Hamlin has returned from the Franklin factory at Syracuse, N. Y. The 1911 line of the air-cooled cars looks good to the local agent, who is to sell them again this coming season. Hamlin claims he has a score of 1911 orders waiting to be filled. He says he has more than that number, but is afraid his friends will not believe him if he states the exact number.

One of the interesting features of his Eastern trip was a reunion at the Franklin factory in which Hamlin and the other Franklin agents throughout the country were the guests of the Franklin factory officials at a big banquet. The crowd was afterwards driven about Syracuse in the new Franklin cars and later about twenty-six of them were loaded into a new seven-passenger Franklin torpedo and photographed.

"The Franklin factory is preparing for a rush of trade this coming season," said Hamlin yesterday. "We expect our greatest year in 1911. I am assured of early deliveries, but the demand is such already that those who are ordering now are to be the ones specially favored. I must make deliveries in the order in which deposits are received.

"The 1911 Franklin is a splendid car. It will do all that the other Franklins have done, and then some. The motor is a trifle more powerful, and the car is more refined in appearance."

SHETTLER WANTS MORE ROOM.

Apperson and Reo Agent Plans Handsome Garage on Pico Street and May Move Soon.

Plans for a new garage on Pico street, between Main and Hill streets, are being drawn for Leon T. Shettler, who owns the property on which he proposes to build a new home for Apperson and Reo cars. The structure will be of two stories, but the foundations will be strong enough to support five stories.

John W. Swan of San Diego has accepted a position with Leon T. Shettler as manager of the San Francisco branch of the Apperson. Shettler says he expects to open a retail branch of the Apperson in Fresno. Shettler has been delivering 1911 Apperson cars in the last few weeks.

The 1911 Apperson line will embrace the "Baby Jack," four-cylinder thirty-horsepower model, the "Little Jack," four-cylinder, forey-horsepower, seven-passenger car and the "Big Jack," four-cylinder seven-passenger touring car. There are practically no changes in the new 1911 Apperson cars. The factory is allowing a choice of semi-elliptic and three-quarters elliptic springs on the two larger Apperson models.

TOURS IN A PETREL.

Goddard and Party Drive to San Francisco and Way Places in Friction-Driven Machine.

R. E. Goddard and son of this city have returned from a trip to San Francisco in their Petrel touring car. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. W. Rosse and the car carried 400 pounds of baggage. The trip was made without a sign of trouble and without a puncture.

Starting early the first day of the trip they proceeded by easy stages to Bakersfield, Merced, Tracy, Folsom, to San Francisco. Some of the roads were rough but for the most part they were in fair condition. Making San Francisco their headquarters the Goddard party took a number of side trips, and visited the Presidio, Golden Gate Park, the upper bay country and then drove to San Mateo.

The Petrel "30" was driven home by way of the coast route. San Luis Obispo was reached the second day. Goddard says the Petrel is the first friction-driven car to go over the course he chose. The car has been driven about 6500 miles without ever having had to stop for engine trouble. He says he is convinced of the practicability of the friction drive.

GREATEST YEAR EVER.

Young of the Columbia Agency Returns from the East With News of the Automobile World.

A. M. Young, of the firm of Bireley & Young, has returned from the Columbia factory after a month's absence in the East. He says he knows more about the gigantic scope of the automobile industry now than he ever did before. He is amazed at the ramifications of the trade which he says is facing its most successful year.

While at the Columbia factory, Young looked over the 1911 cars and is pleased with what the Columbia people have turned out. He says the changes are to be slight, so slight in fact that the Columbia may be said to have become standardized. He is finishing up his 1910 business and will have a clean bill of health to show at the end of the coming month.

"Things are happening fast in the East just now," said Young, yesterday. "We are facing one of the greatest years we have ever seen and it means much for the automobile industry as every factory is increasing its output. I don't see any immediate need to worry about over-production as that phase of the industry is being well taken care of.

"The Columbia line for the coming season looks good. The changes are slight and only amount to a few refinements. The Columbia is standardized and it will not be necessary for 1909 and 1910 owners to purchase new cars to be in style."

The newest thing on earth is a map for aëroplanists. It shows the face of the world as a bird sees it when flying. The first section covers New England, from Portland, Me., and Burlington, Vt., to Bridgeport, Conn.

SAND BATTLE.

PHOENIX RACE RULES READY.

Cars Must Start and Finish Under Own Power.

May Be Hauled Miles Across Sands by Mules.

Motors Are to Be Parked at Ehrenberg Control.

Special rules for the Los Angeles-Phoenix race, one of the hardest road contests ever held, have been drafted. The cars are to start on the night of November 5, from in front of the Hollenbeck Hotel. The last car is to leave at midnight. John S. Mitchell is the referee at this end and George P. Bul[illegible]d will look after things at the Phoenix end. The race will be held under the auspices of the Maricopa Automobile Club and it is probable that a sanction will be obtained from the American Automobile Association.

The route has been specially mapped this year. Cars must go over the lower road through El Monte and Puente and Pomona to Ontario, striking the upper road through Cucamonga to San Bernardino. Beaumont and Banning must be passed and the real desert work will be begun at Whitewater. The cars are to be parked at Ehrenberg, the same as last year, and leave the second morning of the race in the order in which they arrive on the California side. A gasoline ferry will carry them across the Colorado River.

Following is a summary of the rules: The Los Angeles-Phoenix road race will start from the Hollenbeck Hotel. The last car is to leave at midnight, November 5, all cars to leave five minutes apart. The choice of time to start will be decided by drawing numbers from a hat, said drawing to be held November 5 at 11 noon.

The official route shall be north on Main street to intersection of Main street; thence on Main to the following towns: El Monte, Puente, Pomona, Ontario, Upland, Cucamonga, San Bernardino, Beaumont, Palm Springs, Indio, Mecca, Dos Palmas, Chuckawalla, Ehrenberg, Buckeye and Phoenix.

MULE POWER.

Entrants may use any means in their power to cover the course, except that of being transported by railroad trains. Each car must start and finish the race under its own power.

The only protest that may be considered must be based upon evidence that a car did not pass through every town mentioned or for failure to live up to the conditions of the rule regarding start and finish.

Each entrant must deposit a certified check for $250 for each car entered. If any entrant fails to race as far as [illegible], he shall forfeit his entrance fee, which shall be divided between those finishing first and second.

Cars shall be protected from interference by the authorities while in the territory of Arizona. Entries for the race shall close at 12 o'clock noon, October 22.

There is to be no return race over the course under the auspices of the Maricopa Automobile Club before November [illegible], without the written signature of a majority of the entrants to the race of 1910.

TRACK RACES.

All of the entrants arriving in Pheonix are to enter their cars in one or more of the races on the track of the Arizona Fair Association, to be run on Saturday of the fair week, for purses to be arranged hereafter.

Owners of cars entering the race or at the Arizona Fair Association in Phoenix shall be permitted to make needed repairs on their cars. This may be amended October 22.

It is agreed that all cars shall be held in the Ehrenberg control on the west side of the Colorado River until November 7, and will be checked out five minutes apart, in the same order in which they entered the control on the east side of the river.

Arrangements shall be made, if possible, to permit the cars to pass through San Bernardino at high speed, and checkers will be stationed at Pomona, San Bernardino, Dos Palmas and [illegible].

For Better Roads.

Automobilists who tour through Canada will be pleased to learn that the Automobile Club of Canada has entered into an agreement with the farmers along the route for the improvement of the highway from Montreal, via St. Johns, to Rouse's Point, N. Y. The road extends along the Richelieu River, is lined with good farms and villages, and is the main route over which automobilists and tourists enter or leave Canada from the United States.

Palace Car.

The French chocolate king, M. Menier, owns a wonderful motor car, which is a small hotel on wheels. It is divided into two parts, bed-sitting room, with secret folding beds, and a dining-room and kitchen, with every accessory for toilet and cooking. It reminds one very much of the [illegible] flat on wheels owned by [illegible] Fabrequez, the well-known millionaire automobile manufacturer of [illegible].

This handsome low-priced machine is taken on the desert of Arizona during a hunting expedition. The owners have paused for a rest at a Navajo Indians' tepee.

HOME AGAIN.

NEW CADILLAC MAKES BIG HIT.

DON LEE RETURNS WITH NEWS OF NINETEEN-ELEVEN CAR.

Larger Motor and Increased Wheel Base With Longer Hood and Wider Radiator Adds to General Appearance of the Car and Gives It a More Attractive Finish.

Since the announcement of the Cadillac "Thirty" was made, in 1908, the automobile world has been specially interested in the plans of the Cadillac Motor Car Company. Several important changes in the 1911 model show that the expectations of those who have awaited a larger motor and a classier car are to be fulfilled. Don Lee, the local Cadillac agent, has returned from the factory with the news of the changes.

In principle the Cadillac motor remains the same. It is four-cylinder, four-cycle, with the cylinders cast separately. They are copper water-jacketed, and the crank shaft has five bearings and cam shafts. A special Schebler carburetor has been adopted for the new car.

In a general way, the new Cadillac "Thirty" is a larger car throughout than the model which immediately preceded it. The cylinder bore is increased from 4¼ to 4½ inches—with an increase (A.L.A.M. rating) to 32.4 horsepower. The pistol stroke remains 4½ inches.

Two complete and independent ignition systems are provided, each with an individual set of spark plugs to insure its highest efficiency. The magneto is the Bosch high-tension, and the other ignition source is the new and improved Delco system, with single unit coil, high-tension distributor and controlling relay. Either is capable of operating the car independent of the other. All electric wiring is enclosed in copper tubes.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Cadillac radiator was never deficient in cooling, it has been increased in size, so that it is more efficient than ever.

The size of the cone clutch—which remains of exclusive Cadillac design and construction—has been increased, giving thoroughly positive action and greater ease of operation. It is possible to remove the clutch, if need be, without disturbing any of the connecting members.

A feature of the 1911 car is the full floating type Timkin roller bearing rear axle. The brake drums, with contracting and expanding double-acting brakes, have been increased in size.

The wheel base has been lengthened from 110 to 116 inches.

A double drop of 2½ inches in the frame sets the body lower, and, with the larger tonneau and the longer hood, improves the appearance of the car.

Tire sizes on the touring car, roadster, demi-tonneau and coupé remain 34x4 inches; on the limousine 43x4½ inches.

The 1911 equipment included in the price of $1700 is as follows: Bosch magneto and Delco system; two gas headlights and generator; two oil dash lamps and oil tail lamp; horn, set of tools and pump and tire repair outfit; sixty-mile, season and trip speedometer; robe rail, full foot rail in tonneau and half foot rail in front; tire holders.

STODDARD NEARING ATLANTIC.

Lombards Are Toasted at Banquet Given at Dayton by Heads of Stoddard Factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lombard, who left Los Angeles to drive to New York in a Stoddard-Dayton, should reach their destination this week. The pair drove out of Chicago Monday morning and, allowing for a number of stops en route, they should reach the Atlantic Coast not later than Saturday night of this week.

Upon reaching Indianapolis the Lombards were greeted by Carl Fisher, Stoddard representative there, and a number of Stoddard-Dayton owners who came up from Dayton, eighty-five miles away. A banquet tendered by the officials of the Stoddard factory was given in honor of the Lombards at Dayton.

On the trip into Dayton a parade of more than thirty cars escorted the transcontinentalists. The Californians were given a rousnig welcome in the Stoddard's home town and the autoist told of the remarkable trip during the after-dinner talks at the banquet.

The trip of the 1908 Stoddard has been uneventful, with the exception of an occasional rainstorm and the bucking of muddy roads.

AFTER GOOD ROADS.

Drastic Methods Employed by Massachusetts Highway Builders Bring Great Success.

The Massachusetts Highway Commission is going to make an example of some of the motorists who refuse to slow down and use caution while passing along where repairs are being made on the State highways. Several cases have come up where workmen were hurt and part of the road had to be gone over again through fault of operators who were in too much of a hurry. Now there is a prospect of suspensions and revocations of licenses.

Another long step toward the completion of the Massachusetts system of trunk-line State roads is being made this summer, and when the contracts that have been made are finished, about fifty miles will have been added to the network of first-class highways extending the length and breadth of the Commonwealth. The total mileage will then be considerably more than 800, and it will be possible to travel between all the principal cities without leaving State roads, except for short stretches.

MITCHELL TAKES THE TIP.

Magneto on One Side of Engine and Carburetor on the Other—Foreign Trade.

Though a number of automobiles, perhaps the majority, have the magneto and carburetor on the same side of the engine, the Mitchell factory has departed from what has almost become a rule. The carburetor of the Mitchell is on the right side and the magneto is on the left. By such an arrangement there is practically no danger of a short-circuit in the neighborhood of the carburetor.

When the Mitchell company first began exporting American-made automobiles to France, a snag was struck. The laws of the European countries will not permit of the operation of a car with the carburetor and magneto on the same side. This rule has resulted in keeping a number of American cars out of the countries across the sea.

This has been a big season for the Mitchell in France. The headquarters of the selling force is in Paris, and there are agencies in all the other important cities of the republic.

The resolutions state that O. The contest board members claim that such action is prejudicial to sport and to the automobile industry of the country. The Premier president does not agree with them, and argues that he has a perfect right to take such action. He says he only wants justice.

Much Money.

In Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa, 427 banks report that about $15,000,000 has been withdrawn for the purpose of buying autos. In Iowa, singly, since January 1 this year, it is figured $6,000,000 has been spent on out-of-State cars. About eighty-three autos are said to have been purchased by citizens of that State each day for the past three months, a total of 9960. Probably in the entire United States over $100,000,000 has been paid out for automobiles during the first six months of this year.

Baker Electric on Summit of Elysian Park Hill.

Chord, who drove the car up the grade, is taking a snapshot of the surrounding country. The Baker is the first electric to make the climb.

MAKES RECORD.

TRIAL RUN OF BAKER ELECTRIC TAKES CAR UP ELYSIAN GRADE.

FOR the first time in the history of local automobile history a Baker electric was driven to the summit of Elysian Park, through Griffith Park and back to the Stoddard-Dayton garage, yesterday. Mrs. S. M. Chord was at the wheel.

The trip was an experiment. It resulted from an argument in which Norman W. Church, coast representative for the Stoddard and agent for the Baker, declared the new shaft drive Baker could be driven to the summit of Elysian Park, through the hills and back to the Stoddard home on one charge of juice.

The car was taken from the floor. It is a new machine which Mrs. Chord just purchased. It made the trip to the top of the hill overlooking the eastern side of the city in thirty-one minutes. This is fast time considering the car was driven through the city traffic along Broadway, through the tunnel and out to the park.

The new Baker electrics can be ordered with the regular or the new Edison battery. It was the stock charge which took the Baker over the hills and far away and when the machine returned it had juice enough to make the run to the beach and back. Church claims the car will do 100 miles easily on one charge.

ANOTHER PLAN.

NOVEL DEVICE BY LOCAL MAN.

FRICTION TRANSMISSION WORKS TO ADVANTAGE.

Bleitz Mode of Transmitting the Power of Gasoline Motor Meets With Approval of Several Mechanics and Manufacturing Circles Are Interested.

L. R. Bleitz of Los Angeles has invented a friction transmission which takes the palm for originality and may be important to automobile manufacturing circles. The inventor has done away entirely with the ordinary modes of transmitting the power from a gasoline engine, and has devised a friction transmission, for slow and reverse speeds, with a direct drive on the high speed.

He has done away with gears and clutch. The invention appears to be fool-proof. It is almost impossible to stall the engine with the Bleitz transmission in use. The best part of the proposition is that the entire thing is to be made at a price within the means of all auto owners.

Mechanicians who have examined the Los Angeles man's invention pronounce it a success. It is being used in a Mitchell car and yesterday Bleitz drove the car all over town stopped and started the machine, and showed his control over the motor. While running down Broadway on the high speed Bleitz threw the engine over into the reverse speed and spun the rear wheels backward. The car came to a stop and then started back up the hill on the reverse speed.

The Bleitz transmission is a friction drive on slow and reverse, but is direct drive on the "high." A few of the advantages of this peculiar form of transmitting the power is that the slow speed is taken from the outer edge of the disc. When the high is used the shaft is locked into a direct drive, which gives the motor a chance to show its power, and the frictional part of the transmission is not used.

The driver of the friction discs is a fiber which is the softer of the two and it is practically impossible to wear a flat surface on the friction part of the transmission. With this transmission speeds higher than direct can be obtained on smooth roads. This means that a fourth speed can be obtained for fast work when necessary.

According to Bleitz, it is possible to drop either from low or high into the reverse without injuring the transmission. The reverse can thus be used as a brake and for an emergency stop.

Jacob's Ladder.

The new State highway, that eliminated the climb over Jacob's Ladder, Pittsfield, Mass., the bane of motorists touring the Berkshires, is already showing signs of breaking up, and, unless something is done very soon, it will be in a bad way, according to motorists, who have passed over it recently. This road, when finished, practically completed the through highway from the Atlantic Ocean to the New York State line. New York engineers are now completing their part of the road that meets the Massachusetts highway at the boundary line separating the two States, and Bay State motorists in the western part of the State are anxious to have the road swinging around Jacob's Ladder continued in good condition.

STODDARD FIGHTS FIRE.

Citizens of Ogden Purchase Automobile Fire Engine and Motor Car, Beats Horses to Blaze.

A thirty-horse-power Stoddard-Dayton, with chemical tank and hose equipment, has been installed by the city of Ogden, Utah, for fire-fighting purposes. Experiments recently made in Ogden showed conclusively that the automobile is far ahead of the horse-drawn vehicle for reaching fires. The Stoddard, in several tests, reached the fires and once had them extinguished before the horse-drawn fire engines arrived.

The Stoddard showed remarkable speed on these tests, making as high as forty miles an hour with its full equipment of fire-fighting apparatus. The car carries 1000 feet of hose, besides the regular chemical tanks and five men are accommodated on the machine.

When the alarm of fire is given, all that is necessary is to crank the engine and start for the blaze. It is understood now by the citizens of Ogden that the Stoddard is certain to be the first piece of fire apparatus to reach a fire and it is now taken as a matter of course that the automobile should beat the horses.

REGAL'S CLEAN SCORE.

Finishes St. Paul Endurance Contest Without Penalty and Is Awarded Special Honors.

E. S. Anthony, agent for the Regal, has received the news of a Regal victory. In a telegram from Arthur La Roche, the local agent is advised that the car entered in the St. Paul and Minneapolis endurance run had finished with a perfect score. The run was completed Tuesday night and the Regal finished without a penalty.

"During the entire trip," wires La Roche, "the Regal crew did not find it necessary to break the seals on the tool bag. The Regal was the only car in its class to escape a penalty and we are proud of the performance of the thirty horse power car."

The run was unusually severe. The course had not been chosen because of the smooth roads. It led over mountain passes and through a country where there are no roads to speak of. Some of the conditions resembled those encountered by the cars on the recent Glidden tour.

La Roche is a driver of experience and handled his car carefully, though he made fast time every day. The roads were deep in dust in many places and it was almost impossible to find the chuckholes until the car was almost in them.

This car will add new lustre to an honorable name

THE most valuable asset the Cadillac Company possesses is its good name—a good name which is not merely the result of popular caprice but has been earned by what the car has done and what it has been. The Cadillac is, as you know, unique in the kind things that are said, and thought, and felt about it by thousands of people.

This good name, and the extraordinary good will which it has engendered everywhere, we interpret as an obligation to build a car so fine as to remove itself automatically from the likelihood of competition.

For 1911, therefore, our first thought—our one and only thought, in fact—has been to satisfy that widespread and implicit confidence which always expects the exceptional from the Cadillac.

We believe we are justified in saying that in this larger, more powerful, more luxurious car, the Cadillac organization has surpassed itself.

In spite of ten years of devoted adherence to the manufacturing principle that any one of ten thousand Cadillacs should be interchangeable in its parts with any other Cadillac of the same type, we were not ready so short a time as twelve months ago to build a car as worthy and as wonderful as this.

Manufacturing plants, like men, must fit themselves to do truly great things. Even with a system of standardization which has no equal in the world and which insures an absolutely perfect alignment of parts and the almost final elimination of friction, the value of 1911 was not possible in 1910.

You are receiving now, we verily believe, the most advanced type of exact and scientific motor car manufacture which the industry has produced.

Please co-operate with your Cadillac representative by the earliest possible inspection.

Important improvements in 1911 Cadillac "Thirty"

INCREASED POWER

Cylinder bore increased from 4¼ to 4½ inches. This, with more efficient carburetor (Schebler), which is water jacketed, effects a material increase in power. Piston stroke, 4½ inches. The four cylinders are cast singly, with copper jackets applied, retaining the exclusive Cadillac features throughout.

INCREASED COMFORT.

Wheel base increased from 110 to 116 inches, making the car ride easier than ever.

IMPROVED APPEARANCE

Double drop frame, 2½ inch drop, which makes the car set lower, and this with the larger hood and more roomy tonneau, greatly improves the appearance.

LARGE RADIATOR

The radiator is slightly larger, hence has greater cooling capacity. This is notwithstanding the fact that the Cadillac was never deficient in that respect.

TIMKEN AXLE..

Full floating type. Timken roller bearing rear axle. This is the sam axle as used on a number of America's highest priced cars.

LARGER BRAKE DRUMS

More powerful brakes, more easily applied and greatly increased efficiency. Contracting and expanding double acting brakes, both equalized.

TWO IGNITION SYSTEMS

Two complete and independent ignition systems, each with its own set of spark plugs. The two ignition systems consist of Bosch high tension magneto and the new and improved Delco system with single unit coil, high tension distributor and controlling relay. Either system alone is efficient for operating the car

ENCLOSED WIRING

All electrical wiring enclosed in copper tubes.

COPPER MANIFOLDS

Copper manifolds are used for water inlets and outlets in the circulating system.

REMOVABLE CLUTCH

Clutch may be removed in a very few minutes without disturbing other members.

GOOD FISHING.

landed. Joe Truitt of this city yanked out nineteen pounds of barracuda, Thursday morning. The little pier was occupied by about fifty anglers, none of whom failed to get at least a fair catch.

Good-sized mackerel were the chief attraction at the Redondo wharf, although a few wise anglers, who dropped their lines from the power-plant wharf, really got the best returns in large hauls of choice surf. The warm water that runs into the ocean from the power-plant wharf seems to be especially attractive to the surf fish, and they have been congregating about the piling. The hand-full of Waltonites who were "next" to this information had much better luck than the fellows who walked the beach and went after the surfsters in the legitimate way.

The fishermen who cast from the beach as a rule have nothing but scorn for the anglers who drop their lines from the pier.

"There's more sport in buying fish than there is in getting them off a wharf," said a stout person who was casting from the beach below Manhattan. "This is the only way"—and then he whipped his line far into the breakers with a dextrous twist. But he only had three fish to show for more than an hour's patient work, but he was certain "they would soon start to come." He said he hadn't missed a day on the beach for two weeks, and that ten to fifteen fish usually constituted his morning catch.

On any of the piers the man or woman who is held in contempt by his fellow anglers is the one who is constantly changing his position on the pier along the railing. When somebody makes a good catch it is not an uncommon sight to see several persons in the neighborhood draw up their lines and cast right alongside of the fellow who has just had good luck. This practice was very common on the concrete wharf last week. Many people do not realize that in the long run one place is just about as good as another, and they keep jumping from one side of the wharf to the other, making several round trips along the pier in a morning.

The old-timers at Santa Monica are lamenting because overhead casting is prohibited. An old soldier, after giving his line a dinky little underhand toss, remarked, as his bait disappeared in the water: "I've never had much luck since they made us cut out the overhead casting. But"—and he sighed—"I guess it's best for the women and children. I suppose somebody would have an eye gouged out if he had hooks and sinkers whirled all over the pier."

Al Green, the veteran angler of Santa Monica, and "Louis," the Redondo expert, believe that the good fishing will continue for several weeks.

"There is no reason why good catches shouldn't continue to be the order of the day all this month," said Green. "The weather conditions are just right, and the water couldn't be better."

The day before, July 15, a ten-point buck was brought into camp by Stewart of Big Pine. The animal dressed about 150 pounds, and was equipped with nine points on one side and ten on the other.

The entire region along the divide is in the land of perpetual snow, which lies in patches and fields in sheltered ravines and along the slopes of the higher summits. The snow in winter is heavy enough to drive the deer out; they go east to the White Mountain country on the east side of Owens Valley. In the White Mountains a few mountain sheep are also reported, though they are not numerous. Bear are fairly common along the divide, and particularly along the upper reaches of the Kern River.

THE DEER BELT.

The best deer hunting is found in the timber belt, at an elevation of from 8000 to 11,000 feet. The timber begins at about 7000 feet, and the upper timber line runs about 12,000 feet. Jim Jeffries is planning to go to Big Pine about August 20. Before his recent argument with Jack Johnson he wrote asking that a mule be bought for him—he was particularly anxious of having a fine animal ready for his use. The mule was duly bought, and Prichard, who rode the animal himself on his trip named her Maud Jeffries—says it is a fine animal. He tells a story of a prior selection.

The first mule picked out seemed good and the guide who had made the choice got Jeffries on the long distance 'phone and told him of the purchase. That was after the fight. The mule was sound, strong, and gentle, and the price was right. Jeff said it would do first rate, but just as he was going to hang up the receiver he thought of something.

"What color is he?" he asked.

"Black," was the answer.

"I don't want him," said Jeffries.

TO THE ENDS OF THE EARTH.

Hudson Cars Are Shipped to Cairo, the British West Indies and the South Sea Islands.

The continent-wide scope of the Hudson Motor Car Company's selling campaign has recently been exemplified by the appointment of agents in Canada; Havana,, Cuba, Cairo, Egypt and the British West Indies and South America. This territory embraces practically the entire civilized world. Cars are to be shipped to all of these points in the 1911 season.

B. S. Wilson, of Montreal, has just returned from a visit to the Hudson factory, where he signed a contract for 100 cars for his city. The Hudson is securing a firm hold in Canada and it is expected that several thousand will be disposed of in the Dominion of Canada this coming year.

The Hudson is being sold in Cuba. J. M. Duenas is the agent there. He has signed up for another year's business and expects to handle the car on the island. He states that the prospects for 1911 are even better than in 1910.

Perhaps the longest shipment made by the Hudson people is that of a car billed for Cairo, Egypt, which left the factory last week. By special arrangement a traveling salesman from the Hudson company will spend the coming season in Egypt, the British West Indies and South America.

f Slavin, Friday, was the y observed flight made by of the club and will go ord as such, although lf and two others made in private.

in is repairing his machine, attention of the club members centers in the Eaton-Twining monoplane, which has skipped on the ground. A new propellor with greater pitch has been put on and with this it is believed flight will be accomplished even with the comparatively light horsepower Ford engine.

The Greer Brothers' monoplane has skipped over the ground also and is expected to do better work in the next two weeks. The Greer-Robbins biplane of the Farman type was tried out by builder George Deussler a few days ago. A sudden shock to the machine when it struck a rut threw Deussler against a projecting piece of frame-work and cut his nose across the bridge.

William Stevens has his monoplane ready for an engine. Buel H. Green has the contract for building a special eighty-horsepower machine of a type original with Stevens and drafted by Green, but the difficulty of securing materials and delay in construction has caused a postponement of delivery. Stevens's machine is considered the finest one in the work in construction; it cost $5000 without the engine. Already $3100 has been expended on the engine and more is needed.

E. J. Campbell is building a Farman type chassis, his second attempt, the first being experimental.

GAME NEEDS.

ary 15 would be better. At present the season does not close until February 15.

"It would do no harm to any one to have that last two weeks' shooting stopped, for there is no sport during that time. But the promiscuous banging away of the late hunters annoys the mating birds and drives them away. Every effort should be exerted to induce the birds to stay here instead of migrating."

MUST ALSO DESTROY.

Though the conservation of animal and bird life is the primary object of the bureau which Dr. Palmer heads, destruction of such life under certain circumstances also devolves upon that bureau.

Great aid has been rendered this county by the Federal authorities in their efforts to keep out the English sparrow. When the Supervisors appropriated money to destroy the colonies of English sparrows along the lines on the Southern Pacific through the northern part of the county some years ago, the work could only be partially done because an invasion of birds was threatened by way of the Santa Fé lines and the authorities could not go outside of this county to fight. Then the Federal authorities stepped in and destroyed the birds as far north as Mojave.

"There is no reason why the English sparrow should not be exterminated entirely in Southern California," continued Dr. Palmer. "These birds have not gained much of a foothold because of the fact that the desert acts as a barrier. There is a small colony at Newhall, however, which was established long ago. From time to time birds have been reported in this city and they probably came down from Newhall.

"It is of the greatest importance that the pests be kept out of here, for they would do havoc to the citrus fruit. They are too firmly entrenched in the northern part of the State to be successfully combated, but they can be kept out of Southern California."

There are fifty bird and game preserves in the United States and its possessions which come directly under the supervision of Dr. Palmer. The Hawaiian Island reserve, commonly known as the Bird Island Reserve, where Japanese poachers have been barbarously slaughtering sea birds for years, are being jealously guarded by the Federal authorities and the extermination of these beautiful sea fowls has been successfully stopped.

Eternal vigilance is the watchword of Dr. Palmer and his assistants. Every incoming ship must be watched, for aboard may be the mongoose, that innocent-looking little beast which has wrought fearful havoc among the wild birds of Hawaii, as well as among the barnyard fowls of that sunny clime. There are other animals to be looked out for and the habits of these beasts must be studied so that it can be decided what can be admitted and what cannot.

HAYNES

Let Us Prove This the Best "Buy" in an Automobile

We make the statement that the Haynes at $2150 is the best possible "buy" you could find in an automobile.

But you do not need to take our word for it. Let us prove it.

Have us give you a demonstration. If you are not an expert—bring an expert with you. Look at the lines of the Haynes. Study its construction. Judge by its performance.

You do not even need to abide by what we say about the Haynes—at our show rooms nor on a try-out. We urge you to ask any Haynes owner about his car. Or ask any man well informed about automobiles.

Do not merely ask if the Haynes is a good car for $2150. Ask if, considered from every standpoint, you could make a more sensible purchase than a Haynes. In construction, durability, economy, performance, reliability—in every feature—no maker can give you more than you get in a Haynes, regardless of price.

The Haynes is the product of the oldest automobile manufacturers in the United States. Elwood Haynes built the first successful American automobile. He was the first manufacturer here or abroad to use nickel steel—first to employ aluminum in motor cars—first to use a magneto—first to use roller bearings.

The Haynes organization never has built anything but a high-class car. Before building the $2150 Haynes they had never made a car for less than $3000. So much for experience and reputation.

Haynes cars have won 41 first prizes, medals and perfect scores in 41 consecutive tests—proof of the makers' persistent adherence to a solely high-grade policy.

No other car, American or foreign, at any price, can show a like record in contests of all kinds.

And yet, this handsome, classy, luxuriously appointed, roomy, 5-passenger Haynes sells for only $2150. It could not be made better for double the price.

The Haynes experience, and a five-passenger car instead of a seven, are responsible for the low cost.

When you buy a Haynes car you get a car with everything in it or on it worth having in an automobile—and you still do not pay too much for your car.

It is the only car of established reputation selling at a moderate price.

Mind you, we don't ask you to take our word for the Haynes merits. Nearly any one can tell you.

But we do urge you to call NOW and examine the cars—let us take you out for a trial spin.

DEL MONTE PLANS.

STARS MAY COME WEST.

Beals C. Wright and N. W. Niles, the two eastern tennis cracks, rated among the best in the country, may compose the eastern team to invade the Pacific Coast championships, to be held at Del Monte early in September. The invasion of the easterners last year was short lived as Niles was put out before he got to the semi-finals.

McLoughlin put out Wright, a week ago, at the Longwood tournament with comparative ease, and it is predicted he will win still easier on his own style of courts out here. The grass courts used altogether in the East are an incumbrance to McLoughlin's and Long's style of play, as they both rely on their terrific drives and overhead smashes, while the easterners play a slower, more conservative game.

Long, who will probably play with him in the doubles, also is playing the game of his life, as he defeated all comers in the clay court championships at Omaha this last week. Both will be at their best when they get together on the cement courts in the north, and will stand a good chance of besting the easterners, especially in the doubles, as they were the international representatives last year.

May Sutton and Hazel Hotchkiss are in a class by themselves and will be the only contenders for the championship as no eastern women will make the long trip. There are only a few women on the Atlantic Coast even the equal of Florence Sutton and Golda Myer, and the former should give both May and Hazel a run in defense of her championship.

Tob Bundy and Hendricks will probably be the Southern California entries in the doubles event, and are now on the way to Newport to play Hackett and Alexander for the national championships. The other Southern California entry, who will meet Wright and Niles, is Winnie Mace, present champion of this end of the State, and should give a good account of himself against the veterans.

The Shafer-Goode Motor Company has been notified that the shipment of Glide torpedoes on the way from the factory includes all five-passenger models. The gear shift lever is on the inside of the body and the construction is entirely different from any Glide now on the market.

Edison's New Battery

Notice to All Intending Buyers of Electric Automobiles

I you buy a car today that is not equipped with the Edison A-6 battery, or is not built to r ceive one, your car will be hopelessly out of date in another season.

The EDISON BATTERY is beyond all doubt the ultimate battery. Next season will see all makers scrambling for their quota of cells from the Edison factory.

The Edison battery has greater capacity; 225 ampere hours, as against 112 to 168 in the lead type.

Made of nickel and steel, with an anti-acid solution of potash and water, which assures it against corrosion, leakage or breakage.

Nothing in it to wear out.

Does not deteriorate; may lie idle for months without recharging.

It is not harmed by high-rate charging or overcharging.

Requires no care except to fill it with water once a week.

Per unit of capacity, the Edison weighs 50 per cent less than the lead batteries, which means less burden on the motor—less consumption of current—greater mileage efficiency.

The Detroit is the Only 1910 Electric Equipped t Carry the Edison A-6 Battery

The advantages of this battery are so decisive that any car not thus equipped can no longer be ran in the first class of electric car construction.

We are still selling lead batteries. It is up to you to make your choice, but every one of our mo may take the Edison later if so desired.

We believe that in fairness to you, you should know these vital facts about the electric storage batt before you buy.

Let us tell you why other makers and agents are not pushing and in consequence are "knocking" Edison battery. Just as soon as their contracts with lead battery manufacturers expire, watch their ch of tactics, and remember the Edison will be no better than now, for Edison has finished his work on battery and he states that he is more than pleased with the results accomplished. Edison has never posed upon the public with untried inventions. If you have confidence in his ability you will buy an Ed battery now.

THOMSON IS CONFIDENT.

Occidental Athlete Reaches Chicago in Prime Condition for All-Around Championship.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fred Thomson of Los Angeles, who will wear the colors of the Occidental College in the A.A.U. all-around championships August 13 at Marshall Field, arrived in Chicago yesterday and will finish his training at the Chicago-Avenue playgrounds with members of the C.A.A.

Thomson comes well recommended, and if looks are any criterion he has a good chance to win the greatest athletic title the A.A.U. can give. Thomson weighs 190 pounds in condition.

"I have been training for a month at Lake Geneva, and have come here to finish my work," said he. "I am right on edge now, and believe I will at least be the runner-up in the all-arounds, and have confidence in my ability to win. If I am beaten it will not be from lack of condition, as I realize this is a great chance to win the high honor and I am going after that."

M. A. Delaney, athletic instructor of the C.A.A., under whose auspices the meet is to be held, has received the assurance from Ellery H. Clark of the Boston A.A., that he would take part in the big meet one week from today.

Lennie Burrell, Vernon's Scrappy Third Baseman, whose single scored the first run for his team in yesterday's game and paved the way for a thirteenth-inning victory.

WHY IS IT?

VERNON AND ANGELS EQUAL, BUT HOGAN'S TEAM WINS.

THE fans throughout the State who have been watching the ups and downs of the Los Angeles and Vernon teams are very much inclined to believe that as the Vernon team is ahead of the Angels in the percentage column, that it must be the better team, but a little study of the averages of the various players on each team does not bear this out.

It is possible, but not necessary, to bring the batting and fielding averages of each man down to date as the figures at hand are accurate enough for the purposes of comparison. These show that there is little difference between the players, for while some excel others in the various positions, the difference is easily balanced by the good work of some man on the other team.

In the fielding line Daley is some points ahead of Stovall as a center fielder, both in batting and fielding, although the comparison is hardly just to Stovall, who was used as a pitcher in the early part of the season, and pitchers are generally the weakest men in each team in batting and fielding, as they are supposed to work but once a week and very naturally are not in constant practice. Stovall is just as aggressive as Daley and works even harder to win every game.

Carlisle has a shade on Murphy in hitting and fielding. He is a more spectacular fielder and hits harder. He has made four homers to one by Murphy and four triples while Murphy has none, their doubles being practically the same. Murphy says he is worrying through a batting slump, but the chances are that he has run against a much better lot of pitchers than he found in the Three-I league.

Of the right fielders Bernard is far ahead of Coy in both fielding and batting, for, although Coy has more hits, he has been at bat 135 times oftener than Bernard and has four more errors. However, Coy leads Bernard in long hits, having made three homers, one triple and twenty-five doubles, while Bernard has but one homer and nine doubles.

The general average of first basemen is about an even one, for although Kit Brashear leads Dillon and Wheeler a few points in te hitting, he has made practically three times as many errors. Dillon leads Brashear in total bases of long hits, although he has made but one-half as many homers as Kit.

Howard leads Roy Brashear in hitting as a second baseman, but is thirty points behind him in fielding. Roy has seventeen homers to four by Howard, but the latter has twenty doubles to one by Roy Brashear.

Burrell is just a trifle ahead of Roth as a third baseman, both in fielding and hitting, but Roth has been at bat about 200 more times than Burrell and has made twice as many errors. Their long hits are practically the same.

To the surprise of the fans it will be seen that Delmas actually leads Lindsay as a hitting shortstop and is far ahead of him in long drives, but is fifty points below Lindsay in fielding.

Of Hogan, Brown, Smith and Waring, Hap Hogan is the best fielder, but the weakest hitter of the four, but is better than all of them put together when it comes to understanding baseball and knowing what to do at the right time. He says he has but one eye and it would be interesting to watch what he could do if he had two. Waring is a very promising boy and if he improves as his friends believe he should be a star some day. Orendorff has been out of the game so long on account of an injury that it is hardly fair to compare him with the others.

Nagle is by far the best pitcher in the league, as he was when Dolly Gray and Groom were in the ranks. He is a better pitcher than Vernon has and even the position that the Angels hold in the race now is due to his good work. He has an able second in Tozer, while the others of the Angels are far behind in games won. Schafer, Castleton and Thorsen are about on a par around the .500 mark, while Carson is moving up gradually and is a very good twirler.

Dillon has had much hard luck with his players this season and for this reason has not made as good a showing as Vernon, and Dillon himself has been out of the game on various occasions. Even now he has Roth and Waring on the hospital list and Orendorff is just gradually coming back after a bad injury. His pitchers, however, have been out of form and in addition to this some of his men have not been hitting up to their usual form.

There is always more or less luck in baseball and from the position of the teams at present, one would imagine that the Vernon club has all the luck, but this is not the case. The figures show that the teams are about on an equality as far as men are concerned and there is no apparent reason why the Angels should not win as many games as the Vernons, but they do not.

Just why they do not the fans can start a guessing contest on.

Scout Is Brasheared.

Some scout from a big league club is said to be here looking over Bill Fisher and a story was going the rounds to the effect that when he saw Kitty Brashear hitting home runs and two baggers in Wednesday's game he arrived at the conclusion that Fisher was a very able ball player and the only objeceion he had to him was that he was a trifle too fat. Of course he was thinking that Brashear was Fisher.

TRIANGULAR.

FIVE YACHTS FOR THE GUN.

Sunset Club to Sail Race Off Long Beach.

Virginia Cup Is the Prize for the Contest.

Legs Two Miles Long to Be Covered Twice.

Five yachts of the Sunset Yacht Club are entered for the Virginia cup race, to be sailed off Long Beach this afternoon. They are Columbine, Mah-pe, Mischief I., Venus, and Olita. Other possible starters are Siwash, the new sloop that is being hurried to completion for Charles Fulton; Frank Hay's yawl Winsome, and the Diana.

The race is to be sailed over a triangular course, which the boats will cover twice. Each leg will be only two miles long, the first lying due southwest from the starting line. This will make a light-canvas race, as the boats will cover two legs of the course under extra racing sails.

While the Mah-pe, in a strong breeze, would stand the best chance of crossing the finish line ahead of her competitors, in the light airs that usually prevail the Columbine, Commodore Mitchell's boat, will very likely beat her out over the short course. The bigger boats will be at some disadvantage over the two-mile legs, since they will lose time with every shift of racing canvas. The Columbine is a fast drifter in light winds.

If the Siwash is ready in time for the race, she will be sent against the others in her first tryout, and will be an entirely unknown quantity until the race is sailed. Though yachting authorities think that she would stand a fair show of winning if she got into the race, there seems to be little likelihood that she will be ready in time for the start.

Handicaps have been figured under the Universal rule, which gives the following rating to the boats:

Yacht	Rating	Allowance per mile
Mah-pe	51.21	112.70 sec.
Siwash	44.60	133.90 "
Winsome	41.80	144.60 "
Columbine	40.32	150.80 "
Mischief I.	36.01	170.06 "
Olita	35.20	174.64 "
Diana	30.14	202.32 "
Venus	29.80	206.24 "

This gives the following handicaps for the Virginia race today:

Mah-pe	scratch
Siwash	4m. 22s.
Winsome	6m. 3s.
Columbine	7m. 6s.
Mischief I.	10m. 4s.

FEW ROAD RACES.

Fall Season Promises to Be Particularly Lively as Many Important Meets Are Planned.

So far this year no American road races have been run with the exception of an event in California, but the prospects are that this fall will see a series of brilliant contests. In a word, there will be a circuit starting in the West and winding up in the East, which will bring on five big road races within six weeks.

This was assured when it was announced that the Chicago Motor Club had selected August 28 and 29 for its two days of road racing at Elgin. Military protection will be secured for the Elgin races, and the course that is to be used will be the nine-mile circuit, which is exactly one mile west of the business center of the town.

The course is declared to be a remarkably fast one, there being no roads crossing it, while the roads are particularly wide and the ditches shallow. There are only four turns in the course, and one of these is a hairpin. At no place will it be necessary to shift a gear, unless perhaps at turning a corner. It is proposed, however, to bank these turns, and the chances are that the circuit will be good for seventy miles an hour by the time it is ready to race on.

Stovall's Excuse.

Jess Stovall declares that the Chutes grounds are the worst for him to play on in the league and that when he is in a game there he is pretty sure to play his worst ball and can do but little. No other park seems to affect him that way. His legs are not in the best of shape and he says he is liable to make all kinds of mistakes.

Berry Is Insistent.

Henry Berry of the Los Angeles team has received a telegram from San Francisco to the effect that more umpires for the Coast League might be appointed at any time as Ed Walters of the Oakland team was just about ready to vote for more, and if he does the league will surely get them.

SECOND ATTEMPT.

HOT CHARGES FROM FREETH.

Redondo Professional After So-Called Amateurs.

To Testify Before A.A.U. Against Swimmers.

Accused Athletes Deny All His Allegations.

George Freeth, the professional swimmer and water polo player, who holds the stage center in things athletic at Redondo, is on the warpath for the scalps of several "amateur" water dogs who are "bell cows" in the tank activities of the south and at the next meeting of the Southern Pacific Association of the A.A.U. he intends to unburden his mind of much "inside" information with the hope of swelling the professional ranks at the expense of the amateur division.

Freeth professes to have a van full of sensational information. He alleges that Andy Scholtz, who was declared a professional last year by the A.A.U., received free membership in the local Y.M.C.A. in exchange for his services on the association water polo team. Freeth asserts that Scholtz admitted to him that he was much sought by the Y.M.C.A. and that he accepted the inducement of free tuition as a reward for bolstering up the tank sextette.

According to an A.A.U. ruling, amateurs who compete with professionals forfeit their amateur standing, and Freeth says he intends to see that he is joined in the professional ranks by all the players in the Ocean Park-Y.M.C.A. water polo contest.

This "Ex." Easy.

Judging by the first batch of two of the questions put to chauffeurs who are being examined before being granted licenses in New York State, the practical ability to run a car properly and obey the rules of the road is the end which the examiners have in view. The questions are, for the most part, plain and practical. This being so, it is not surprising that the percentage of failures is only about two per cent. and many of those who fail to pass are foreigners.

to the only individual playground ball league in the city. The teams play on the mornings of Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

HAND TO HAND.

Among the exclusive features presented by the local playgrounds is a hand-to-hand balancing stunt claimed by the Thirtieth-street boys as original with them. One lad grasps the other's wrist, and by a sudden swing is balanced above the other, with his feet in the air.

McLellan has several youngsters who have become quite efficient in the feat, and one of them, Gilbert Neville, is to be starred on the stage in September.

Earl Harvey is another manikin who is "making good" in these acrobatic feats. Director McLellan considers him a wonder. This boy is 9 years of age and weighs but forty-five pounds. He does any number of tumbling stunts that are new and original.

The two lads mentioned are not the only ones, however, who are interested in the work. There is quite a flock of prospective acrobats under this director's wing.

Most play centers put the taboo on boxing contests, being of the mind that it is apt to breed quarrels and disagreements, but H. A. Hopkins, director of Thirty-seventh-street grounds, finds no trouble in teaching his protégés the manly art. Hopkins had quite a reputation as a boxer at Stanford, and the director is able to instruct his young pugilists with many good results.

STUCK ON THEMSELVES.

"We have won as many trophy cups as the next one," is the favorite slogan of the kid out at the Violet playgrounds, where Director Featherstone holds sway. Their teams are well up to the front in all the classes. Featherstone may organize a football team when the season opjens in September, as he played at the University of Michigan under the famous "Hurry Up" Yost, in '05.

THE BROTHERLY ACT.

The "Big Brothers'" Club of young men of the ages between 18 and 21, following the idea of Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver, is the feature of the Slauson grounds. Director Miller organized the club, together with numerous others. This club has organized special teams under its own name and plays regularly with outside teams.

Director Robson is in charge of the summer work at Recreation center. This is the only play center having bowling alleys and they are certainly worked to the limit. Regular weekly tournaments are pulled off on these alleys with one, three or five-boy teams. The gymnasium located here is the finest of the city playgrounds and hundreds of the little waifs find amusement here daily.

The East Fourteenth-street playgrounds are overpatronized, for here after a hard day's play are located plenty of well equipped shower baths. Director Osborne, when not filling his position as principal in Lugonia school, is in charge.

The Castelar vacation grounds, under the management of Director Spiers, has an excellent senior baseball nine, and just now is putting up a strong fight with the Echo leaders.

The girls at the Thirtieth-street grounds have organized a baseball team and selected for their leader and pitcher Lola Hitt, young sister of Roy Hitt of the Vernon team. Lola makes a splendid leader, and is a pitcher of no mean ability.

ON THE COURTS.

The many tennis courts about the city are filled daily with youthful aspirants, who find this game a splendid amusement for a day of exercise and fun. Not many public tennis courts can be found, but the hotels and clubs in the vicinity of the city have issued invitations to many of the youngsters of free use of their courts during the hours when the cracks cannot play.

The Mt. Washington Hotel is the first to give a tourney, with invitation to junior players only, play to begin next Friday.

Youthful aviators find a splendid place to fly their models out on the grounds at the end of the Washington-street car line. In almost any back yard where there are boys can be found some sort of an aeroplane which represents months of work to the maker. The regular contests held by the junior aero clubs afford plenty of amusement for these boys.

Of course, the beaches claim their usual large percentage of boys and girls, and this season the surf is literally filled all day long by them. Besides bathing, there is boating, fishing and the thousand and one other amusements for the lucky ones who can spend a vacation by the sea. Several Los Angeles boys have made the trip to Catalina by motorboat, thus far this summer, a trip that many older heads would not have the nerve to do. The trip takes anywhere from eight to twelve hours in good weather.

With the opening of the hunting season many youngsters, accompanied by their parents, have taken to the mountains after big game. Long trips are esily made in a course of two weeks by means of auto, or when plenty time is allowed the old camp wagon has been pushed into effective service. Rincon, Follow's, Orchard's, and many other mountain resorts close in are reported practically filled with youngsters, many of them roughing it for the first time.

SIMPLEX ENTRY IN DESERT RACE.

JED NEWKIRK PLANS TO DRIVE CAR OVER SAND.

Noted Autoist Comes All the Way from Chihuahua to Look Over the Nineteen-Eleven Models and Plans to Enter Old Car in Phoenix Run. Makes Two Good Sales.

Jed Newkirk, a well-known racing driver, is here to look over the new 1911 bodels of the Simplex cars which Oscar Werner has just received. There is a possibility that Newkirk may drive a Simplex in the Los Angeles-Phoenix race. He has a 1908 Simplex car which has been used in Mexico for two years. The car is owned by Donald B. Gillies, of Chihuahua, Mexico.

This car has been thoroughly tested on the worst roads of Chihuahua. It has been driven over hills by Newkirk, who is using the car to drive to and from the Santa Eulalia mine. He says he has carried as many as fifteen persons on the car without having had the slightest trouble.

On the run from Chihuahua to the mine the road is nothing but a series of gulleys and is covered with boulders. The wear on tires is severe but in spite of the strain the Simplex has held up and though Newkirk was miles away from a repair station many times he has always reached home.

The Los Angeles-Phoenix race looks so good to Gillies that he has sent Newkirk here to look over the 1911 line of Sibplex cars. He would purchase a new Simplex if he can get a five-passenger model in time and then would enter the older Simplex in the desert race.

Newkirk is an experienced sand driver. He knows desert roads and would be at home on the run into Arizona. There is no sand too deep, he says, for his Simplex car and he has high hopes of winning the contest if he goes into the race.

In the spring of 1907 Newkirk purchased two Simplex cars in New York for $5535. They were second hand. He had them shipped to Mexico and used them for two years. At the end of that time he sold one of the cars for $6000 and the other for $3000. This is perhaps one of the best automobile deals made by a private individual.

New Simplex cars are arriving each week at the Golden State garage. Werner says he is entirely sold out. He finished up the week yesterday with two sales, one to Grant G. Gillette, who purchased a five-passenger Simplex touring car, and another Simplex to G. F. Holbrook who also took a five-passenger model.

Hill-Climb.

The hill-climbing events of the Chicago Motor Club on Perry and Phillips Hills at Algonquin, Ill., have been postponed until August 11. The officials of McHenry county, in which Algonquin is located, caused delay by insisting that the club file a bond of $20,000 to protect the county against damage suits for possible accidents

RUN ON WATERMELONS.

Overland Wheelmen to Pedal to San Gabriel River Near Newmark.

Members of the Overland Wheelman's Club are to participate in a "watermelon run" next Sunday, from Fiesta Park to a point on the San Gabriel River near Newmark, a distance of about ten miles.

Plenty of watermelons are promised. The party expects to enjoy swimming in the San Gabriel. Aquatic contests are scheduled, including swimming races and diving events. The run is to be started from Fiesta at 8 o'clock in the morning. An open invitation has been issued to outside wheelmen to take part in the day's outing.

Iowa farmers established a world's record by building a road 380 miles long in one hour flat. Another remarkable thing about the building of the highway is that of the 10,000 men who did the work, not a single one of them received a penny for their services, they volunteering them in order to improve their property. The road extends from Council Bluffs to Davenport.

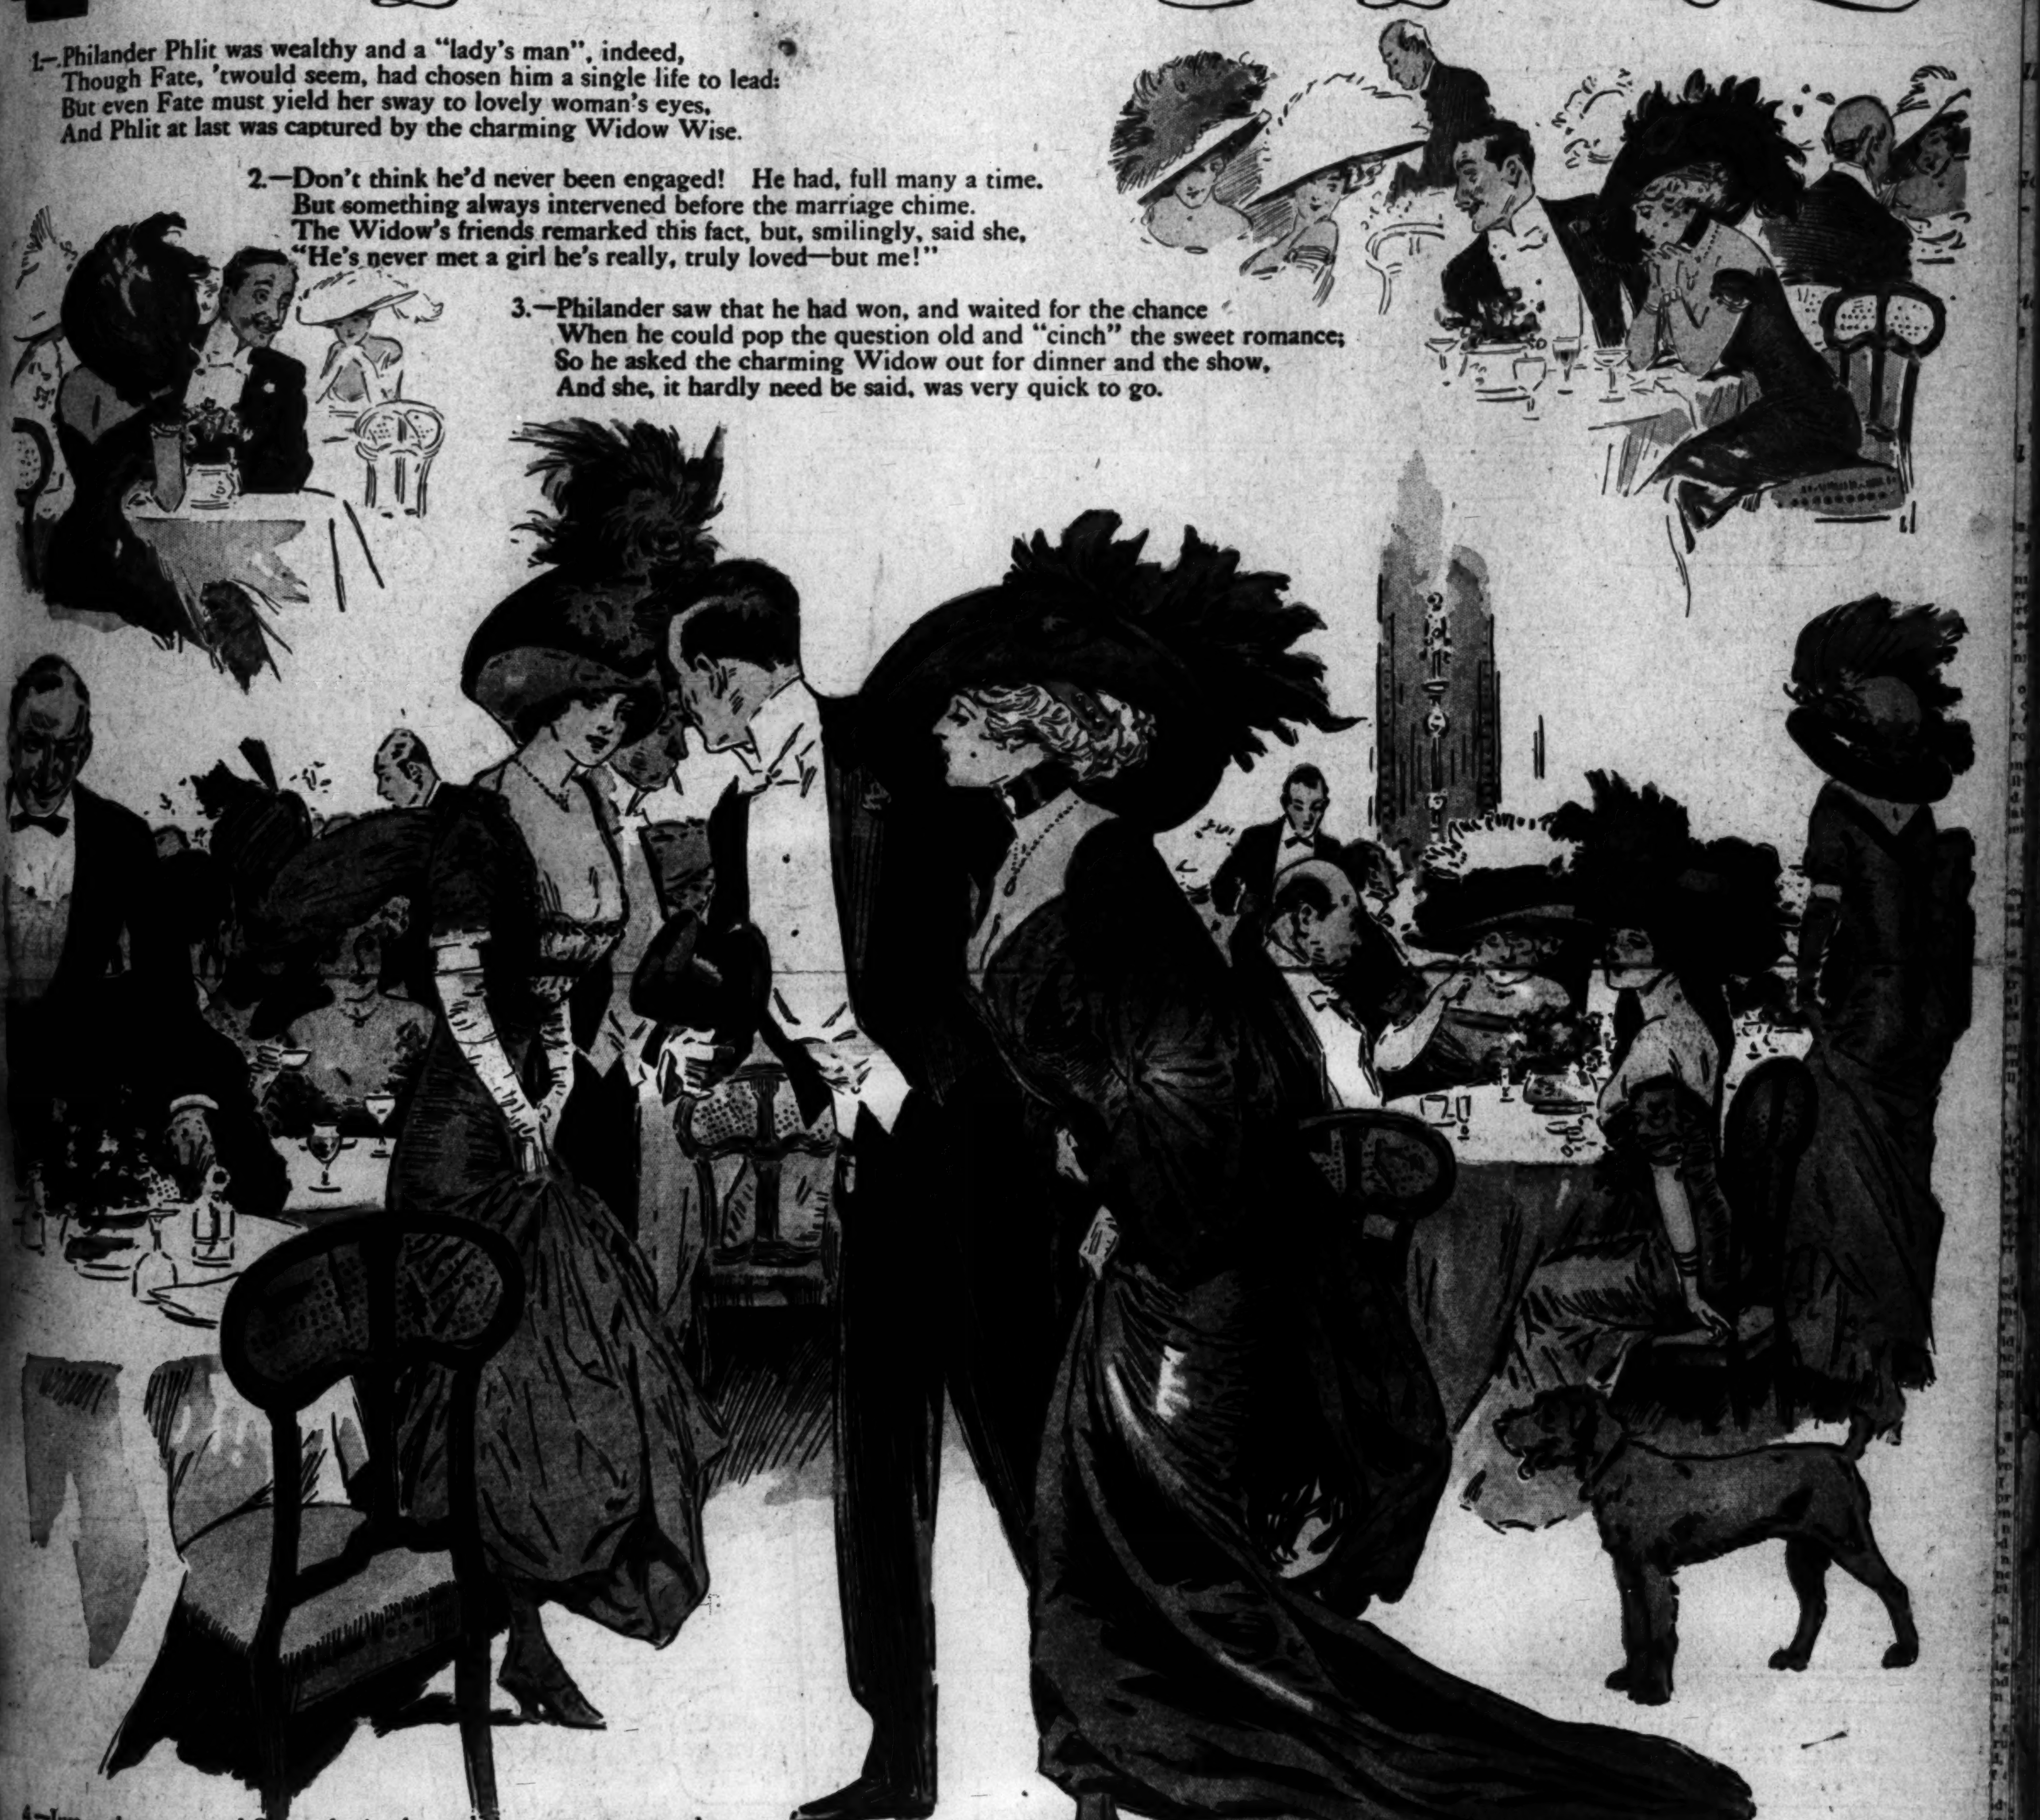
THE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis

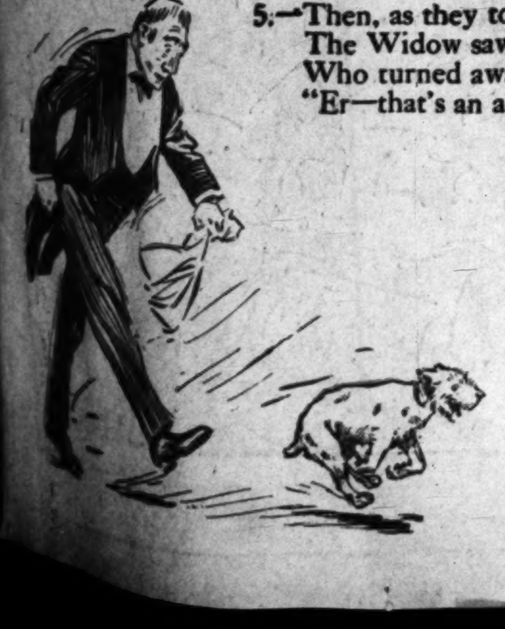


1.—Philander Phlit was wealthy and a "lady's man", indeed,
Though Fate, 'twould seem, had chosen him a single life to lead:
But even Fate must yield her sway to lovely woman's eyes,
And Phlit at last was captured by the charming Widow Wise.

2.—Don't think he'd never been engaged! He had, full many a time.
But something always intervened before the marriage chime.
The Widow's friends remarked this fact, but, smilingly, said she,
"He's never met a girl he's really, truly loved—but me!"

3.—Philander saw that he had won, and waited for the chance
When he could pop the question old and "cinch" the sweet romance;
So he asked the charming Widow out for dinner and the show,
And she, it hardly need be said, was very quick to go.

4.—Just as they entered Sherry's, in the stylish, gorgeous crowd
A tall brunette who passed them smiled and at Philander bowed.
"Who is she?" asked the Widow as the lady strolled away.
"Oh," said Philander, "that was just a former fiancee!"



5.—Then, as they took their places, at a table just beyond,
The Widow saw inspecting them a very charming blond,
Who turned away the moment that she caught Philander's eye.
"Er—that's an ancient flame," said he, "of days long since gone by."

6.—"Ah," thought the Widow proudly, "I am flattered; I can see That he forgets such pretty girls for little, simple me."
But suddenly she noted, as she let her glances stray,
That other ladies seemed to know her gallant fiance.

7.—"All old-time loves! Engaged? Oh, yes," he said when she demurred.
"I thought I loved them? Yes, of course; but now it seems absurd.
'Tis you alone that I'll adore until my dying day.
Come, marry me, fair Widow!" But the Widow answered "Nay!

8.—Perhaps you mean it now," she said; "however, when I see
The host of girls you've thought you loved, it rather worries me.
Who knows but still some other face some day might please your eyes.
NO! FLY AWAY, MY BUTTERFLY!" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

ALTHOUGH there is no quality of warmth in the newest summer wraps, there is a decided beauty of line and color which is "its own excuse for being," and happy is the woman who can envelop herself in a cloud of filmy chiffon lightened by glittering lines of silk or beads.

Can you imagine the beauty of the marquisette that has been cut with a masterly line and gives a certain exquisite combination of frivolity and dignity? Pale blue is the tone chosen, upon which there is embroidered a design that suggests ripples on a pond in which blue lily forms are floating. Notice the line of rich blue embroidery that defines the yoke and sleeve line, and glance at the square line at the back: obtained by gathering in each side over the central back panel and holding the otherwise flowing lines under the satin rosette.

Satin is used effectively as a binding on this model, outlining the yoke and all edges. The sleeves are merely openings for the arms, with their position defined by silken tassel forms.

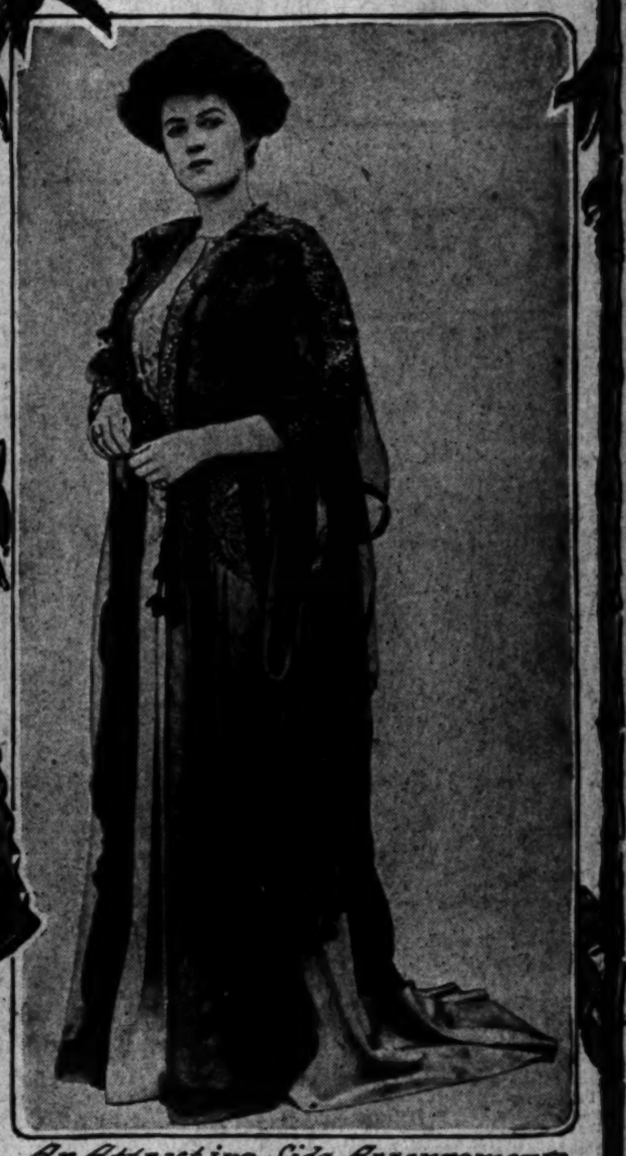
With gray chiffon there have been used braid and wide bands of beaded net, with the resultant charm that is shown in the front and back views of the smoke-colored model.

Shirring holds in the chiffon at the shoulders, front and back, preserving the slenderness of silhouette for which most women strive. The shoulder line, sleeve openings and front edges are outlined with a conventional design of soutache; the beaded net weights the loose sleeves and drops in two straight lines down the back. The fullness is disposed of at the lower part of the wrap and beneath the side bands.

In the model with the cluster of silk roses at the front the transparent note is emphasized in the yoke that is extended into each sleeve and in the wide band of silver lace that outlines the front and holds in the fullness near the bottom of the skirt. Pipings of silk decorate the sleeves and give neatness to the line of junction of the lace.

A delightful arrangement at the side commends the last wrap to your eye. The comparatively plain strip on the sleeve is balanced by the clever disposition of the fullness under the arm. Tied and weighted down at the ends with silk ornaments, the chiffon has lent itself to a grace that is irresistible, bringing with it the attraction of the butterfly bow of the Japanese. The remaining portions of this wrap are quite plain: an artistic use of contrast that it were well to consider in the construction of any gown.

These transparent wraps emphasize the beauty of the gown beneath, while none can deny that the evening gown affords an excellent background for the raising of the manteau to a plane of decorative worth that is dear to the hearts of women.



An Attractive Side Arrangement.

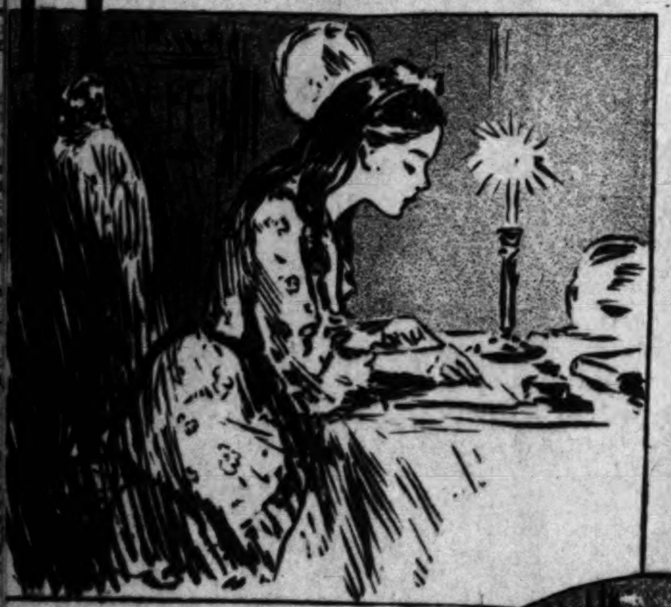
HOW OUR HOMES ARE LIGHTED



is done by the flickering light of a candle."

FROM a letter written in the unformed characters scrawled by a 10-year-old child I extract a postscript:

scrawled the letter to my mother in "forties." I was visiting an old stead on a Virginia plantation, re candles by the dozen in the ter's house and lightwood knots in negro cabins supplied feebly and ly the departed daylight when the went down.

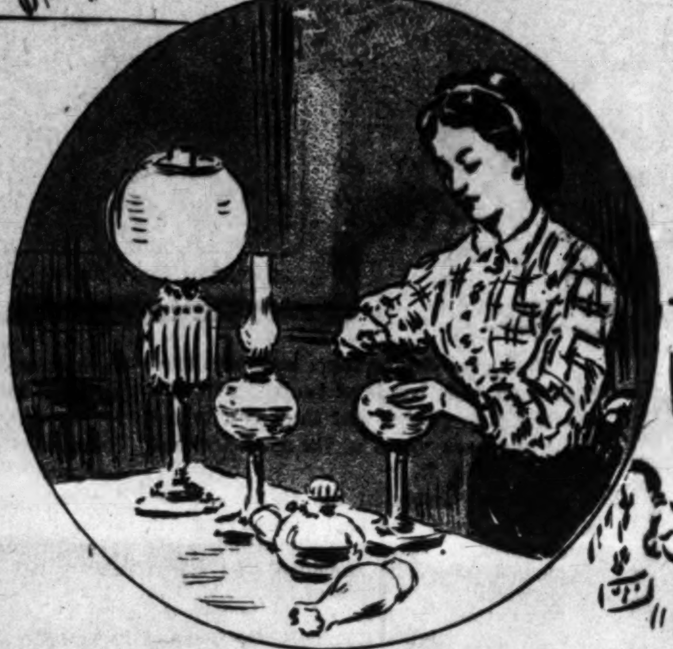
A touch of imported into the village by an ller in town was an inch of col- water in the bottom of the clear lamp. To this day I do not know t was there. But I was wonder- taken with the esthetic effect of trasted blue of the water with amber of the oil, and vainly en- d my sensible mother to introduce novation into our lighting "plant." as very fastidious as to the qual- the oil burned in her lamps. It was refined to the clearness of water; the lamps were brought to the breakfast room every morning and filled and trimmed under her eye, often by her own hands. We had scissors made for that purpose, and for none other, with slightly curved blades. For, be it known to modern ignoramuses, the flame of a lamp is not symmetrical and adapted to give the best light if the wick be cut square across the top. The care of the wick was a matter of serious moment. It was renewed weekly; it was never allowed to cake at the top, and each wick was boiled in vinegar before using, and dried. Then it was warranted not to smoke, or give forth an offensive odor. Each of these ancient rules, let me remark, may be obeyed with excellent effect by the owner or manager of the kerosene lamp of today. To the oil succeeded camphene, an ill-smelling, inflammable liquid wise housemothers were glad to exchange for "burning fluid." This was colorless; if the lamps were properly tended, there was no odor from it in combustion, and it was a clean compound. As one housekeeper said: "If you chance to spill a little on the lamp, wipe it off and the glass is the brighter for it, and it does not grease the tablecloth."



"Filled and trimmed, often by her own hands."

Burning fluid held its own until superseded by gas in city homes. Kerosene has taken its place in the country and in the show lamps which fashion decrees shall shed a mellowed light over state drawing rooms, relegating electric burners to a secondary place. Kerosene is likewise preferred by the student for reading lamps. We are indebted too deeply and in too many ways to this modern housemother's friend to depreciate its worth by a disrespectful word. Yet it cannot be denied that in careless hands it has notable drawbacks. The inferior grades are gross in smell, and unless covered when they are spilled take unto themselves dust and grime that make ugly smirches upon clothing and furniture. I digress here to recommend that, when a lamp is upset upon carpet, matting or rug, the greasy spot should be covered at once with oatmeal or cornmeal. In absorbing the heavier elements of the oil the meal will allow the volatile gases to evaporate, leaving not a trace of the mischief. I have omitted even this precaution when the kerosene is of fine quality, and in twenty-four hours not a vestige of the widespread smear was left to tell the tale. The heat given out by the kerosene lamp upon summer nights is another weighty objection to the use of it. If one attempts to remedy it by lowering the wick, the smell redoubles. Another point many housewives fail to comprehend is that it is the low, not the high wick, that giveth forth a villainous smell. Even intelligent housemaids (like my "Serena," for example) do not always take in the significance of this. Many a time I have abated the nuisance of the odor creeping after the winter twilight through the rooms by slipping into parlors and library and raising the wicks in lately lighted lamps. A touch to each screw is all that is required.

In my country home I introduced, six years ago, what we consider the safest, cleanest, most convenient and altogether satisfactory light we have ever tried. The light is pure white, steady and yet brilliant. In the matter of sustained brightness it has the advantage over the otherwise incomparable illuminating medium—the all-pervasive and well-nigh omnipotent agent that has revolutionized traffic and trade in a thousand ways—electricity. The electric light, consisting, as it does, of a fast series of sparks or flashes, is condemned by some students as unfit for reading lamps. This is undoubtedly true of the unshaded electric light. But who that has any knowledge of optics ever works or reads by an unshaded burner? In the library a thick green shade lined with white throws the light full upon the work-table or book, while the opaque porcelain prevents the glare from striking the eyes. This is the philosophy of the green silk shield worn over the brows of bookkeepers and other incessant toilers by artificial light.

In reading or writing or sewing by lamp or burner, always contrive to have the light fall over the left shoulder. Allow me to emphasize this injunction by a personal reference. I attribute the unusual excellence of my own eyesight to strict obedience to this rule and to the habit of never working by an insufficient light. Dim radiance is a direct and severe strain upon the optic nerves, for which the transgressor must pay, and with interest.

It goes without saying that in the use of all illuminating agencies we Americans are consistent in the practice of national extravagance. It is right and proper, it is a duty, to have our homes well lighted. It is an extravagance to "burn daylight" in any circumstances. The cook turns on the gas to light the preparation of the early breakfast and forgets to turn it off when the sun streams across her sink.

THE WASTE OF LIGHT

The waitress, in laying the table for the evening dinner, finds it convenient to leave the electric bulbs blazing until it is time to light the candelabra which are to diffuse over the gathered company the softened glow adjudged to be most favorable to complexions, real or borrowed. A traveled countrywoman once related to a group of horrified compatriots how, in visiting at the country seat of Lord B——, in Blankshire, England, she beheld, upon taking possession of the superb suite of rooms assigned to herself and distinguished husband, a printed notice in small characters, hung by each electric light: "Visitors will kindly turn off the light before leaving the room."

"Visitors will kindly turn off the light."

"And why not?" I ventured to say when the chorus of disdainful comment subsided. "The visitor might leave the light blazing for hours, if he were not reminded that it would be a useless waste of light and power. Lord B—— has a right to protect his electric plant."

"'Twas only throwing words away."

One and all decided that the injunction was "stingy and vulgar and utterly opposed to American ideas of breeding and hospitality."

I offered no demur to the latter proposition. The request in the circumstances was utterly un-American. I am fast coming to the conclusion that everything pertaining to small and sensible economies is contrary to our principles and practice. To leave a gas burner flaring for two hours in an untenanted kitchen or bedchamber signifies an increase of perhaps 5 cents in the month's bills. "Only a nickel!" Almost thirty years ago Edward Everett Hale set us all to pondering the possibilities of lending a helping hand to our needy neighbor by writing "Ten Times One Is Ten." We have never learned to apply the rule in the art of saving the fractions of pennies—or the pennies themselves. "Only a nickel!" settles the case in hand. The native-born thinker, on a large scale, and his imported imitator cannot stoop to the sum of "ten times five cents is fifty," when the waste is repeated in ten rooms or at ten different times.

To "burn daylight" is a slovenly and expensive practice. Have plenty of light, but see to it that it is put to a legitimate use.

Do this by adding to it the red peppers, a teaspoonful of minced chives or garlic and the same of chopped thyme. Cook these, covered, half an hour—very slowly. Put through your vegetable press. It should be quite thick and reddish. Season with salt to taste; pour over the meat; let all stand in the open oven for five minutes and serve. Cover closely and bake fifteen minutes. Then brown. The paprika will color the spaghetti faintly and, being mild, will not make it too hot.

From an Erstwhile Servant

Your article upon the domestic problem calls for an exchange of thoughts and experiences.

I have served my time as a maid, and I am prepared to cast both sunshine and shade; but if you will let me hold the reins for a little while some kind mistress I have worked for will receive a shower of blessings. I have her written up, and all honor to whom honor is due. I have been alternately maid and shopgirl for twenty years. The last home I held was best of all. That was in the month of October, [illegible]. I served there several months. My lady preferred a younger maid. That was why I was compelled to discharge myself. I will write you all about it if you would like to have it. A good reference will be given out of a pure heart, and I do this to prove that all madams are not monstrous, selfish and harsh. If only we maids could give good references always! All ladies will not do even this much toward helping a poor unfortunate to find a home.

I am not serving now, as I learned to sew pretty well, and I am treated far differently from when I was a servant girl.

ANNIE B. M. (Louisville, Ky.).

Unless the promised "reference" of a worthy mistress (I beg pardon! "madam!") should be too long for our narrow bounds, it will appear in due time.

I subjoin to the foregoing but one comment. Even this right-minded ex-maid cannot withhold a fling at the employer who refuses a certificate of character to a servant leaving her house. A wide experience as a practical housemother, and a wider sphere of observation, qualify me to express the opinion that not one mistress in ten is conscientious in this respect. Almost without exception they lean to the side of mistaken charity. I say "mistaken," because but one party to the transaction is considered. She does not like to "keep a poor girl from earning an honest living." So the woman who would not keep the "poor, unfortunate" a day longer in her own house sets pen to paper in a plausible recommendation of the departing "unfortunate" to some other home. Pardon an illustration that is distinct in my own mind: A long time ago I dismissed a youngish woman from my service for several reasons. She had entered my service under a false name, representing herself as a widow with a child to support. She was dishonest, untruthful and bad tempered. All these faults I discovered for myself. The intelligence office from which I obtained her gave her clean papers, as did her last employer. At parting, I told her not to give me as a "reference." I could not assume the responsibility of putting her into another family after the faults I have named had been abundantly proven in my household. She essayed no self-justification beyond that she "had given me the wrong name because her real name slipped her memory at the time." Her amazement when it was made plain that I would stand by my resolution waxed into fury. With a torrent of coarse abuse, she shook her fist in my face and dared me to withhold the certificate. Finding me firm, she repaired to the intelligence office, and the manager opened correspondence with me. I wrote to her the plain facts of the case. "This woman calls herself by four different names. She says she is a widow, yet her friends address letters to her as 'miss.' She is out until 12 o'clock every night, and lies in bed late in the morning. I have convicted her of systematic dishonesty. She quarreled furiously with laundress and chambermaid, until the noise reached my chamber, etc., etc."

In reply, I had a plea in behalf of "the poor girl who had made such an unfortunate impression upon me." The writer (and manager) pursued:

"I am sorry for her, and inclined to help her, since she has a worthless husband who leaves the support of her child upon her hands. I hope you will reconsider your decision."'

Said a fellow-housekeeper to whom I related the incident: "Oh, give her the reference and let her go! I had a cook two years ago who drank hard, and nearly burned us in our beds in one of her sprees. When asked by a woman who called herself a lady, if Mary were honest and sober, I told her the truth. Whereupon, she told Mary and Mary told a lawyer, and I was brought into court upon the charge of defamation of character and an attempt to prevent an honest woman from earning her living. That was a lesson that will last me a lifetime."

I stood fast to my principle of doing to my sister-housewife as I would have her do to me. Yet I make no doubt that Sally Evans or Jane Mallory or Emma Dolan (she had two other names) secured a paying situation through the compassionate agency.

If I write at length and strongly, it is that I am now firmly convinced that to this disloyalty to our own honorable order of housemothers we owe the general disorganization of what should be a domestic system, whereas it is nothing of the kind. I appeal to other housewives to join with me in refusing to inflict upon a confiding neighbor or stranger what we have found odious in our own houses.

Very plain English, this! The thing I reprobate deserves all I have said, and volumes more.

Recipes and Remedies

May I enter the Exchange with a few hints?

Canned tomatoes—Wash the tomatoes in warm water and wipe dry. Peel carefully; fill a preserving kettle halfway to the top with them. Allow about two teaspoonfuls of salt to each half-peck of the tomatoes. Cook slowly without stirring until plenty of juice is formed. Half an hour should do the work. Fill new glass jars that have rather thick rubbers with the hot tomatoes; seal at once and stand upside down for a few minutes. If no bubbles appear in the contents, the jars are airtight. Then slip them inside of paper bags and put away in the cellar. I save the bags in which groceries come for this purpose. I lost but one out of twenty-seven jars last winter. That had a cracked lid that I had overlooked.

No. 2—When baking pies, I neither grease nor flour the plates, but lay dough rolled out thin in them, and as soon as I take them from the oven I shake while the crust is crisp and slip off upon a plate.

No. 3—For layer cakes I grease the sides and edges of the pans with butter, then cut a piece of waxed or greased paper the size of the bottom of the pan; lay this in place in batter. My cakes never stick. While they are hot I remove the paper. It draws off easily.

No. 4—If, in boiling soups, I find one too salt, I cut a potato into small pieces and drop into the pot. If you have much or little soup, adapt the size of the potato to the quantity. Put it in about twenty minutes before taking up the soup. It will absorb the salt and modify the taste.

No. 5—A hairpin, or a bit of wire hung upon the top of a lamp chimney, will prevent breaking.

English Plum Pudding

From several recipes for "genuine English plum pudding," I select the following. I might rather say that it selects itself, having been the first to answer to the call for the famous delicacy. The donor is a young girl who tells us in a prefatory note:

My great-grandmother received a prize offered by Queen Victoria for the best recipe for plum pudding. This is it:

One and a half pounds of flour, one pound of beef suet chopped fine, one pound of washed and dried currants, one pound of seeded and chopped raisins, a little lemon or orange peel, chopped fine; four eggs, well beaten; two cups of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda and enough sour milk to make a thick batter. You may add a glass of brandy if you like. Boil in a floured cloth for eight or nine hours. Tie the cloth rather loosely to allow the pudding to swell.

Sauce for the Pudding.

Half a cup of butter, one cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of flour, a little nutmeg and boiling water enough to bring it to the desired consistency.

May I add a recipe for dandelion wine? It is a good tonic drink.

Dandelion Wine.

Pick three pounds of buds in the evening and pour upon them four quarts of boiling water. Let them stand, covered, all night. Next morning strain, pressing hard; slice three lemons, removing the seeds; add three and a half cups of granulated sugar. Set on the range and leave there until the sugar is dissolved. Pour into a crock, tie a thin cloth over this and let it stand for a fortnight. Strain, then pour into bottles; cork lightly and leave to ferment. This will take two weeks.

Green Tomato Catsup

I feel real sorrow for any one who has never tasted green tomato catsup. It is highly prized by our household in autumn and winter. I inclose a recipe that has been in our family since the days of my great-grandmother. And yet we enjoy it every year as if it were a novelty.

Grind or chop green tomatoes fine; mix with them one-third as much chopped cabbage as you have tomatoes. Salt to taste. Then add half a teacupful of mustardseed ground very fine; one pint of grated horseradish; ten green peppers chopped fine. All this to one peck of green tomatoes. Mix well together; pack into a jar; press down upon the top a green cabbage leaf and upon this a plate or saucer fitted closely to the inside of the jar. Let all stand for two weeks and it is ready for use.

If one likes sweet catsup, add a tablespoonful of sugar to the dish at table. It is delicious to us Kentuckians, not much trouble to make, and it will keep any length of time.

One thing more! Has any one of "us" ever seen my recipe for eggless gingerbread? I wish the Exchange would try it!

Eggless Gingerbread

One cup each of sorghum or molasses, of buttermilk, lard or butter; one-half cup of sugar; two heaping tablespoonfuls of pulverized sugar. Mix together and thoroughly; have ready enough flour to make a dough, into which you have sifted three times twice as much soda as would be used for common gingerbread. You see, you have both sour milk and molasses in this, and there must be soda to act upon both. The dough must be stiff enough to roll out. Roll as for cookies; cut into any shape you wish, and bake.

SILENT KENTUCKY READER (Peonia, Ky.).

This is the first time you have favored us with a contribution. May I tempt you to do this again by asking a question or two?

1. Do you put no vinegar into the bewitching catsup? Does it ferment during the fortnight of seclusion? If not, what preserves it from decomposition?

2. And won't you make that eggless (and economical) gingerbread once more, and for the sake of the novice, tell us how much flour should be sifted with the soda before working it into dough? We—you and I, and other kitchen-scarred veterans—may have a tolerably correct idea what measure of flour to fill for the proportions of molasses and milk. But we are teaching raw recruits, and the more explicit our directions the less danger there is of disaster. Have I made it plain that we must have another letter from our silent sister of the bluegrass country?

When Storing Furs

Please advise me how to pack down furs so the moths will not harm them during the summer.

Mrs. A. B. (Deering, N. D.).

First make sure, beyond the possibility of doubt, that the furs are entirely free from dust and the inevitable accompaniment of dust—the germs and eggs of moths or other vermin. Beat and dust and shake and brush and comb until there is no question on the subject, and then lay in the hot sun. After sunning for some hours, wrap each article in perfectly clean newspapers which have been sunned or laid in an oven. Into each parcel put a handful of camphor balls; pin up the corners securely, and pin or sew the parcel up in cheesecloth. The object of this is to keep the papers from tearing. Pack in a trunk or barrel, and nail or lock up for the remainder of the summer. Mark each package with pencil to signify what the contents are, that there need be no confusion should you wish to get at one before the season is over.

I have put up furs and way for thirty years, has been touched by limbo.

Buttercups for a Corset Cover

I AM giving today a wonderfully practical model in buttercups. We have not had this flower for a long time, have we? But I am sure that you will form the buttercup habit, and that my needleworkers will stray far into embroidery fields, with much enjoyment.

You will get most satisfactory results, I think, if your work be a combination of solid stitch and outline. I suggest that the turned-up petals of the flowers be worked solid, also the tiny leaves at the base of each form. The other petals you will outline, and the seeds in the center you will work in French knots.

The large flowers with no turned edges may be worked with long and short stitches at the outer line of each petal, the knots giving sufficient work for the center.

When you make the buds, follow the same idea, working the small holder in solid stitch and outlining the round bud.

French knots for the sprays of fine grass and stem stitch for the delicate connecting lines are quick and effective finishing touches for the design. The narrow leaves are best in solid stitch.

So much for that. Your scallops will be buttonholed in the usual way, and just for variety I have had a little dot placed in each scallop, which you will work solid. The eyelets are conveniently placed, both from a working and wearing standpoint. The preliminary overcasting, followed by buttonhole stitch, will be necessary.

Soft white mercerized cotton is recommended. I would keep this entirely white, although I have seen beautiful underwear with just a suggestion of the maker's favorite color introduced in tiny knots or dots.

This design for a corset cover is adaptable to a combination garment or a chemise. You really should have a buttercup set.

For a ruffle for drawers or for the popular combination, there can be made a repetition of scallops and one spray of the design. Repeat as often as you wish, my friends.

It is a valuable little pattern, isn't it? I myself like a departure from the stereotyped, and I am sure that these flowers of the field will please in the worked form just as decidedly as they do in print.

THE BEST MATERIAL FOR THE WORK APRON

IT is a shame, when work aprons can be made so pretty, as well as useful, that most women cover themselves with something that looks like a dilapidated rag.

The best materials for the work apron are linen and gingham, though rubber ones are long-lasting, and lighter materials, like percale and chintz, are nice for dainty work. The dark colors are best—green, gray or dark blue is a safe choice. Black, in sateen or lining material, is attractive, but does not show the dirt enough for one to be sure of keeping it clean. Its washable quality is the first thing to recommend a material for work aprons.

The long, sleeveless apron is good where the arms must be given free play. This apron covers the wearer from top to toe, but is slashed and fastened at the sides with tapes, leaving a hole in the top for the head to come through. It is fine for sweeping or scrubbing, as one may shed it in a minute and look presentable for an emergency.

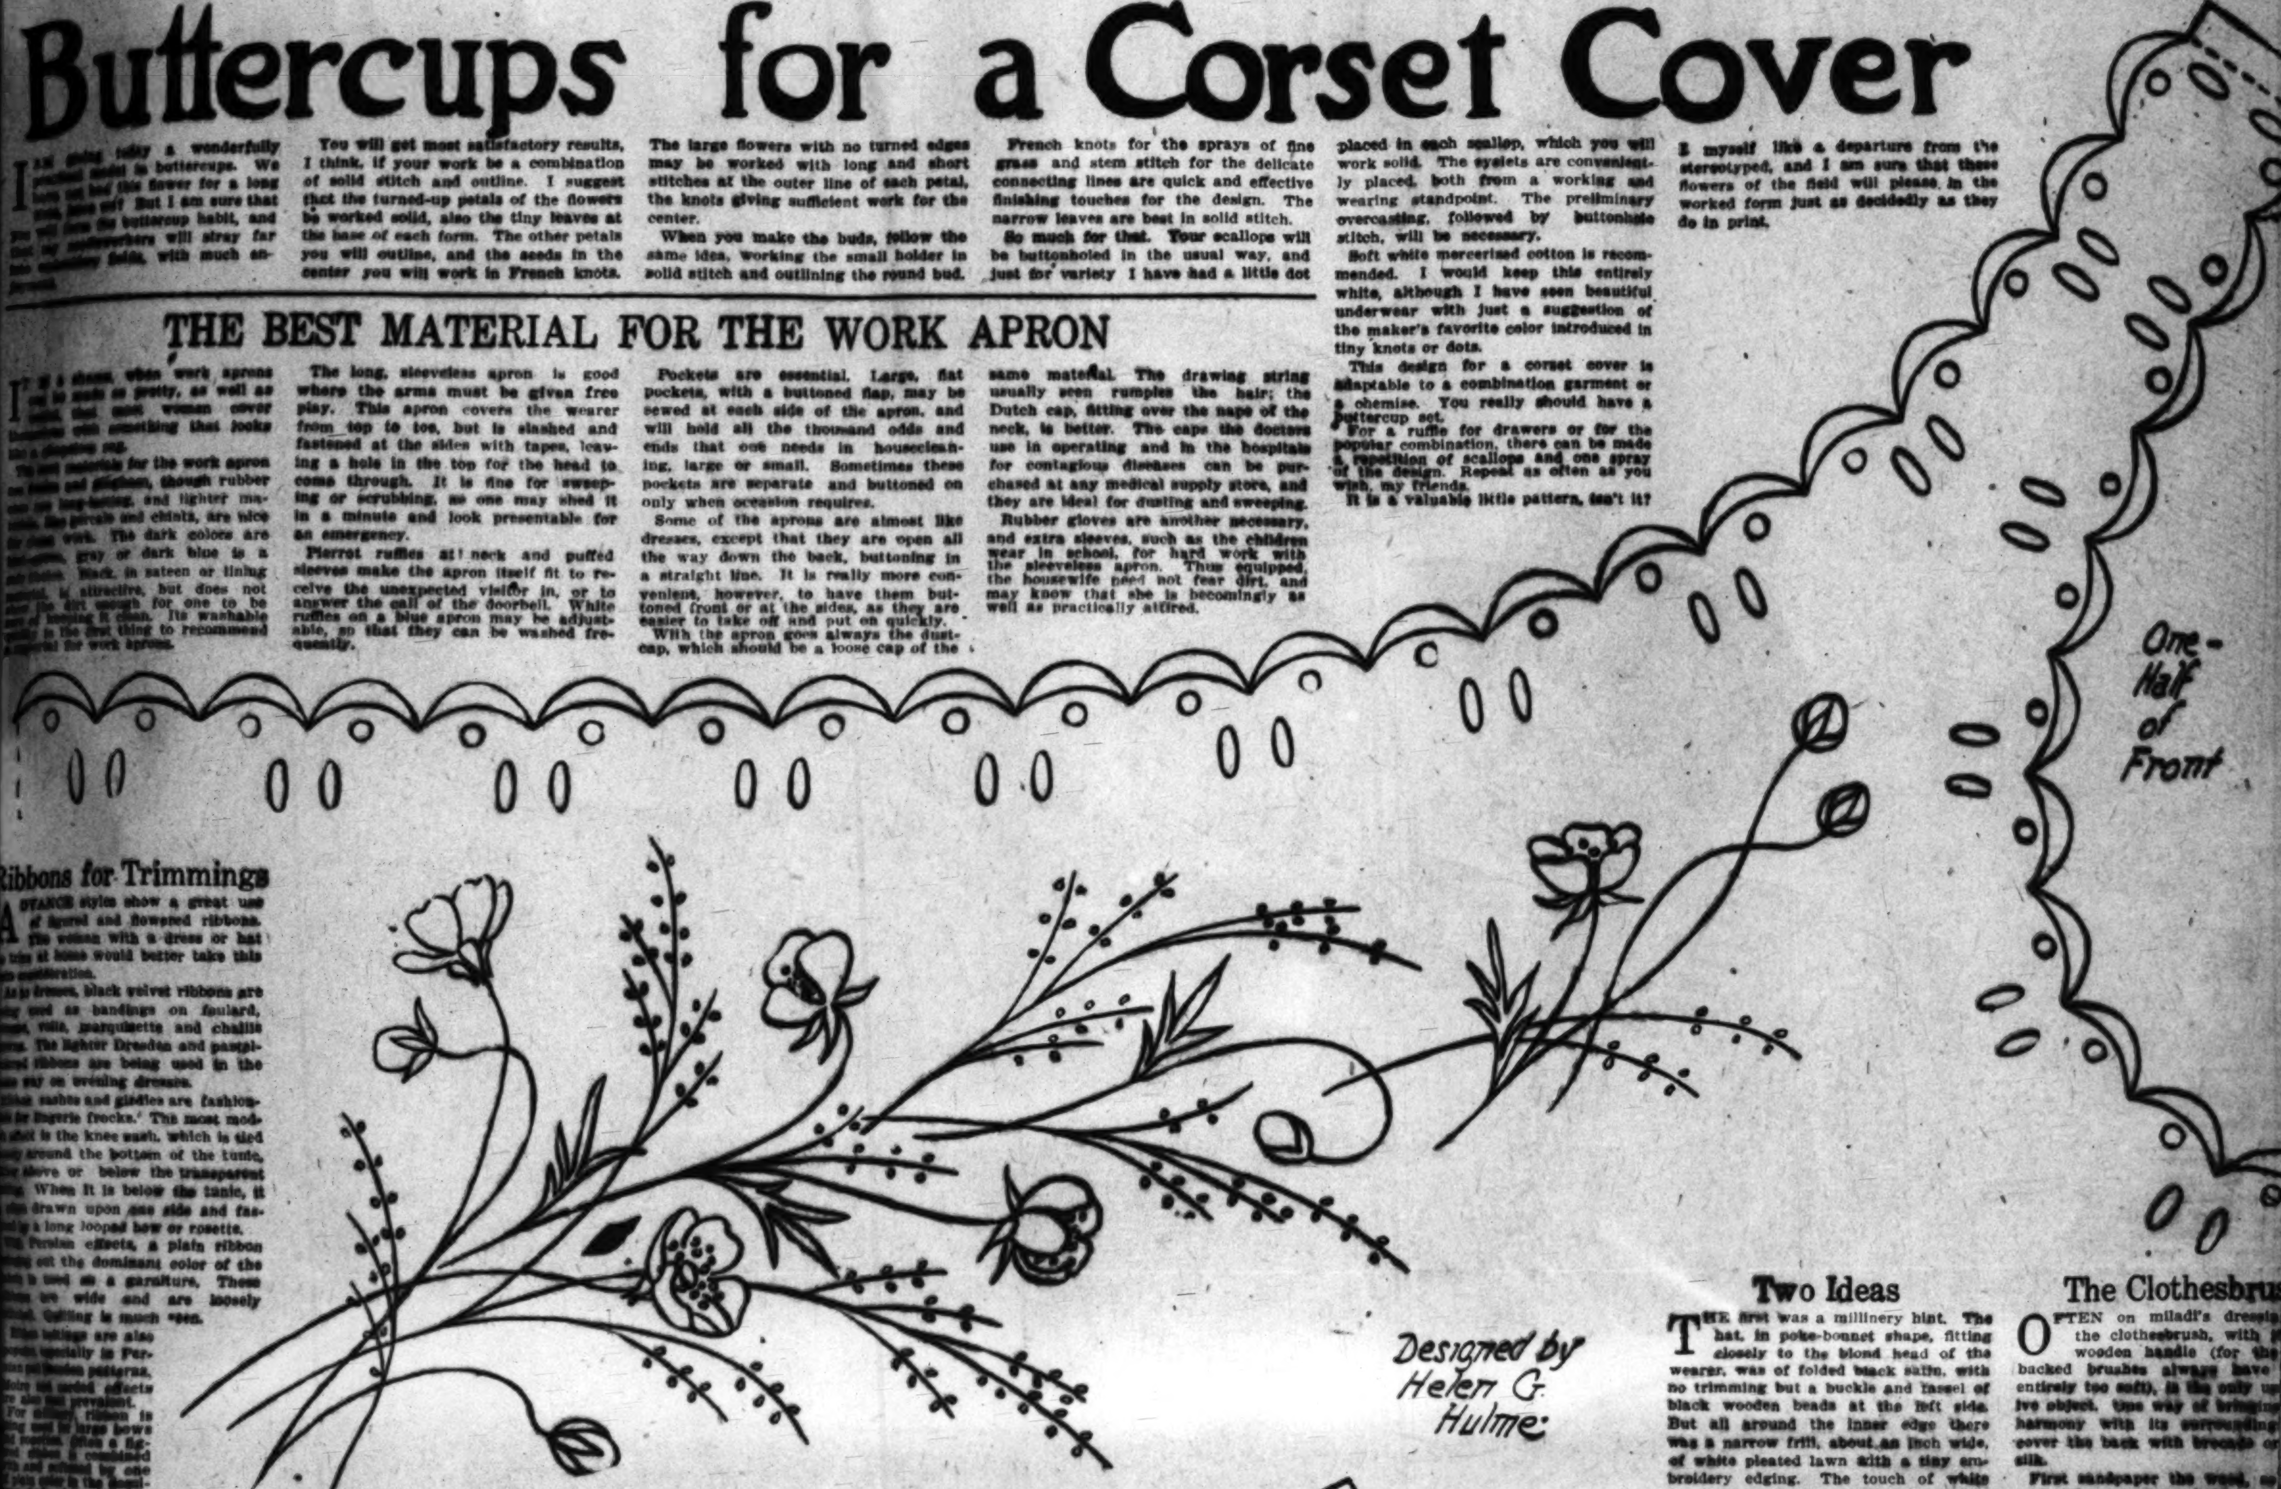
Pierrot ruffles at neck and puffed sleeves make the apron itself fit to receive the unexpected visitor in, or to answer the call of the doorbell. White ruffles on a blue apron may be adjustable, so that they can be washed frequently.

Pockets are essential. Large, flat pockets, with a buttoned flap, may be sewed at each side of the apron, and will hold all the thousand odds and ends that one needs in housecleaning, large or small. Sometimes these pockets are separate and buttoned on only when occasion requires.

Some of the aprons are almost like dresses, except that they are open all the way down the back, buttoning in a straight line. It is really more convenient, however, to have them buttoned front or at the sides, as they are easier to take off and put on quickly.

With the apron goes always the dust-cap, which should be a loose cap of the same material. The drawing string usually seen rumples the hair; the Dutch cap, fitting over the nape of the neck, is better. The caps the doctors use in operating and in the hospitals for contagious diseases can be purchased at any medical supply store, and they are ideal for dusting and sweeping.

Rubber gloves are another necessary, and extra sleeves, such as the children wear in school, for hard work with the sleeveless apron. Thus equipped, the housewife need not fear dirt, and may know that she is becomingly as well as practically attired.



Ribbons for Trimmings

ADVANCE styles show a great use of figured and flowered ribbons. The woman with a dress or hat to trim at home would better take this into consideration.

As to dresses, black velvet ribbons are being used as bandings on foulard, ninon, voile, marquisette and challis gowns. The lighter Dresden and pompadour ribbons are being used in the same way on evening dresses.

Ribbon sashes and girdles are fashionable for lingerie frocks. The most modish effect is the knee sash, which is tied loosely around the bottom of the tunic, just above or below the transparent edge. When it is below the tunic, it is often drawn upon one side and fastened by a long looped bow or rosette.

With Persian effects, a plain ribbon bringing out the dominant color of the design is used as a garniture. These ribbons are wide and are loosely draped. Quilling is much seen.

Ribbon bandings are also seen, especially in Persian and Dresden patterns. Moire and corded effects are also [illegible] prevalent.

For millinery, ribbon is being used in large bows and rosettes. Often a figured ribbon is combined with and softened by one of plain color in the dominant shade of the other.

Ribbon is being used also for table garnitures, in flower shapes and in long loops around a low centerpiece.

Odd Flowers in Embroidery

THE woman who, centerpiece after centerpiece and summer after summer, works violet and rose and daisy designs in colored silk in satin stitch has no idea of the possibilities of embroidery. I shall not speak now of the variety that may be gained in background material and embroidery stitch, but simply of the use of flowers so hackneyed and worked to death as those mentioned. Poppies, thistles and forget-me-nots are not so utterly commonplace, but they, too, should be laid on the shelf for a while for staple and conventional pieces.

It is strange that few women, even those who care for and love their gardens, seem to think of applying the [illegible] of blossoms they see about them to their colored embroidery. Why [illegible] some one substitute the purple [illegible] for the iris, the white [illegible] blossom for the chrysanthemum, the sweet alyssum for the clover? Phlox, petunias, four-o'clocks, ice-plant, geranium, hydrangeas, feverfew—here is a list of flowers easily embroidered, taken from one small garden; and in the fields one may find the may-weed, the wild geranium (which is not at all like its domesticated cousin), Queen Anne's lace, butter-and-eggs, [illegible], and many other simple [illegible], beautiful and easily copyable. [illegible] they only lead to a love for and a knowledge of botany on the part of the zealous embroiderer, who is apt to lead too sedentary a life, they have served their purpose.

But they have a further value: They introduce into embroidered work an individuality which raises it above its present level to a standard it has not attained since the time of the medieval tapestries. They allow the needleworker to exercise her own ingenuity and her own artistic taste, and to express her [illegible] as the stiffly worked carnations and wild roses of today cannot do. That these flowers can be as easily worked as the more commonly seen varieties—and in some cases more so—is shown by the directions given herewith for embroidering some of the more unusual blossoms.

Red and pink cactus: This splendid display flower is worked with half the blossoms in [illegible] conventional wreath is the best arrangement, as the flowers are a bit stiff in dark red and half in pale pink. The edges of the petals are worked in long-and-short stitch, and if the shaded effect is desired, the tips of the petals are lighter than the base, the [illegible] [illegible] darker than the [illegible]. The [illegible] in each petal is [illegible] [illegible], and the [illegible] are [illegible] in yellow. [illegible] in dark and light [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] satin stitch; the [illegible] in Kensington stitch. At the very top a French knot is placed.

Cosmos: This comes in white, purple and pink; a pretty piece would combine all three shades. The petals are worked solid in Kensington stitch, the centers, padded with white cotton, in satin stitch. Above the center is a cluster of green and yellow French knots. The leaves are worked in slanting satin and briar stitch; the stems in the first named.

Primrose: "A yellow primrose" it may have been to Peter Bell, but to most mortals it is light pink or light blue also. Here again the three tints may be well combined. The edges are worked in long-and-short stitch, as are the leaves; the petals are in solid satin stitch, and so are the green centers, around which is a circle of green French dots. The veins of the leaves and petals are worked in outline stitch.

Nasturtium: This is in red and yellow solid satin stitch, with the red and yellow intermingling to form the orange blossoms. Veins and outlines are worked in black outline stitch, or in the contrasting color, yellow or red. The centers are of green French knots, flattened.

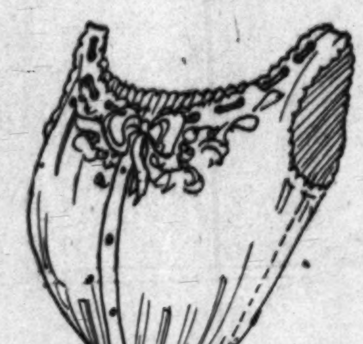
White clematis: This dainty flower, like the windflower, Quaker lady, etc., is worked in long-and-short stitch, with the long stamens in stem stitch and the round centers in thick French knots in brown and green. The leaves have edges in long-and-short stitch, with centers of seed stitch and veins in outline.

Water-lily, sunflower, dogwood, lily-of-the-valley, are some of the other flowers that suggest themselves, and the clever needleworker will by this time have herself thought of dozens of others and of various ways of stitching them. Let her turn her mind in this direction, and she will begin to see possibilities that she probably never knew existed in embroidery. The search for odd flowers is worth while.

Corded Sofa Pillows

THE latest sofa pillows for use on summer porches are not embroidered in silk, cotton or raffia outline in the usual manner, but are corded around the colored pattern. Thus a tan linen pillow will be stamped in a conventional design in red and green, and this will be outlined by narrow silk cord in the same shade or in black. Lovely tailor-made effects are produced in this way, though the conventional design is much more successful than the flower pattern.

One stunning pillow—full of suggestions for the girl who can stencil her own materials—was of grass-green denim, with a dragon design in black, blue and dark green, and the carding done in these three shades and in gilt. It was big enough for the back of a morris chair, and around it was a heavy gilt binding cord, ending in a long green and gilt tassel.



Sketch of Finished Work

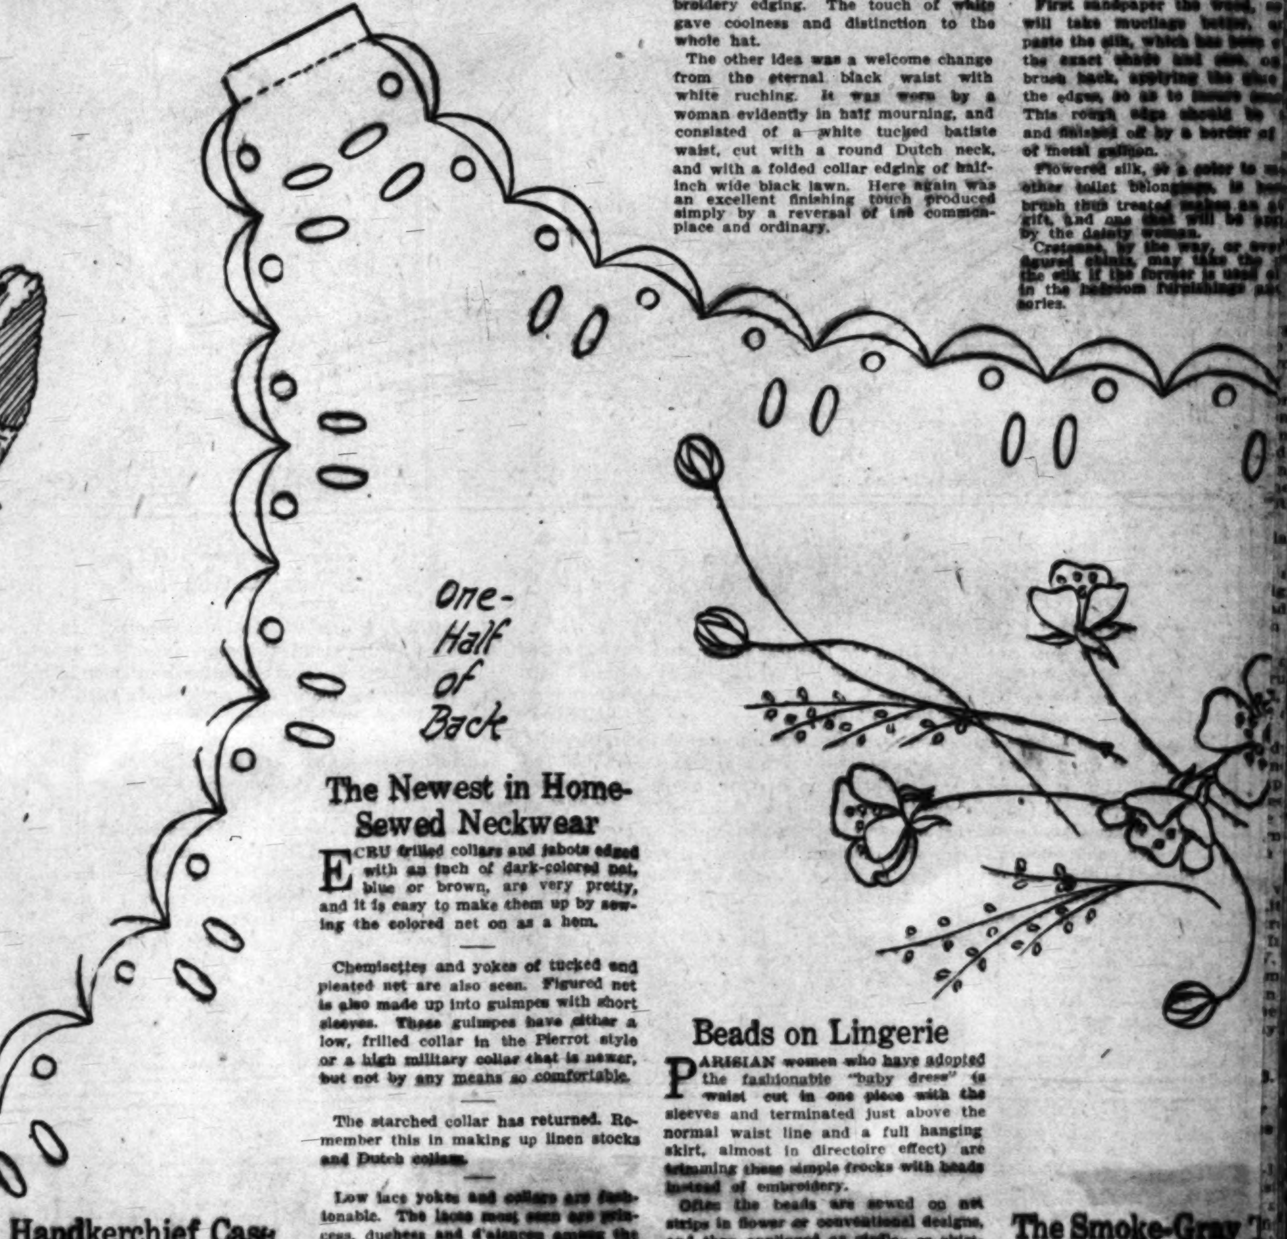
Novel Hat Ornament

ONE of the new midsummer hats seen recently had as trimming a large butterfly bow of cretonne, with a heavy straw edging and an inner border of glass jewels in the predominating color of the cretonne. The hat itself was a rough straw in natural tint and in the same weave as the edging of the bow. The only other adornment was a draped and folded cretonne scarf and a wide band of cretonne on the under side. The unusual effect was striking, to say the least, and the hat was as smart as one could desire.

Handkerchief Case

A NOVEL handkerchief case consists of two squares, a little larger than a folded handkerchief, of cardboard, padded and covered outside with cretonne and inside with silk, with a buttonholed edge or a band of gilt galloon. The handkerchiefs go between these, and the case is held together by a circlet of silk rubber with a lace edging.

This case is very convenient for traveling, as it holds a number of handkerchiefs and does not take up the space of the ordinary handkerchief case.



The Newest in Home-Sewed Neckwear

ECRU frilled collars and jabots edged with an inch of dark-colored net, blue or brown, are very pretty, and it is easy to make them up by sewing the colored net on as a hem.

Chemisettes and yokes of tucked and pleated net are also seen. Figured net is also made up into guimpes with short sleeves. These guimpes have either a low, frilled collar in the Pierrot style or a high military collar that is newer, but not by any means so comfortable.

The starched collar has returned. Remember this in making up linen stocks and Dutch collars.

Low lace yokes and collars are fashionable. The laces most seen are princess, duchess and d'alencon among the more expensive varieties, and Irish, cluny and cotton chantilly among the less costly. Many of these lace collars have a deep border of silk in pale Dresden design which is very attractive.

Maline and figured net are also used for these yoke collars, being seen in white and ecru.

Bryan collars are seen in black satin with white lawn frilling and in tucked white batiste with Persian edging and jabot.

Two Ideas

THE first was a millinery hint. The hat, in poke-bonnet shape, fitting closely to the blond head of the wearer, was of folded black satin, with no trimming but a buckle and tassel of black wooden beads at the left side. But all around the inner edge there was a narrow frill, about an inch wide, of white pleated lawn with a tiny embroidery edging. The touch of white gave coolness and distinction to the whole hat.

The other idea was a welcome change from the eternal black waist with white ruching. It was worn by a woman evidently in half mourning, and consisted of a white tucked batiste waist, cut with a round Dutch neck, and with a folded collar edging of half-inch wide black lawn. Here again was an excellent finishing touch produced simply by a reversal of the commonplace and ordinary.

Beads on Lingerie

PARISIAN women who have adopted the fashionable "baby dress" (a waist cut in one piece with the sleeves and terminated just above the normal waist line and a full hanging skirt, almost in directoire effect) are trimming these simple frocks with beads instead of embroidery.

Often the beads are sewed on net strips in flower or conventional designs, and then appliqued as girdles or skirt-bands. White beads in favor, though the lighter pastel shades in fabric have bead embroideries to match them as closely as possible.

These are glass beads; it is almost the only place where the wooden beads have not driven them out. Iridescent and metal beads are also occasionally seen, especially in gowns with a touch of the prevalent oriental embroidery.

Sometimes an entire frock of mull or batiste is embroidered with single beads, giving the effect of a dotted material. The result is very pretty and quite unusual.

FOUR ON A PICNIC

ELEANOR DEAR:

I've just come back from the loveliest picnic, and while it's fresh in my mind I want to sit down and tell my fashionable sister all about it.

You know Elsie Willoughby has been back some time now, and yet we hadn't done the simplest thing for her. Finally, in desperation, we decided to shed husbands and kiddies and go off for a day alone in our dear old woods. There were just four of us: Elsie and her sister Jean, and our beloved Mrs. Richardson, the "gentleman farmeress," as little Eleanor calls her, and yours truly. Thank goodness! I didn't have to act as chaperon this time. I hate that custom that makes a young married woman chaperon a much older unmarried one!

We had a splendid time, with innocent things like grapejuice to drink and olives and fruit and deviled eggs and about twenty kinds of sandwiches to eat. Jean has invented a new kind of sandwich of orange marmalade, cottage cheese and olives, and it's fine.

Then we paddled down the river a bit, sunned ourselves in the clearing back of the pines, talked over old times and new, and finally rode home about 5 o'clock, for our obliging husbands—with an extra man for Jean—drove up in grand style for us in the old omnibus.

I wish we had had a camera along: we were all—including me, of course—so charmingly dressed. Mrs. Richardson was in soft lavender voile double dotted in black, with a chemisette and long cuffs of tucked lawn, a row of tiny black velvet bows down the front and a touch of embroidery at the collar and on the sleeves. Her hat was black, with a white wing and a black velvet bow at the right side.

Elsie wore blue linen, low necked and short sleeved; with shoulder straps and yoke and cuff edging of blue Bavarian embroidery. Down the front of her blouse was a black taffeta band, which was marvelously effective with the white pearl buttons. Her wide hat was of rough straw with a blue velvet scarf.

White French percale made Jean's dress: a simple frock with narrow sailor collar, turnback cuffs and frill of red and white percale edged with lawn. The yoke was finished by two red buttons and the low neck was cut square. There were broad pleats over the shoulders and four bands of red on the skirt.

And I? I wore green linen, with a touch of embroidery in darker green in the scallops in double rows down the left side of the blouse, on the cuffs and at the V-shaped neck. A row of buttoned straps fastens the scallops in slashed-blouse effect and reappears on the skirt. The sleeve ruffles are quite far apart, and the belled sleeves are loose and comfortable.

Have I talked long enough? I find that I am tired, whether you are or not. So good night, my dear.

So the demiurges who built the … are now looked upon as myths. But there … scholars in the world at this moment with … faith in the God who called matter into organic shape and beautiful form and said: "Let there be light" and life than ever before.

There are still in the world many persons who fear the effects of intelligence in undermining faith. Science not only undermines, but overturns as an earthquake superstition. There are preachers like the one in the Methodist conference who expressed his thankfulness that he had never gone to college or seminary. There are also bishops like the one presiding who retorted: "Do I understand the brother to be returning thanks for his ignorance? He certainly has much to be grateful for."

We did not, however, set out to preach a sermon on religious faith, but to apply the views of the president of Yale to the things of everyday life. There is just as much prejudice in the world of politics as in that of religion. And there is just as much crying need of intelligence among men in business, in the various trades, as in chairs of theology.

There are architects who draw plans for building who do not know enough mathematics to calculate the strength of materials, and who must either use too much and so rob the owners of structures, or put in too little and so have a building fall and injure many. There are carpenters who cannot shingle a house so that the roof will turn the weather or hang a door that will work true on its hingles. There are horse shoers who cannot do their work so that it will save the horse, not lame him. There are bankers who understand finance so imperfectly that they invest depositors' money in such a way as to lose it, impoverishing the thrifty members of society.

But it is in the duties of citizenship that there is need of most intelligence, of clearest knowledge, and it is here that citizens walk in the deepest darkness and act on the most unguided prejudices or are swayed by the most unfounded impulses. Every voter is a sovereign, and his intelligence or ignorance is reflected more o rless in the affairs of his city, State and country.

Congress is charged with the duty of raising revenues to meet the expenditures of government. The national revenues with us come mostly from duties on imported goods. During nearly all the time we have been a nation the national parties have agreed that these duties should be so arranged as to give encouragement to home industries so as to make us industrially as well as politically independent and at the same time to make it possible to do as far as convenient our own work, thus adding to our common wealth, not impoverishing us as a people.

How much specific knowledge does the average American secure for himself on this matter? How many of us try to learn what we can produce at home to advantage, what is best to seek abroad? How many of us trust with as blind reliance to the editorial columns of our daily papers or swallow the statements of our political leaders with as blind reliance as a devotee ever gave the guide of his soul?

For 110 years this subject has agitated the voters of this country in each generation, yet there is not a textbook on it today. We send men to Congress to pass laws to raise national revenues who do not know how much the government needs per year, the value of the imports that come in, where they come from, which can be best produced at home, which might more advantageously be bought abroad, which would give most remunerative employment to our own people, which must reduce the cost of living if imported.

Within a year certain self-styled leaders have told those who would listen that the great increase in the cost of living was due to the new revenue bill or tariff act. This statement was made in the face of the fact that the new act reduced rather than raised duties, and that the advances complained of had antedated the new law. Competent students like Prof. Jenks of Cornell University studied the subject to its roots and found this notion baseless. Yet the statement is still made by Congressmen, even by Senators, and is still reiterated by the people in hundreds.

Half the voters of the country, yes, two-thirds of them, at this moment are ignorant of what principles the political parties stood for two years ago. Public speakers make statements on this head directly at variance with the facts.

Let us return to the point whence we started. The worldly condemn the religious roundly for an alleged reliance on blind faith, for following prejudice and not seeking the light of clear intelligence or accurate knowledge. The charge is not well founded. There is actually more critical questioning of religious than of political creeds. There is more serious effort made by the churches to instruct their people than by parties. Churchgoers put less implicit trust in the statements of preachers than the members of parties in their leaders.

Religion is barred from the public schools; so are party politics with equal propriety. But there are facts about religion which cannot be excluded from the classrooms, and there are facts about the political history of the country which should not be excluded. Facts fairly stated cannot hurt any good cause. No end of time is wasted in the schools on matters of no practical use in life. In teaching history the military battles lost and won are not the whole of the story. The political battles are as important as those won by the armies. The issues on which elections have turned are facts. The more facts we have the higher our intelligence. His religious cause is bad who fears to have the light of facts turned on. So is his political creed who objects to the people knowing.

The government is about to undertake a careful study of the cost of producing things in the United States, with comparisons with competing countries. The ascertained facts should be given as wide publicity as possible, and he is not a good citizen who neglects to study the results with the utmost care. We are too prone to accept statements with an uncritical, unscientific spirit. Our politics is too much of a fetich. "The crying need is intelligence."

A Little Sermon

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

What this troubled old world needs
Is less of quibbling over creeds,
Fewer words and better deeds;

Less of "Thus and so, shall you Think and act and say and do;"
More of "How may I be true?"

Less of wrangling over text;
Less of creed and code perplexed;
More of charity unvexed.

Less of shouting: "I alone
Have the right to hurl the stone!"
More of heart that will condone.

Less of ruling: "Hear, you must Hold this tenet, wrong or just."
More of patient, helpful trust.

Less of microscopic scan
Of the faults of fellow-man;
More of brave, uplifting plan.

Less of dogma; less pretense;
More belief that Providence
Sanctifies our common sense.

[illegible] of chords of kindness blent
[illegible] the discords of dissent.
Then will come our great content.

New Lung Telescope.

By the use of a newly-invented miniature searchlight-telescope passed down the windpipe and into the bronchial tubes of a patient who had swallowed a shawl pin, one of the surgeons of King's College Hospital was recently able to see the pin, to remove it with forceps, and so save the life of the patient, who was apparently beyond human aid.

The instrument, called a broncho-scope, resembles a small bent telescope, fitted with lenses at different angles, and has a tiny electric light which can be passed deep into the lung.

The day after the pin was swallowed, an X-rays examination showed its position beneath the sixth rib, about an inch to the right of the breast bone. The patient was chloroformed, and then a 20 per cent. solution of cocaine was sprayed over the larynx and windpipe. The telescope tube was then passed through the mouth and larynx down the windpipe.

Peering down the tube, the surgeon finally located the pin, fixed head downward in one of the branches of the windpipe, at a distance of thirteen inches from the mouth. A pair of very fine forceps on the end of a long, flexible wire passed down the hollow telescope tube was then made to grasp the pin, and the pin, forceps, and telescope were withdrawn together. Within a few hours the patient was able to return to her home none the worse for an accident which before the invention of the lung telescope would almost inevitably have proved fatal.—[London Daily Mail.

Awakening of the Hindus. By Frank G. Carpenter.

OUR MODERN CIVILIZATION.

HOW IT IS AFFECTING CASTES AND RELIGION IN INDIA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BENARES, 1910.—In the holy city of Benares, on the banks of old Mother Ganges, where I can hear the splashing of the pilgrims as they wash off their sins, I write of the Hindu religion. The subject is too big for abstruse discussion, too varied for detailed narration, and too complicated for the ordinary Christian mind, without study, to grasp it. I shall attempt only to mention a few of its principal features, and especially some which are involved in the great unrest which is spreading over India today.

The Hindu religion is one of the oldest on earth. It sprang from our Aryan forefathers and was practiced thousands of years before Christ. From age to age and generation to generation it has been the faith of hundreds of millions, and today one-eighth of all mankind upon it rest their hope of salvation. There are twice as many believers of this religion in India as there are men, women and children in the United States. They form two-thirds of the whole population, and most of them are so earnest that they will suffer pain and death rather than renounce their belief. The Hindus are naturally religious. In one form or another they worship almost everything under the sun. They long for salvation and they live in daily fear of hell and damnation. Ahis is especially so of the common people and to a large extent of the Brahman.

The Gods of the Hindus.

I despair of giving you an adequate conception of the gods of the Hindus. Taking into account their idols, temples, shrines and other objects of worship, it is estimated that they number, all told, something like 300,000,000. And notwithstanding this, the Hindus base their belief upon one God alone, of whom they say there is no second. They say that God made the heavens and the earth, and that He permeates all creation. He is in every man, and in everything. He is a part of you and me, and therefore your acts and my acts are His acts. We cannot sin if God is doing the acting, and at the best our future is fated. When we were babies the life we would lead was written upon our foreheads, and our joys and misfortunes were settled before we saw light.

The Hindus believe that God manifests himself in many incarnations. Any great philosopher, priest or king may represent Him, and they have taken Buddha as one of His manifestations. They say that God as a whole is so great that He is beyond human conception, and therefore they worship Him in His various incarnations. In this sense everything may be worshiped as a part of God, and it should be so, according as it is pure or good or as it is terrible and to be feared. The lower classes of the Hindus pray to animals and to the dead. They pray to the spirits of those who have done well in life, and also to the supreme gods of Hinduism or the incarnati Deity as represented in their sacred book

The Triad of the Hindus.

In the latter sense the Hindus have thre ifestations of the Deity. These are Brah and Shiva. I find representations of the throughout the temples, and have seen ands worshiping them in one form or god Brahma is represented as an idol with and four arms. He was the great creator mankind and all living. His wife is often beside him. Her name is Sarasvati. She is lady who rides upon a peacock and is clad els. She is the especial patron of music All liars pray to her, and she wipes off the Vishnu, the second great god, is worsh Benares in numerous temples. He is known server, and he came down to earth to deliv demons, snakes and wicked men, and from rice and lust. He has his own special can take his followers there. This god is had ten incarnations. I have described a previous letter in my visit to the here, where he is revered as Hanuman. is the model son, brother and husband, his name Rama is given to chil friends meet they say Rama's name of good day. As Krishna, Vishnu posed as husband, and according to the records he part. He had over 16,000 wives and 180 not counting the girls.

Vishnu's wife was called Lakshmi. goddess of wealth and beauty, and spr froth of the ocean when it was churned She corresponds somewhat to Aphrodite of Jupiter, who rose out of the sea at Cyp worshiped by the Greeks as the goddess and love.

The Terrible Kali.

The last of the three great gods is Sh stroyer, associated with whom is his wife Kali. This sacred lady wears a garland skulls, a necklace of dead man's hands, outstretched red tongue is supposed to blood. I visited one of her chief temple stay at Calcutta. It lies on the banks of and in it sacrifices of kids and goats are most daily. They were killing a goat and scores of worshipers passed me on each carrying a kid in his arms. Before took India, human sacrifices were made this goddess, and during a famine of abo tion ago, human heads decked with flowers on the altar. Kali was the goddess of th caste which used to travel throughout ling victims in her honor. She is suppos the cemeteries and delight in pestilence and all the misery of mankind. Her wor gether a worship of fear. It is one of the ing features of the Hindu religion.

As to Shiva himself, he has 1000 Upon his head he carries the Ganges. eyes and around his neck is a garland of weapons are a bow, a thunderbolt and an ax. He is the god of death and destruction and also the god of asceticism and dancing, in the latter manifestation being somewhat like Bacchus.

The Sacred Books of Hinduism.

The Hindus have their sacred books, upon which their religions are based. Some of these are about the oldest of religious manuscripts. They are known as the Vedas, and are published in Sanskrit. There are four Vedas, the most important of which is the Rig Veda. This contains over 1000 hymns addressed to the gods, and commemorating the march of the Aryan race from Kabul to the Punjab. And then there is the Sama Veda, which is largely taken up with the ceremonies of the religion; the Atharva Veda, composed chiefly of incantations, and the Yajur Veda, the publication of which the government is trying to suppress on account of its obscenity. Connected with these is the code of Manu, which gives the laws and customs of the Hindus and is generally obeyed today. There are also religious and philosophical works written by the Brahmans, and of late these men have uttered new doctrines through their religious journals and newspapers. They are advocating the more strict observance of their religion, insisting on the custom of infant marriages and upon the abandonment of the remarriage of widows. There are others who are advocating reforms more along the lines of our civilization.

The Four Great Castes.

It is in the code of Manu that we find set down the four great castes which have existed among the Hindus for thousands of years. These are the main divisions of castes which form such a big element in the situation of today, although there are thousands of minor divisions. The first and highest caste is that of the Brahmans or priests. These men are the Levites of the natives, but they have a higher position than the Levites held in Judea. They are supposed to have sprung originally from the mouth of Brahma and were appointed to study, teach and receive alms. By the right of birth they are the lords of creation, and the rest must support them. There are something like 20,000,000 of them in India, and they are the vampires of every community. They suck the blood of their fellows who are bound to support them. They bless, curse, teach and govern the other Hindu castes. They are the authority upon all matters, religious and social. They are the brains of the Hindus, and are among the leaders in the great unrest of today. They hold their position on account of the reverence and sanctity with which they are regarded, and for this reason they object to our civilization as the ruination of caste. They preach against railroads, because in them all grades of society must mix, arguing that such contamination will lead to damnation.

The second great class was the warriors. From these come the Rajputs and others whose duty it was to fight. This class has largely lost its prominence since the advent of the British. It is supposed to have sprung from the arms of the god Brahma.

The third class was the industrial part of the old population, which contained the laborers, farmers, artisans and merchants. This sprang from the belly and thighs of Brahma. It is a leading caste now. It comprises the largest part of the Hindus, and its members are found everywhere throughout the peninsula. The fourth and last class was the Sudra, condemned to the dirty work of the community. It was the servile or slave class, and such it is today. It sweeps the streets and does the scavenger work. I have a man at my hotel to keep my room clean. He is so humble and servile that he never looks up as he creeps dusting the floor.

Power of the Caste.

It is impossible for a stranger to understand how the Hindus look at caste matters. They accept their position in society as a matter of religion, and do not hope to alter it. All castes are hereditary. The son of a Brahman is bound to be a priest and the son of a Sudra a Sudra. The poorest Brahman always considers himself at the top of the heap, and he would spurn the millionaire of any lower class than his own. What is more, the millionaire would stay spurned. I was talking the other day with one of the chief officers of the British army in India about this matter. Said he: No matter how rich or how powerful a native becomes, he cannot rise above his caste. Take the Maharajah of Gwalior, he is one of the richest of the native rulers, and vast sums flow into his coffers. He has a big country to govern, and his subjects are millions. Nevertheless, the poorest Brahman among them would not give hif his daughter in marriage, and I am sure the Rajah would give all he had if he could change his caste. He would pay untold fortunes to be a Brahman, but that cannot be bought. We have Rajahs of such high caste that the majority of their subjects dare not come near them. I cannot describe the caste; it has existed for ages and it is strong today.

Marriage of the Brahmans.

The rules of caste are strict as to marriage, and this especially so as to the Brahmans. The daughter of a pork-packing millionaire could never marry a duke in this country. The Brahman thinks he condescends if he looks upon a woman of a caste below him, and as a rule marriages are made only in the caste and in the divisions of the castes to which one belongs. This leads to the union of cousins, and the consequent deterioration of the race.

As to marriages, the code of Manu is rigid, especially in the selection of a wife by the twice-born. There are certain families which the Brahmans must avoid no matter how rich they may be. The code advises him to wed a female free from bodily defects, one with good teeth and soft limbs, a moderate quantity of hair and the gait of an elephant. Let him beware of the maiden with reddish hair or who has no hair at all or who is sickly or red-eyed. He must marry in his own caste, but not to one of the same family on the father's side. Relation on the part of the mother does not seem to matter.

Some Caste Prejudices.

The laws also provide that only persons of the same caste may eat together, and for a person of one caste to touch the food of another defiles it. I stopped today before an itinerant sweetmeats peddler and began to finger some of the candies on his table. He grew angry and told me to keep my hands off, as the Hindus would not buy anything a foreigner had touched. This is especially so of the natives of the higher castes In the jails of India the cook is always a Brahman, for otherwise the prisoners of the lower castes would not eat the food. I am told that prisoners have been flogged and have starved to death rather than eat victuals cooked by a low-caste man.

During my travels in the Far East I have frequently been on steamers with Hindus of one grade or another. Those of the higher castes carry their cooks with them. They bring their own water on board and never come to the general tables. When the Rajah of Jeypore went to England not long ago, he had a full retinue of servants and his own kitchen, which could be entered by none but his own people.

The other day in visiting a temple here at Benares I met a Hindu with a beautiful brass bowl. He had just come up from the Ganges, and was sitting beside it. I picked it up, thinking to buy it. Thereupon the man grew angry, and my guide said that I had committed an unpardonable sin.

He said the man could not use the bowl until it had been heated red hot in the fire and thus purified.

Effect of Western Innovation.

The Hindus will not touch water which has not been drawn by their own people, and they must not eat food cooked in water supplied by different castes. This fact for a long time hindered the use of the water works which the English have introduced into some of the cities, but by a special dispensation granted by the Brahmans they are now raising the ban as to water on tap. This is one of the things tending to modify caste.

Another is the railways and tramways. At first the Brahmans and others of the higher castes wanted cars of their own. They could not get them, and now all must travel together. The schools of the government admit pupils of all castes, and the Brahman boys now sit in the same rooms with the Sudras.

The Brahmans have also changed certain caste rules as to drink. The stores are full of new things from abroad, and these are desired by all castes in common. It is allowable now to use patent medicines and soda water without losing one's soul. A man is not damned if he buys ice made by a foreigner, and he can eat soda crackers without being polluted.

One Million Fakirs.

I have before me the government statistics of the chief castes of India as they are today. This divides them into about 100 different classes, some numbering millions and some but a few hundred thousand. I am surprised to see that the fakirs, or religious devotees, have a caste of their own, and that there are more than 1,200,000 in India. I see them everywhere, undergoing all sorts of mortification of the flesh to attain merit and consequent salvation. I photographed one today sitting in a hand cart which was pushed from place to place by his admirers. It was a rude three-wheeled affair, open all around and decorated with flowers. The fakir was the most horrible figure I have ever seen outside catacombs or a medical museum. He was a living skeleton, almost stark naked, with great round, staring eyes and long, frowsy brown hair. His hands lay over the dashboard of the vehicle; they were claws. His shoulder bones almost protruded, and his knee bones, over which the flesh was tightly drawn, were fitted under his armpits, so that he sat erect with his knee actually under his arms. His face and body were smeared with ashes, and his great eyes alone showed the soul behind.

A Horde of Dirty Fanatics.

I have seen many of these men during my travels in India. They never wash, and pride themselves on their uncleanliness. Their methods of torture are legion. I have seen some who have sat or stood until their bodies have stiffened, and they could hardly move if they would. Some hold their arms erect until the nails grow into the flesh. There are fakers at Benares who never sit down, and others who lie on beds of spikes or nails or upon masses of broken stones.

Some try to acquire merit by refusing to sleep, and others by eating all sorts of vile foods. Such men carry about human skulls as drinking cups.

Among these religious frauds are those who claim they can remain buried under ground for a time without dying. Others are able to walk through fire, and at every holy fair you may see a half-dozen or so undergoing tho ordeal of the five fires. The faker sits almost naked, with four fires about him, just far enough away to prevent the flesh from sizzling. He is out in the open, and the fifth fire is the tropical sun, which blazes down on his head.

You have all heard of the Juggernaut car. That is a fraud that was carried on at one place in India. Among other torments are the thrusting of pieces of iron through the flesh, and especially through the tongue, and another is the swinging to and fro of steel hooks fastened into the muscles of the arms and breasts. Such things are not common here. But they may be seen now and then; and the people believe that those who practice them acquire merit, and thereby attain a higher position in the transmigrations to come.

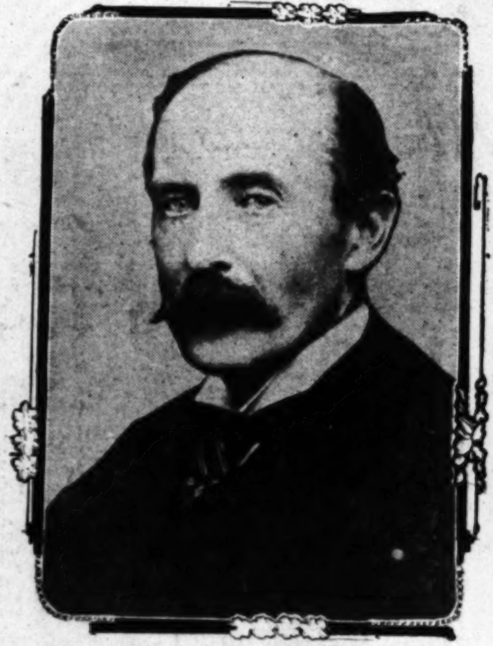
NEW PERMANENT UNDER-SECRETARY FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

By a Special Contributor.

SIR ARTHUR NICOLSON, who has been appointed to succeed Sir Charles Hardinge as permanent Under Secretary at the British Foreign Office on the appointment of the latter to be Viceroy of India, comes to that post as did Sir Charles Hardinge from the embassy at St. Petersburg.

The post of Permanent Under Secretary at the Foreign Office is the most important in British diplomacy, for this official has the virtual direction of all the Ambassadors and ministers abroad. Of course the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—at present Sir Edward Grey—is his nominal chief, but the permanent official is the man who really does the work. He it is who is responsible for maintaining the continuity of British foreign policy in spite of the changes of party fortunes which displace his temporary chiefs and while a new foreign secretary is learning his business the permanent under-secretary's power is practically unlimited.



SIR ARTHUR NICOLSON.

Sir Arthur Nicolson has had a distinguished career as a diplomat. He entered the Foreign Office in 1870 and remained there in various minor capacities for four years. He was assistant private secretary to Earl Granville, when that nobleman was Foreign Minister from 1872 to 1874, and in the latter year he entered the diplomatic service as third secretary to the embassy at Berlin. After that he served with the embassies at Peking, Constantinople, Teheran and Athens, and in 1888 he was appointed Consul-General at Budapest. where he remained until 1893, when he returned to Constantinople as secretary to the embassy. After that he was agent in Bulgaria, Minister in Morocco and Ambassador at Madrid. In 1905 he became Ambassador at St. Petersburg.

Sir Arthur is entitled to write a lot of letters after his name. In addition to being a privy councillor he is a G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., K.C.B., K.C.I.E., and a K.C.V.O.—all these letters representing honors conferred on him by his sovereign. He is also a baronet, the eleventh of his line, and no doubt before long he will become a peer.

Nothing Too Good for Hubby.

"Here is a new one the women seem to be working a good deal lately," remarked a local jeweler the other day. "They bring in all the old rings, stickpins and other junk of that sort that they have received since they were kids from their various sweethearts, and have the gold melted up into one ring.

"Some of them have this set with a small stone of some kind, and others just have them plain. Of course a married woman does not like to wear a ring that has been given to her by one of her earlier sweethearts, and lots of them have rings of that sort lying about in their jewelry cases. By having them all melted up into a composite souvenir the rings all lose their identity, and the husband can have no reason for even a tinge of jealousy. In fact, one woman came in recently and had all the rings she had collected from her old sweethearts melted up and made into a ring to give to her husband for his birthday present.

"Now whenever I sell a lady's ring to a young chap I wonder where it will finally end up. But if every young fellow stopped to think of such a contingency I am afraid there would be considerable falling off in the jewelry business."

Zoology of Diseases.

METHOD ADOPTED FOR STUDYING DEADLY MALADIES.

By a Special Contributor.

SURGEON-GENERAL WYMAN of the Public Health Service has been buying such quantities of live rabbits lately for use in his business that, in response to inquiry, he has felt obliged to explain that the animals are wanted not for vivisection, but for the manufacture of serums and antitoxins. They are dosed with small quantities of disease germs again and again, until, having been "hyper-immunized' by this means, their blood contains an anti-poison utilizable as a cure for the malady, whatever it may be, in human beings.

Capt. Charles F. Craig

Mithridates of old, the celebrated King of Pontus, was so afraid of being poisoned that he dosed himself constanty with small quantities of various kind of poisons, in order that he might become in a measure proof against them. Practically the same method is adopted by the Public Health Service, which, in the manner described, "hyperimmunizes" such animals as sheep, horses, cows, and rabbits, with a view to the subsequent employment of their blood for the cure or prevention of disease. It is by this means, for instance, that diphtheria antitoxin is obtained.

By the same means it is hoped to secure a satisfactory serum for the treatment or prevention of the bubonic plague. Already, in India, a plague "vaccine" has been obtained—made by breeding the germs of the disease in beef soup, and then kiling them by heat, the resulting fluid being administered by hypodermic injection. This is a matter of extreme importance, inasmuch as the malady in question is, at the present time, threatening to ravage our own country.

Our government, during the last fiscal year, spent large sums in fighting the plague on the Pacific Coast, and within the next twelve months it will expend much more for the same purpose.

The plague is a rat disease primarily. It is conveyed to human beings (as well as to ground squirrels) by the flea. A flea bites a plague-sick rat, and, later on, it bites a man, thus inoculating the latter with the deadly infection.

It is only through quite remarkable good luck that the malady has not already made its appearance at our principal Atlantic sea ports. This is practically certain to happen before very long, and the Public Health Service (which has its headquarters at Washington) has had for some time past a complete plan of campaign mapped out to meet such an emergency.

Immense quantities of grain and other merchandise are constantly being shipped from San Francisco and other Pacific Coast ports to the East. Rats are often transported with such merchandise, as involuntary passengers, hidden in grain sacks, or otherwise. Let one or two plague-sick specimens be delivered in New York, and the metropolis would be likely soon to have an epidemic on its hands—the first warning of the outbreak being afforded by the finding of large numbers of dead and dying rats about the wharves and in the streets.

To fight the mischief, if it once got started in New York, the municipality would be obliged to wage a war of extermination against rats. This would involve an expenditure of many millions of dollars—much money being required not only for the wholesale trapping and poisoning of the animals, but also for th rat-proofing of sewers, houses, and particularly buildings used for the storage of food supplies. Experience has shown that the only way to get rid of such vermin is to deprive them of food and hiding places.

Bubonic plague depends for its distribution among human beings on two animals—the rat and the flea. It serves very strikingly to illustrate what might be called the modern zoölogical aspect of diseases. The working laboratory of the Public Health Service in Washington, is today, indeed, a sort of station for natural-history research, and an official zoölogist, Dr. Charles W. Stiles, is in charge of one of its most important departments.

Nowadays when the study of a disease is begun suspicions are always entertained against one or more animals, as possibly accountable for the trouble directly or indirectly—just as, for example, the African crocodile is charged with maintaining in its blood the parasite of "sleeping sickness," which the dreaded tsetse fly (after biting the saurian, as is alleged,) conveys to human beings. Similarly, in our own country, the malignant anemia, which afflicts hundreds of thousands of people in the South, has been absolutely proved to be due to a minute "hookworm" that bores through the skin of the feet and, making its way to the intestine, establishes itself there as a blood sucker.

Such problems keep the government health authorities moving. As soon as one is solved, another turns up—as, for instance, in the case of the mysterious "spotted fever," which has been making so much trouble lately in the mountainous regions of Montana and adjacent Rocky Mountain States. It is an entirely new complaint, but extremely fatal, four out of every five persons attacked by it in the Bitter Root Valley (where it assumes its most virulent form) passing speedily from the sick bed to the burying gro

An Ex-Sleuth on Sleuths.

Sherlock Holmes Discusses the Latest English Mystery.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

"PARDON me for one moment," said Sherlock Holmes. Turning back his left cuff, he filled a hypodermic syringe from a bottle labeled "Eastman's No. 2 Developer," and shot the fluid into his arm. Instantly, his face changed from its dull negative tints to a strong ultramarine, like a blue print.

"Now, then," he said, with a keen glance, at the same time handing me a crock full of raw opium, a small lap board, a can of sweet oil and a putty knife. "you sit there and roll the pills for me and I will sit there and study you. Have a bite of laundry starch? I always eat it, with a drop or two of patent blueing on each lump, when I'm doing up a problem. I see," he went on, "that you are an American in disguise."

"How did you discover that?" I said, startled, for the nonce, out of the appearance of studied calm which every regular reporter should cultivate.

"By a simple series of observations," said the great criminologist, with a patient smile. "You have been here several minutes and so far you have not said 'I vum' nor 'I calkerlate,' nor 'Dew tell.' You have not ejaculated 'Jumpin' Jehosaphat' once, nor 'Suffering cats!' You do not wear chin whiskers and you are not chewing tobacco and your trousers are not tucked into the tops of a pair of cowhide boots. Since you have already admitted to me that you came from New York, the absence of these things shows that you are endeavoring to hide those racial peculiarities which every native British playwright and novelist knows to be typical of your nationality. You have been also caught out in an unexpected shower—your trouser legs are damp, it is now raining outside, and you are carrying an umbrella with somebody else's initials on the handle. You have prominent front teeth and are inclined to be stout. Correct me, if I am wrong in any of these deductions. You are smoking a cigar which you did not buy yourself. It was probably given to you by a wealthy acquaintance—it is a 25-cent cigar, and you have already said that you were a newspaper man. And you have come to ask me about the mystery of the mysterious murder of Hillflop Terrace Islington, London, E. G.—the Blippen case?"

"How did you know that?" I asked, overcome with admiration for the wonderful powers of analysis of this man who had in his lifetime done so much for society and A. Conan Doyle.

"Ah," said Sherlock Holmes, "perhaps I know it because you told me so when you first came in. And perhaps because I deduced it from my inner consciousness; who can say? But, really now, I do not think I can help you solve the Blippen mystery. You see I have given up all that sort of thing since I lost Watson."

"Can it be," I asked, "that Dr. Watson is dead? I hadn't heard of it."

"No," said the great criminologist, "Watson is of the type that rarely die. They live to a tremendously overripe old age, boring people to the very last. Watson should never be permitted to die. His death would remove from the world an organized ignorance which can ill be spared in this age of bright children, young college graduates and the higher education. You remember how it used to be—I would sum up all the points of evidence in a baffling crime and lay them down in front of him so plainly that any 10-year-old boy, excepting, of course, a 10-year-old boy of the Watson family, could tell instantly the correct answer to the puzzle, and I would then ask him what he made of it. And then he would pull some suety, gummy, seedless-raisin kind of an answer out of that English fruit cake that he used for a brain, and that would give me a chance to go ahead and work the whole thing out step by step as plain as mud, thereby greatly increasing Sir Conan's royalties. I got all of my best results by using Watson as my raw material. There were more things he didn't know and couldn't even guess than there really are. He was ignorant of everything there is, and many other things. So, finally, he decided that he was wasting his opportunities trailing along with me. He began looking about for some field of endeavor where he could capitalize his magnificent stupidity and make something out of it. He thought for a while of getting a place as clerk in a book store. It also occurred to him that he was well fitted to take over the Question and Answers Department of a daily newspaper. But Watson realized that he was fitted for something higher than that. So he struck on a place that was really suited to him—a job where he could employ his ignorance constantly and consistently and make it stand out."

"Where is that?" I asked.

"In charge of the information bureau at a railroad terminal in the United States," said Sherlock Holmes. "He's there now, and giving perfect satisfaction to the management of the railroad company. I miss him sometimes. He would have been of great help to me in this Hillflop Terrace affair. Still I think Scotland Yard has gone at it in a characteristic way."

"Characteristic?" I repeated. "Characteristic of what?"

"Characteristic of Scotland Yard," said Sherlock Holmes, simply. "Let us review the events in their proper order: An American gentleman named Blippens is living with his American wife, also named Blippens, in a villa. A new lady appears at the villa and the old one disappears, leaving the Monday wash still on the line. A neighbor hears a female voice screaming for help in the dead of night, but naturally supposes it's merely some sturdy Briton pursuing the popular, indoor sport of beating his wife, and thinks no more about it. But by and by little things that are almost calculated to arouse suspicion begin to multiply. The husband underakes to sell the late incumbent wife's teeth in the open market, and explains that she's gone where she won't need 'em any more. He's caught digging up the concrete in the coal cellar, and explains that he's thinking of putting in a little winter garden. The police are notified. But there is no hurry. The Britons are a conservative people; we move forward slowly, as witness our conduct in the late Boer War. I'm not speaking of our retreats, remember now, but of our forward moments.

"So the police go forward. First, Inspector Jerkins-Jones, accompanied by two constables, calls on Blippens and tells him informally, in the name of the Crown, greetings, that there's a wife reported missing and asks him whether, by any chance, he's mislaid one. He gives them answers which border on the elusive. He says she's dead; that she has gone to Los Angeles, believed to be the name of a wild Yankee country somewhere in the eastern part of Poughkeepsie, U.S.A.; that she has run away; that he now has a satisfactory wife, and couldn't undertake to keep up with more than one wife at a time; and that he's never had any wife, anyhow. These answers are not deemed completely satisfactory by the authorities. It would seem to them that the man is holding something back. Bit by bit the significant circumstances continue to accumulate. So, after a while, the inspector goes back and pays a formal visit. 'Blippens,' he says to the suspect, 'owing to the court being in mourning, things are a bit disarranged just now, but in the course of a few days, when the Home Secretary takes off heavy black, I'll be around to arrest you for murder, and it is my duty to warn you that anything you may say will be used against you, whether you say it or not. I trust you will be in when I come so as not to keep me waiting.'

"But in spite of all these careful precautions, when they return at the appointed time, the police find the villa locked up with a To-Let-Furnished sign on it, and Blippens actually gone. It's enough to undermine their confidence in human nature. It shows that this murderer is not a man of his word. It's what you get, so the authorities decide, for trusting one of these self-made, vulgar American bounder murderers.

"But the great machinery of English justice soon recovers from the first shock of disappointment. They put a piece in the paper appealing to Blippens, if he really calls himself a gentleman, to come in and surrender and be hanged according to the old English common law. And after waiting for only two or three weeks longer, they send out circulars asking everybody to be on the lookout for him because he has almost certainly returned to America and is doubtless concealed in an obscure seaport on the South of England, and is thought to have fled to Russia, and there are strong reasons to believe that he has gone to a French hotel and hidden himself in a hotel bathroom where he will be safe from discovery for weeks and perhaps months. He will probably be disguised as a traveling female typewriter, or as an old lady, or, since he is slender and has pink eyebrows and red side whiskers, possibly as an itinerant ear wig. The description also states that he speaks with an American accent, which ought to fetch him, since every other American who ever spent as much as a month in England went home with a pronounced Piccadilly accent and qualified for membership in the When-I-Was-ON-The-Other-Side Club. Yet, still he continues to absent himself from the vigilant detectives. It is unaccountable."

"We would do things differently in America," I said. with a touch of pride in my voice, "or even in France."

"Quite so," agreed Sherlock Holmes, "but in France all murders invariably get tangled up in some way with the Dreyfus case sooner or later. In New York, your detective force would work on the basis of clews first and theories afterward, a clew being something that can be put on a front page with a large head on it, while a theory is much larger than a clew and can be illustrated. When the time comes to make an arrest, the force moves in a very secretive manner. Accompanied by the Mayor and Board of Aldermen in carriages, the press in hired conveyances, the staff photographers on sightseeing cars, and citizens afoot, the silent sleuths go out and surreptitiously bring in the suspect.

"They take him to headquarters, where the chief inspector, moistening his palms by the same method that the O'Reillys, the Haggertys and other kings of Ireland have always employed, takes a firm grip on the suspect's neck, and presses the Adam's apple firmly back into the main design until the prisoner's tongue hangs down on his chest like a pink necktie. This is known as the third degree, and is so called because nobody ever lived to take the fourth. While the accused is in the hospital recovering from the effects of his preliminary examination, his confession is secretly published in all the papers and the reporters collect the evidence and save the jurors any mental strain by trying him in advance. That closes the incident, unless it should develop that he belongs to a wealthy family who can afford to hire an alienist. 'Here's your retaining fee,' says the family, 'how soon can you give us an expert opinion?' 'Just as soon as I've counted over the roll,' says tht noted scientist. 'If the amount is correct, I feel no hesitancy in informing you that this unfortunate kinsman of yours is suffering from a strange kind of incurable insanity that he'll recover from the day after he's acquitted.' Yes, to my mind, you Americans are too forceful and hurried. In investigating a murder you lack the British repose of manner.

"I was just thinking," added Sherlock Holmes, musingly.

"Thinking what?" I prompted.

"I was thinking," said Sherlock Holmes, "what an ideal summer murder resort, for an American with a wife and trunk to spare, Lake Como would make, if it could only be put under the jurisdiction of Scotland Yard."

A PROSPECTING JOURNEY INTO THE DEPTHS OF THE REPUBLIC.

By a Special Contributor.

HONDURAS is a particularly appropriate name for that country of hills and valleys. It is said that Las Honduras (The Depths) is the name given the country by the Spanish Conquistadores in their march northward during their conquest of Central America—probably so named for the difficulties encountered in making trail over the mountains.

Entering the republic on the Pacific or south side, we landed at Amapala, a well-protected port situated on El Tigre Island in the Bay of Fonseca. There is only a short wharf at Amapala to accommodate vessels of light draught, so we were hustled into a canoe and rowed to the wharf by a native boatman. Here we were set upon by a throng of natives ranging from small boys to gray-haired men, every one of whom wished to carry our baggage to the hotel. After much bickering, one youth agreed to carry all our bundles, fifteen in number, from the wharf to the customhouse and thence to the hotel for two and one-half pesos, the equivalent of $1 in our coin, and the bargain was made.

We found the hotel to be a two-story wooden structure, old, dirty and infested with rats, bedbugs and other vermin. We secured rooms, or rather a room, with several cots in it, had our dinner and retired. We passed a sleepless night and arose at 4 a.m. for a meal of coffee, fruit, tortillas and honey, before embarking for San Lorenzo. In settling for our meals we were obliged to change some of our money for the coin of the country, and received two and one-half for one, one peso being worth approximately 40 cents United States coin.

At 5:30 we entered a gasoline launch for the trip to San Lorenzo, the mainland port of Honduras in the Bay of Fonseca. We paid 25 pesos in advance for five of us and our baggage, and considered it very reasonable, for the distance is twenty-one miles. The trip up the bay was a beautiful experience. The water was as calm as glass except where broken by a rising shark or porpoise, and the surrounding mountains and islands were perfectly mirrored in its placid depths. Away to the west hung, like a pall, a heavy cloud of black smoke, marking the spot where Izalco, the ever-active volcano of El Salvador holds forth. We wound our way through channels between the heavy everglades, twisting and turning until I wondered at our boatman's being able to find the way at all. In places we entered lanes where the trees would approach one another till only a few feet of water remained on either side of the boat, only to emerge into open water again and perhaps to be startled by the sudden rising of a flock of cranes or aigrets.

Arriving at San Lorenzo, we found a flatboat unloadong provisions and merchandise for the San Rosario Mine at San Juancito, 120 miles away. These supplies were loaded upon heavy bull carts of crude construction; the wheels were of solid wood four inches in thickness and about three feet in diameter. The oxen were hooked to the pole of the cart by a curious wooden yoke which fits upon the heads of the beasts and is lashed there with buckskin thongs and rags. It is a very crude method of yoking oxen, but is invariable throughout Central America.

After partaking of a breakfast of tortillas, honey, turtles' eggs and chicken, we were informed that our beasts were waiting to take us to the capital, Tegucigalpa. We found awaiting us the poorest and scrawniest lot of stock that I have ever had the misfortune to encounter, and the saddles simply beggared description; some were discarded cavalry saddles of antique design, some were old Spanish saddles, and some were simply pieces of stiff cowhide stretched over wooden frames. However, we mounted and set out upon our way northward. The road lies over a succession of rolling hills covered with a beautiful growth of tropical verdure. Cattle and hogs of inferior breeds were scattered through the country and paid no attention to us as we passed by. We were very fortunate in having as one of our party, Gen. Manuel E. Lardizabal, late of the Honduran army, an educated and accomplished gentleman, and very kindly disposed toward Americans. The general named and described to us the points of interest on the way and assisted us greatly in arranging for accommodations. It is customary to telegraph ahead and arrange for meals and sleeping quarters, and the excellence of the telegraph system of Central America renders this very convenient. From almost any hamlet one can telegraph or cable to any part of five words may be sent to any point in five Central American republics for 15

At irregular intervals we passed native roadside, some built of vertical poles set inches apart, and thatched with palm leaves tall," a sort of thick jungle grass; others red clay tile roofs. These huts of the have only the earth for floors, and the comprises more than a table and a chair is kept in gourds, and these also serve sils. A Tragedy of the Range.

A HEROIC ACT OF A YOUNG MEXICAN OF LONG AGO.

By a Special Contributor.

ON the balmy 22nd of May, in the year 1868, 2000 and more fat and sleek, but tired, footsore steers were quietly resting. Some stood contentedly chewing, while many lay dozing in the rank alfilleria, on the great level mesa and down through the mouth of the Cañada Verdi out onto the broad flats that lie along the river near the center of the Cuyama Valley. Only four days before they had been crowded into the mouth of the narrows of the Santa Maria River less than thirty-five miles below, and with much urging had been forced through, over and among the rocks of that fearful gorge.

These were beef steers, bought and owned by a noted buyer and drover of early California days, Lugi Marre, then of San Francisco, and were gathered from the but slightly replenished herds of many ranchos, even below the pueblo of Los Angeles as far south as the Mission San Juan Capistrano. Trailing along the Camino Real, Lugi Marre and twenty trained vaqueros driving and guarding, more than half a hundred saddle horses in the caballada ahead, went over the Conejo and through the famous Gaviota Pass, into the head of the Santa Maria Valley. Here they left the usual route that followed the old overland stage road, and laid their course for the mining towns on the Merced, Tuolumne and Stanislaus Rivers through the Coast Range by way of the Santa Maria River gorge known as the Narrows, through the Cuyama Valley and on over the San Joaquin plains.

Old Antonio, who was chief cook of the culinary portion of this outfit, had made camp beneath the shade of a large white oak tree that still stands at the foot of the mesa bluff where the Agua Caliente spring pours down from the rocks and rushes to the river just below. It was near the noon hour, and over the coals broiled and baked the meat and the crisp tortillas. About lounged all but three of the vaqueros, inhaling the pleasant incense of the all but ready midday meal with the pungent smoke of their cigarettes. Three stood guard over the quiet herd, and one of these, José Calderon, a fair youth scarcely out of his teens—the pride and pet of the older vaqueros—stood beside his horse at the summit of a small knoll that rose to the height of probably thirty feet out of the smooth mesa, and that commanded a perfect view of this characteristic Southern California pastoral scene of that time.

Off toward the eastern horizon where the Sierra San Rafael meets the sky and crowds close in to the lofty Mt. Pinos of the Sierra Pelona there rose to view in the otherwise clear sky a small dark cloud that came on down the cañon of the upper Santa Maria River, and in a few minutes had spread out into a great dark mass that filled the entire upper end of the Cuyama Valley, shutting out from sight the mountains above. A breeze, blowing in from Kern Valley over the low Paletta hills, drove the whole black mass off to the south, where it hung low on the mountain ridge that forms the south wall of the Cuyama Valley. A phenomenon of nature, peculiar to that section, then took place. The atmosphere became oppressively sultry, a wind came up from the south, and almost instantly the sky was filled with rolling, tumbling clouds. There was a barely perceptible quivering reflex of distant lightning.

The youth José, though young in years, had learned well the arts and ways of the range when a child watching the herds of his father down beyond the Colorado Desert in old Sonora, and knowing well what was due to happen within the next few moments, with a graceful swing sat lightly but firmly in the saddle, his left hand grasping the bridle reins, his right instinctively feeling for the heavy rawhide quirt that hung at the pommel of his saddle, his bright eyes riveted on the great quiet herd below. There was a vivid flash of light. Some mighty power had swung an unseen sword that cut a fearful zigzag gash through the semi-twilight and left a burning red scar, that remained in sight for an instant and then as instantly healed.

José began nervously and rapidly counting, his yet brighter eyes ever on that quiet herd. "Uno, dos, tr——" With a crash the very heavens tore apart. A rumbling roar swung off to the south and the mountain cliffs there passed it back down the valley. José's heavy mounted spurs raked the trembling flanks of his restless mount. He heard nothing, only saw those 2000 and more fear-crazed steers plunge forward and sweep out onto the level plain.

Directly across their course a short half-mile away, ran the small stream of the Santa Maria River through the deep alluvial soil of the valley, between perpendicular banks a hundred feet apart and forty feet down. Had that onrushing bunch of crowding horns and hide reached there, a fortune would have vanished in an instant. A score of proud vaqueros would have lost caste among their kind and have been classed as gringos, fit only to companion with dogs and guard sheep.

At their front, crowding in closely, recklessly rode young José. Swinging far out from the saddle, lashing and beating with his quirt at the head of a brindle longhorn giant that as a yearling cropping swamp grass and tule in the cienegas down about the mouth of the Santa Ana had survived the drouth of '64. Close up rode Lugi Marre with the doubled loop of his reata desperately lashing the long-horned heads. Closely following were twenty faithful, fearless vaqueros, yelling and slashing, in a hand-to-hand struggle to swing the crazed herd and circle it ere reaching the river bank. Within a rod of the bank José passed as he swung around with the moiling band, leaning far out from the saddle right over those long pointed horns, beating and lashing more fiercely at the head of that brindle giant. And the battle was won.

The feet of a near-winded mustang sank deep into the soft mound that covered a family home of the cute little valley chipmunk. A fallen horse sprang quickly to his feet and carried an empty saddle on around with the wild swing of the moiling herd. José's lithe body as he fell had met the upthrust of a steel-like point, where he hung for a moment, and then with a toss of that brindle giant's head was thrown heavily to the ground. Lugi Marre jerked his horse to a stand, and sprang to the side of the fallen hero. The others raced on around with the all but conquered herd.

Within an hour of the time of that fearful clash of thunder those 2000 and more steers were peacefully grazing among the scattered clumps of Indian arrowwood that grew along the river flats, and the sun shone brightly over the vast and magnificent Cuyama Valley from a clear sky. Down near the river bank knelt Lugi Marre, with a silken scarf pressed tightly to the ragged wound across a dying lad's breast in a vain attempt to stanch the crimson flow. As the sun broke through the parting clouds and decked with glittering jewels the fair landscape freshly baptized from the heavens, Lugi Marre, bending low his head, heard from José's pallid lips these barely whispered words: "Yo le mandaria un mandaje a Anita, en Hermosillo Adios, Adios. And that faithful Sonoranian lad was dead.

As the mellow Cuyama twilight slowly merged into the night the saddened, toil-stained vaqueros carried from the river's bed the last of the boulders that form a stone cross that lies alone, beneath the constant vigil of the mountains, amid the solitude of the Cuyama Valley. On over the plains of the San Joaquin trailed the great drove to its destination and to its destiny, but the stone cross is there in the Cuyama Valley still. It lies on a beautiful flat near the center of the valley. Just to the south side stands the mesa bluff. On the other flows the river.

AUGUSTUS SLACK.

Warfield as a Conjurer.

Warfield and I met in a little hotel in Montana. Before dinner, I had been in the café watching a wizard at cards, without doubt the cleverest manipulator I had ever seen. He had the crowd of ranchmen and cowboys staring open-mouthed.

"David Warfield is in there eating his dinner," I said to the entertainer. "Warfield thinks he can handle cards. Let me call him; I want him to see you do it."

"Bring him in," said the performer. "I always like to work before a fresh guy who thinks he knows it all. Thinks he can handle cards, does he? Perhaps he can sing. He's the one at the theater, ain't he?"

The two came together. The card man flourished the pack in a fancy shuffle. He went through some of the old tricks and Warfield looked on with intense interest. "Want me to explain that one to you?" asked the card man graciously. Warfield nodded. "You hold the cards, then; give them a shuffle." Immediately they slid the full length of the Warfield arm and his instructor stood amazed. "Look at a card quick," said the music master, "I'm due at the theater. Got one in your mind? Well, keep thinking of that particular card." The whole pack was flipped into the air. They came down in a neat pile, and quick as a flash, Warfield arranged eight cards in a wheel. "Take up any seven," he directed. "The one that's left is the one you were thinking about. Yes? Good-night; glad I met you. Have some refreshments, boys; sorry I've got to go. Here's your money, waiter."

A dollar dropped on the table, rang clear silver, and then mysteriously disappeared as Warfield passed through the door.

"Nice little game of yours, wasn't it?" sneered the performer. "That wasn't Warfield nor any other singer. That's a crook, I tell you, a real gentleman crook. Nobody could do those things but a professional. I know what I'm talking about. He did some of the hardest things in the business. Hully gee!"

Salt River Flowing Inland from the Sea.

A current of water will flow back and forth in a tidewater river, but on the island of Cephalonia, near Greece, is the curious phenomena of a river steadily flowing inward from the sea and disappearing. All rivers naturally flow toward the lower levels to the sea, and this curious instance on the island in the Mediterranean is not duplicated anywhere else in the world, so far as is known.

The sea, which is almost tideless, enters the land at four points where the coast is practically on a level with the surface of the sea. These four streams unite to form the little river that flows inland until it finally disappears in the limestone rocks and sinks into the earth. The volume of the river is too great to be removed by evaporation, and the question is, where does it go?—[Exchange.

The Joyous Country.

SUMMER'LL soon be on the go—
Life with music thrillin',
We'll be hangin' mistletoe,
An' all the gals are willin'.

Soon the fiddler'll take his place
For the dancin' party,
Joy'll beat trouble in the race—
"Hands all 'round, my hearty!"

Toilers in the Summer's heat,
Sweetest rest—they'll win it;
Here's the world that's hard to beat,
Half of Heaven in it!

If Old Tribulation's frown
Still seek to ruffle,
Take a dozen banjos down—
Dance a "double-shuffle!"

One old Satan came our way,
Sharp at sinners glancin',
Stopped to hear a fiddle play,
Then he went to dancin'.

That was better than to fry
Sinners on a griddle;
When at last he said good-by,
Stole the finest fiddle!

Soon from toil a holiday,
Happy all together,
When the fiddler comes to say,
"Here's yer dancin' weather!"

Satan in the Melon Patch.

ONE hot day in de middle o' July, w'en de lightini' itse'f wuz so hot dat it melted befo' it got ter whar it wuz gwine, ol' man Satan made up his mind dat it wuz de very best time ter make a big haul o' sinners, as he would most likely ketch de whole crowd at a picnic; so he hopped into his fiery chariot an' made a beeline ter de airth.

He wuzn't no time gettin' here, but he couldn't find a sinner on de picnic grounds whar dey mostly congregates, an' he wuz puzzled for ter know de reason why, 'twel one o' de saints what allus goes ter sleep in church of a Sunday tol' him.

"'Dey ever' one over yander," he said, "havin' de time o' der lives in a fifteen-acre watermelon patch. Right dar is whar you'll find 'em."

Ol' Satan tol de saint thanky, an' said he'd see him later, an' went off ter find dat melon match, an' purty soon he wuz dar, an' found dat de saint had told nuttin' but de truth ter him; fer dar de sinners wuz, making dem juicy watermelons look few an' fur between!

He didn't make hisself known at fust, an' de sinners felt so full an' generous dey axed him ter jine 'em, an' it wuzn't two minutes befo' Satan wuz divin' into de red hearts o' de biggest melons in sight, an' he so enjoyed hisself dat he clean fergot what he come fer.

But when time come ter go he axed 'em ef dey'd please ter give him 'bout half a dozen o' dem fine melons fer seed.

Kaze de idee had come ter him dat ef he could des grow watermelons in de brimstone country he'd soon have mo' sinners comin' dat way than ever he had sence de day Adam went into de apple business.

An', jedgin' by de way de sinners is crowdin' him, my opinion dat he's done give it out dat de place whar he live at is one big watermelon patch, an' de only fire dat's dar is what is built round it, ter skeer off de people what ain't entitled ter eat dem melons, ef dey tries ter climb de fence in de night.

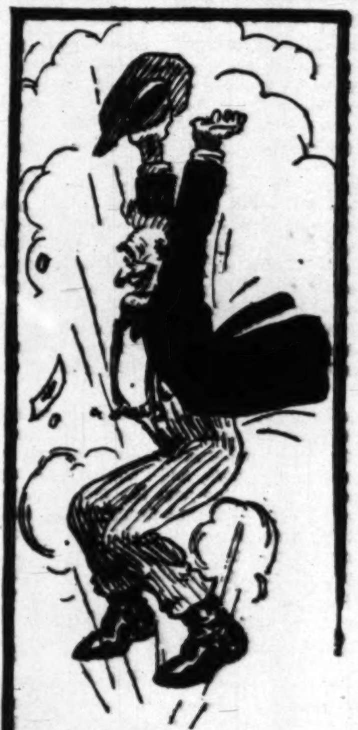
What the Money Said.

I'M dreamin' of you, Money, and I see the dollars gleam,
For in weather dark or sunny you are singin's in my dreams:
"When a fellow has spent his last red cent
The world looks blue—you bet!
But give him a dollar and you'll hear him holler:
'There's life in the old land yet!'"
That's the old song you are singin,'



"But give him a dollar and you'll hear him holler, 'There's life in the old land yet!'"

And I love to hear the tune;
Brings sunlight in December, adds
Roses rare to June.
"When a fellow has spent his last red cent
The world looks blue—you bet!
But give him a dollar and you'll hear him holler:
'There's life in the old land yet.'"

ELLS OF THE HAPPY ENDING OF A LOVERS'S QUARREL.

By a Special Contributor.

OMETHING was wrong inside "old man Kice's" rge, square, white-porch house on the ridge; Mrs. Kice could not be heard singing "Lilly Dale," and e windows of Isabella's room—the one opening on alcony under the gables—the curtains were not yet to the sun.

the younger generation of Pawnee Valley knew window well. First, the room 'had been Tom s, and neighbor boys frequently assisted him in out of the window at nights, when some scape- plan required secret absence from home. Then, Tom went to college, Isabella took possession of partment, and the light glimmering there became star of promise to many wooers.

length it came to be a special beacon to Keith g, the young rancher whose land lay across Paw- River, a scant half-mile away. From the porch of chelor quarters the Kice balcony and window were visible through the branches of the old cotton- windbreaks bordering his land.

next morning Miss Isabella did not appear at the st table, and when the man of the house was d of for the day, Mrs. Kice summoned Kibby a council.

Kice uttered a faint: "Why, Isabella!" and too, retreated below stairs. Kibby Ann an inquiring head from the kitchen.

she's vexed, all right," said Mrs. Kice, and then the sound of pattering feet in the hallway, she threw herself into a chair and covered her face apron. In a moment the girl was at the bot- stairway, and with a murmur of contrition to Mrs. Kice and caught her in her arms.

Mother, Mother, please don't cry any more. Oh. know it was you at the door, Mother; I thought Kibby again."

," and the apron was lowered from a pair of dry eyes, "what makes you so vexed with old ma? Have you and your young man had out?"

"Keith Osberg is nothing to me any more, Mother; it isn't going to be, at all."

The matron put her hand beneath Isabella's dimpled chin and forced the girl to look into her face.

"So it's all off," said Mrs. Kice, presently. "And you do love him a lot, don't you, dearie?"

"Oh, I couldn't tell how much I love—loved him. It was my temper, my miserable temper, last night. Mother, I've ruined my life."

"A-ah, go on, dearie; you think just as much of each other as ever; and I'm sure your pa and me think he's as near worthy of you as we can expect to find a young man."

"Yes; but we're angry at each other now, and I can't ask him to take me back and love me again."

"Again, eh? Why, child, while we're talking this minute, he's out in his storeroom with Paris green in one hand and rat poison in the other, wondering whether he'd better take 'em separately or both together."

"No, he isn't; he's getting ready to take that fleshy Herman girl out riding. He said he was going to, last night."

"I s'pose you told him you'd be setting on our steps to see 'em go by?"

"No; just before he said that I told him the Bartlett boy had asked me to try his new automobile, and I guessed I'd go."

"Uh-huh, I understand. You had a regular cat-and-dog time out at the gate. Now, you go to the telephone and ask him if he ain't ashamed of himself, or tell him you are."

"Not for worlds would I do anything of the sort."

"Then, I s'pose I'll have to."

Isabella went to the telephone and stood with her back against it. "Mother, you mustn't. Even if I could so far forget myself as to communicate with him, don't you know that the moment a bell rings on our party line, everybody in the valley goes to the phone, no matter whose call it is? I'll not have them gossiping about me."

"That's so," Mrs. Kice assented. "Whenever I go to the phone I can hear everybody in the valley taking down their receivers, no matter whose ring it is. They're an inquisitive set. Oh, well, we'll think of something else."

"Never mind, Mother, if it was any one else besides that odious Herman girl I'd—I'd——"

"Tut, tut, now; don't begin that. It flustrates me when you cry, and I can't think when I'm flustrated. I want to know if you remember what went with them little flags your brother Tom and Keith used to play with, along of the time of the Spanish war. They used to send messages with them—'Damn the torpedoes,' and 'Fetch cake and supplies,' and things like that. Your room was Tom's then, and he'd string 'em from that pole on your balcony."

"I don't know where they are, and if I did I wouldn't tell," declared the girl, hotly. "I'll not ask Keith to come over. Let Eloise Herman have him; I'll dance at the wedding with the Bartlett boy."

"Certainly, dearie, you shall. Willie Bartlett's a fine young man——"

"A conceited young snipe!"

"And all he needs is a little encouragement. But I think your heart's set on Keith, and I want to patch up this thing before he begins to associate with the Hermans. They're a real clever family."

"Mother, are you advising me to trap Keith, whether he wants me or not?"

"Course not; only in about two weeks the Herman girl'll have him buffaloed, as your pa would say, so the boy won't know what he does want, that's all."

"Let her; it will serve him right."

"And you'll be unhappy, dearie."

"That will serve me right, too."

"Mebbe so, child; but this romantic business between a young feller and a girl is an awful pretty thing to see; and it'll make you both better and happier for it as long as you live, if it ain't spoiled, dearie. There wasn't any of it with your pa and me—bless his old buttons, just the same. Folks may call it puppy love, and all that; but if the pup loves you, the dog will let himself be tore to pieces for your sake, and greater love than that no man hath, so the Good Book says. Now, stop crying, mother's lamb, and go get your breakfast. When you pass by the kitchen, holler in for Kibby Ann to come here a minute."

Presently Kibby Ann appeared, still disposed to act the downtrodden victim of circumstances, and with the trace of a whine in her voice.

"D'je want me, Mis' Kice?" she asked. "Issy said'je did."

"Yes, I do. I want to see if you can't remember something."

"I s'pose I can't; I might of, if I'd had anybody to do their duty by me."

"For the land's sake, will you stop bringing up your everlasting past life? This that I mean hasn't been so very long ago—Tom was telling about it when he was home the last time. It's the letters the wireless telegraph machine sends out when there's a wreck on the ocean. They're either 'C.O.D.,' of 'P.D.Q.' Which is it, Kibby Ann?"

"Honst to goodness I can't remember."

"Let me be, then, Kibby; I want to think."

Left to herself, Mrs. Kice plunged at once into the deepest cogitation. After a time her face brightened and a gleam of suppressed merriment shone in her eyes. Satisfying herself that Isabella was still occupied with breakfast she hurried to the girl's room. On the balcony outside the window the pulleys and wire halliards used by Isabella's brother in the war games of boyish days were still intact. Presently the long-unused rigging was heard to creak and the halliards slatted against the balcony railing in the morning breeze. Mrs. Kice hurried down to meet Isabella.

"Now, dearie," said the elder woman, "let's go and watch for the mail carrier out of the front window."

"I want to straighten up my room, Mother."

"No; let's rest awhile first. See if that ain't Keith's team standing in front of his place. I wonder where he's going, so early in the morning? See him anywhere?"

"N-no—yes, I do, he's just running out of his house. No, he's in his carriage, and driving as fast as the team can go!"

"Uh-huh. Where to, I wonder?"

"Probably to the Hermans'. We'll know soon. If he turns after he crosses the river he's going there. If he keeps straight on——"

"He's coming here?"

Isabella turned with a questioning look in her eyes From river was heard a rumbling r-r-r-rt, and Mrs. Kice smiled.

"That racketty old bridge ain't been crossed that fast since the Pollard twin swallowed the marble."

The girl sprang to her feet.

"Oh, Mother, he didn't turn—he's coming here!" and she hastened out of the house and down the path. Then, pausing, she turned to wave her hand at Mrs. Kice standing in the doorway. A white ensign, bravely fluttering from her balcony, sent her back wonder-struck and distressed.

"That—that flag," she gasped; "is it—can it be?"

"Yes, it can be, and is; I knew if your best white petticoat wouldn't fetch him nothing would. And here he is, coming to rally around the flag. Go and meet him, Isabella."

And Isabella went.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN NAPHEYS.

An Indian Faith Cure.

Col. William Bent, who erected Bent's Fort on the Arkansas River, in Eastern Colorado, back in the early fifties, married a squaw from the Cheyenne tribe and raised a family. Two of the sons are still citizens of that State. One of them, when about 15 years of age, was stricken with an illness which baffled the skill of all who professed knowledge of diseases. In order to save the boy, Col. Bent took him to St. Louis—a long and tedious trip over the prairie to St. Joseph, and then by boat. The best in the profession labored over the youth, but to no benefit, and his father was advised to return home and let him die among his people.

Arriving home, the colonel decided to make another attempt to save his boy. Having previous knowledge of some reported marvelous cures accomplished by the medicine man of the Snake Indians, and being also on extremely friendly terms with that individual, the colonel sent a courier to the Wind River country in Wyoming after him, a trip covering more than 600 miles.

The medicine man responded to the call. He was shown into the room where lay the boy, by this time almost a skeleton. After a hasty examination, the Indian arose and exclaimed: "Me cure him, sure, quick." He told the boy that at some time while drinking water he had swallowed the egg of some reptile; that this had been warmed into life and was at that time alive in his stomach. Then he took a stroll, unaccompanied, out on the prairie, where he caught a small sand lizard. Returning to the sick room, he took an eagle's quill from a war bonnet and ran the feathery end down the boy's throat, keeping the hand containing the lizard close to the boy's mouth. Of course, the feather made the boy gag, gasp and cough, and with the cough the medicine man removed the feather, and at the same time exultantly exhibited the lizard, proudly exclaiming: "I got him! I know what trouble was!"

The boy rapidly recovered, and grew into a man weighing 200 pounds. As before stated, he still lives in Colorado, and no one can make him believe he was a victim of deception. His stalwart faith in the Indian medicine man's words and actions, his race's faith, cured him.

Lived, Though Neck Pierced by Arrow.

It was in the summer of '59 that George Wainwright and Ben Spencer, each in charge of a train of freight wagons, were headed for the Missouri River to bring supplies back to Colorado points. The Indians were very troublesome in those days, and these two outfits always camped together for protection. One night they had arranged the camp, with the wagons forming a circle and everybody but the guards were to be inside. Wainwright preferred to sleep in a clump of cottonwoods about a quarter of a mile off, and there he fixed himself with his negro servant as a bodyguard. Neither the camp nor Wainwright were disturbed during the night, but early the next morning, while Wainwright was sitting on the ground with his back to a tree drinking his tin of coffee, an arrow from an unseen foe entered his neck to the right of the jugular vein, and was driven with such force as to impale the victim to the tree. The negro, believing his master was killed, ran to Spencer's camp and gave the alarm.

Spencer and some of his men rushed over to Wainwright. Instead of being dead, Wainwright was not even seriously injured. Spencer cut the arrow off close to the point of entrance, and then gently drew Wainwright's head forward until he was released. The victim suffered but little inconvenience from the wound, and by the time the trip was completed it was entirely healed.

A Notable Birthday.

EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA COMPLETES EIGHTIETH YEAR THIS MONTH.

By a Special Contributor.

THE most notable birthday of recent years occurs this month, when most of the royalty that reigns today will help "Europe's grand old man," Francis Joseph I, Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, to celebrate his entrance upon the ninth decade of his tragic life.

When this nestor of the world's rulers was born, August 18, 1830, none of the present heads of great states had yet seen the light, although Diaz of Mexico came into being when Francis Joseph was an infant of six weeks. Indeed, with the exception of the King of Greece and Sultan of Turkey, no independent monarch reigning today was alive even when Francis Joseph acceded to his throne in the early winter of 1848.

He has reigned longer than any great ruler of modern times except Victoria, and if he lives until next June a year he will beat her record of sixty-three and a half years upon the throne. Next December he will end the sixty-second year of his reign.

Crown Prince Francis Ferdinand and daughter

Europe's Grand Old Man.

Crown Prince Francis Ferdinand and Morganatic

Emperor Francis Joseph

Too Strenuous for Roosevelt.

How strenuous this royal patriarch still is he proved a few weeks ago when he planned a day's programme for Theodore Roosevelt which included getting up in the middle of the previous night and being on the hunting grounds at sunrise to surprise the wily capercailzie or wood grouse. And this was the only proposition made to him during his triumphal return from Africa that seems to have sounded a little too lively for the ex-President. At any rate, he declined, much to the disappointment of "Father Franz," who for two generations has been known as the mightiest nimrod among European royalty. He is said to possess the world's finest collection of hunter's trophies, and so fond is he of the gunner's sport that he reserves a place in his privy council for the grand huntsman of the empire. This factotum, who is thereby elevated above the Cabinet, is the generalissimo of the many thousands of gamekeepers wearing the livery of Francis Joseph's family, the house of Hapsburg. The Emperor's favorite sport is hunting the chamois in the Austrian Alps, upon whose snowy crests he arrives on hunting days an hour before daybreak. At other times during his annual stay at his summer villa in these mountains he is off at daylight every morning upon the crags where he and his huntsmen climb all day, covering often ten or twelve miles before sundown.

His Longevity Fads.

He attributes his long life and remarkable preservation to these habits of early rising and living in the open air; also to frugal eating. Even while in his palace, at Venna, through the court season and all, he is up at 5 and has finished by 6 his breakfast of coffee and unbuttered bread. Then he sets out for a two-hour constitutional through the royal park of Schoenbrun, after which he drives into Vienna, to the Hofburg, where business of state is attended to with hardly a stop for luncheon, which he eats from a tray set upon his desk, among the documents of state. Having finished this midday meal—generally soup, boiled meat and beer—the old gentleman continues to work until evening, allowing himself an hour's romp with his grandchildren before dinner, which, except on occasions of state, he eats alone, in his own apartments, that he may be released as quickly as possible from this boresome ordeal of feeding the inner man. His tobacco has been limited lately by his doctors, who have placed their ban on the very black cigars of Virginia tobacco, which he used to smoke incessantly and persuaded him to substitute mild Havanas in greater moderation. These he smokes in a meerschaum holder with a long stem that keeps the smoke from irritating his eyes.

Knocks Out the Worry Theory.

The theory that worry shortens life is not borne out in Francis Joseph's case. Since the abdication of his weakling uncle, Ferdinand, called him unexpectedly to the throne when a mere boy of 18, the present Emperor has had one heartbreak after another. Indeed, the fates seem to have conspired to make him the most unhappy and most unlucky monarch of all Christendom. In the first place his throne was trembling with bitter revolution when he mounted it, and no sooner had he donned his iron crown than he had to replace it with the helmet of the soldier and wade in the gore of one battlefield after another. His defeat by the Prussians at Sadowa was a blow from which he never recovered, but the blackest griefs which have descended upon him have been a long succession of domestic tragedies.

An unhappy marriage was his first great trouble. Early in his twenties it had been arranged for him to marry the eldest daughter of Duke Maximilian of Bavaria, but upon visiting her he fell desperately in love, at first sight, with her little sister Elizabeth, whom he saw playing in the park. Breaking off the engagement with her sister, he married the little princess, who was received in Vienna with a coldness which during the remainder of her life caused her to dislike the Austrians. Her husband's family, of the house of Hapsburg, which prides itself on having the bluest of royal blood flowing in the world, snubbed her because her father was a mere duke and a poor one at that. So the Empress became exclusive, and to fight down her unhappiness she took to violent outdoor sports and tobacco. Even when she was in middle age she

The Meyerling Mystery.

But the greatest tragedy of Francis Joseph's life was that drama of real life often referred to as the "Meyerling mystery." The Emperor and Empress had but one son, the Crown Prince Rudolf. He was a puny lad, but grew to be a man of magnificent physique, and in 1881 married Princess Stephanie, daughter of King Leopold of Belgium. In 1883 their only child, a daughter, was born to the young couple. They were wretchedly unhappy, and Rudolf on becoming enamored of the beautiful young Baroness Marie Vetsera, agreed to a divorce and the renunciation of his rights to the throne, if allowed to marry the Baroness. This course, however, the Emperor sternly forbade, and closely following the stormy interview between father and son, both the Crown Prince and his beloved Baroness were found dead in the Castle of Meyerling, near Vienna. At first the court gave out the statement that apoplexy had caused the Prince's death, but when the public refused to credit this, another official statement gave suicide as the cause of death.

The mystery has since plagued the whole world, and there have been printed no less than a dozen "solutions" to it. According to one theory the Baroness committed suicide upon hearing of the Emperor's refusal of Rudolf's divorce, and that the latter, on finding her dead, threw himself upon the floor at the foot of her couch and blew out his brains. Another story is that the Baroness' wound was in the back, where she could not inflict it herself, and that the Crown Prince after both had agreed to die had shot her here, in order that her beauty might not be marred. Still another account was that Rudolf was shot by a forester whom he had treated cruelly and that Marie killed herself from grief. Not long ago a New York paper announced that the Crown Prince had never been shot at all and claimed to have located him in hiding within the United States. Such is the riddle of the Meyerling tragedy which robbed Francis Joseph of his only son and the only one of his children who could, under the Salic law, inherit his throne.

Another Unsolved Riddle.

The following autumn this passion of the royal Hapsburgs for women below their rank culminated in another mystery which since has deepened the gloom that hangs over Francis Joseph. The latter's nephew, Archduke John Salvator, on falling in love with an actress, Ludmilla Stubel, and on discovering that the Emperor would consider such a marriage as only "morganatic," threw away all of his ranks and titles, married his beloved Ludmilla, bought a ship in England and with her sailed for South America. Sailing under the name of "John Orth," he was last seen at Montevideo in July, 1890, since when there have been conflicting rumors of the couple's whereabouts. Some months ago a Chicago paper "located" him in that city, disguised as a machinist. The aged Emperor still awaits his return, and only recently extended for ten years the period during which his estates will be held for him against confiscation.

Nor was this half of the family troubles which added to the worries of "Father Franz." Louis Victor, his only surviving brother, on becoming involved in a disgraceful scandal several years ago, was hauled into the court like a common criminal. Then the Emperor stripped Louis of all his honors, reduced his income, drew the blinds of his palace in Vienna, and banished him for life to an estate in the country, where he lives as a semi-prisoner. Similar discipline was meted out by Francis Joseph to his nephew, the Archduke Leopold, who upon marrying a vaudeville actress was made to renounce all of his claims and titles, after which he was exiled to Switzerland, where he lives under the name of Leopold Wolfling.

Other Misalliances.

And the Emperor's niece, Archduchess Louise, after marrying the Crown Prince of Saxony, ran away with the French tutor of her children, and since has been divorced by her husband, who now sits on the Saxon throne without her. Still another rent in the Emperor's heart has been caused by the misalliance of his favorite grandchild, the little Archduchess Elizabeth, daughter of the dead Crown Prince. After separating her from her mother, Princess Stephanie—who has since married Count Elemer Lonyay—the Emperor was guarding her against unworthy admirers, when, at the age of 17, she lost her heart to a handsome and dashing cavalry officer, Prince Otto Windisch Graetz. Perhaps the old Emperor felt that his opposition to love matches had already caused too many tragedies in the house of Hapsburg. At any rate, the little princess wheedled him into letting her marry the petty prince, and the old gentleman dowered her handsomely. After the wedding they went off to live in Prague, but soon they quarreled violently, and she returned to the roof of her doting grandfather, where she remains, the solace of his old age. When she married she renounced her rights to the crown of Hungary, where the Salic law does not obtain.

His Consort Murdered.

But what crowned the tragedy of Francis Joseph's life was the murder of his consort, the Empress Elizabeth, at Geneva, in the fall of 1898, by an anarchist who, under the Swiss law, could not be executed, and who has lately been described by a visitor to his prison as enjoying a very comfortable incarceration, eased by the gift of books and cigarettes.

Yet despite the fact that his long path has been strewn with blood and paved with broken hearts, this imperial patriarch approaches his eightieth milestone hale and erect. Nor does the vista before him offer any more comfort to his sore heart than does that upon which his straight old back is turned. The future of his crown troubles him sorely, as well it may. After his son Rudolph's violent death, the right of succession fell to the Emperor's brother, Charles Louis. But, sharing the proverbial "Hapsburg luck," so long a synonym for tragedy, the latter died, leaving the succession to his son, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand.

Present Heir's Morganatic Wife.

And this nephew of Francis Joseph's, who thus became the Crown Prince and heir to his throne, is also somewhat mixed in his marital relations. Four years after becoming heir apparent and while in full realization of the consequences of his act, he married Countess Sophie Chotek, a Bohemian girl of excellent family, but not of royal rank. And since under Austrian law a marriage of a royal person outside his own caste is morganatic, this good woman has had to make a solemn and formal renunciation of her rights as queen empress and those of her children to the succession. Thus when Francis Ferdinand becomes Emperor she cannot sit upon the throne beside him nor can she or her children have any rank at court other than due them by virtue of her inferior rank as "Duchess of Hohenberg," a title conferred upon her by the Emperor. Moreover, her husband, the Crown Prince, because of his indifference, coldness and neglect to master Magyar and the other dialects of his future subjects, is very unpopular throughout the kingdom. He has chosen to be a recluse rather than to travel and study the conditions of his people and their empire, which, it is predicted, will break into the two independent states of Austria and Hungary soon after the death of Francis Joseph, who can fluently converse with his people in all of their various tongues and who is regarded as more beloved by his own subjects than any other monarch of the world.

Indeed, the last drop of gall that has been put in the cup of the octogenarian Emperor has been added by his present heir, whom he holds in such contempt that he will not mention his name. After the Crown Prince's death, the succession falls to Carl Francis, a rather promising young prince of 22, the son of the Emperor's nephew, the Archduke Otto, who, to win a wager, is said to have once jumped his horse over a coffin borne in a street funeral cortege.

Medicinal Value of Motoring.

The effects of motoring upon the blood and nerves have been studied in elaborate experiments by several great European physicians, and the results are rather unexpected.

Motoring is not only a splendid exercise for the skin and lungs, it not only gives an intense air bath, but it is a stimulant to metabolism. The cells of the body rejoice in the swift speed; they are excited by the dash, they work harder and they multiply more rapidly and vigorously.

This is especially noticeable among the red corpuscles of the blood. Dr. Legendre cites a few cases in which these have been counted before and after an automobile journey of some duration. In one case a patient had 3,500,000 red corpuscles per cubic centimeter of blood before he started on a two weeks' trip. At the end of that time his blood contained 5,000,000 red corpuscles to the cubic centimeter. In other words, an anemic man had been made normal.

Dr. Monneyrat cites instances of men whose blood has been enriched to above the normal by automobile journeys, the number of red corpuscles having sometimes increased to as high as 6,000,000 per cubic centimeter.

What is true of the number of corpuscles is also true of their strength. The most important constituent of the red corpuscles is hemoglobin. A patient of Dr. Monneyrat's who had only 60 per cent. of the normal quantity of hemoglobin of his blood was sent on a month's journey in a motor car; after it his blood contained 85 per cent. of the normal quantity of hemoglobin. In the case of another more serious case of anaemia, in which there was only 45 per cent. of the normal amount of hemoglobin, three months of motoring raised the quantity to 75 per cent.

A debate among French physicians proved that no other treatment produced anything like such rapid results.

Dr. Laverel, a French specialist in diseases of the nerves, cures his neurasthenic patients by taking them out in his car or by ordering them to travel in their own. The first benefit that a neurasthenic patient derives from motoring is ability to sleep. Motoring makes the sleep of the normal man more profound, longer and more regular.

These benefits to the blood and the nerves are produced by the rush of pure air against the skin and into the lungs, which it stimulates to deeper breathing.

But, unfortunately, these benefits are not obtainable by the habitual motorist. As with every other stimulant, the body becomes accustomed to the rapid rush through the air, and the inveterate automobilist may even experience a reaction and find the quality of his blood impoverished. It is the unaccustomed stimulant that is beneficial. So motoring is a cure for anemia and neurasthenia only in those who do not use cars all the time.—[Motor Press.

Fairly Safe.

As the spangled horses pranced up to where the mixed throng was surging into the evening opera, the lady in the very décolleté gown popped her jeweled head out of the coach window.

"Officer," asked she, appealing to the policeman on the curb, "do you think it safe for me to alight here?"

"Jump out," returned the policeman, after scanning her attire; "ye're pretty scant about th' chest, but Oi guess ye're within th' law!"—[The Widow.

CORNCOB GAS.

A DISCOVERY THAT MAY REVOLUTIONIZE LIFE IN THE CORN BELT.

[The Hesperian:] A new use has been found for the humble corncob and the pile of straw in field or barnyard. Experiment has revealed a method of transforming the corncob into a coke that is hotter by far than that obtained from Pennsylvania coal. A Cleveland chemist, at Beatrice, Neb., has proved the commercial value of an invention of J. Russel Coutts. As a result, the problem of getting cheap gas in a region hundreds of miles from coal mines has been practically solved.

It was Mr. Coutts's innate love of a bonfire that indirectly led him to make what gas men say is certain to revolutionize the industry in those sections remote from the gas coal supply, and adjacent to the wheat and corn belt. Something over a year ago he was visiting a friend in Canada. The friend owned a big ranch. He had just completed threshing, and the great stack of straw that remained had no market that justified the expense of loading and hauling. So he followed the usual custom of burning it. Mr. Coutts was given the job of lighting the straw stack. He was glad of the opportunity. He noticed that immediately above the burning material hovered a familiar blue flame. His nostrils were assailed by the sickly sweet fumes of carbon monoxide, a constituent of water gas. Then the great idea came. Why was it not possible to produce for commercial use gas from straw? The more he thought about it and the more he experimented, the more evident it became that he had found something valuable. Being such a simple proposition, however, he feared that possibly it was an old idea, abandoned before his day.

Business called him to England within a short time and there he put in several months delving in the scientific libraries of Oxford and Cambridge. Thorp, the great English chemist, to whom he made known his mission, assured him that it was something new. Returning to America, he consulted with Dr. Chandler of Columbia, one of the greatest agricultural chemists. Chandler declared at once that he had hit upon something valuable, and in his enthusiasm he aided in making elaborate laboratory tests. They proved to be successful. Mr. Coutts laid before capitalists of Cleveland his discoveries. They tested it in a suburban gas plant with wonderful success. Then they gave him $100,000 and told him to make an experiment upon a large scale, and under such conditions as would prove or disprove its commercial value.

Manifestly, as straw, cobs and cornstalks were to be employed as fuel, it was advisable to get into the center of the grain belt. This led to the selection of Nebraska as the scene of experiment. Gramineous gas is the scientific name for the product. In common parlance, it is corn gas. The process of manufacture is simple. Practically the same apparatus as is used for ordinary gas making is employed. Instead of shoveling coal into the retorts, bales of straw or cobs are dumped in. At the beginning the retort was heated with coal, but after the cobs were found to produce a better coke, the use of coal has been discontinued. When the retorts get well heated the gas is thrown off, collected, purified and placed in reservoirs or holders. Thirty per cent. of the original weight of the straw, cobs, or stalks remains after the gas is extracted, and this is used to heat the benches or feed the boilers. This is about enough raw material to make the process self-containing, and eliminates any necessity for coal.

In heating power the corn gas runs as high as 660 British thermal units without enrichment, while ordinary gas is a hundred units less The new gas can be produced, if the inventors are to be believed, at a cost that will make it possible to control the industry within reasonable distance of the cob and straw supply. In truth, they could sell gas for 50 cents a thousand and make all kinds of money. The cost is almost as low as natural gas where the latter has to be piped any considerable distance.

Wheat in the West is now very generally thrashed out in the open. The thrasher goes out to the field, along with the reaper, and separates the grain from the chaff, right on the spot. The straw is tossed off to one side in big piles by a column of air, operated through a stacker pipe. Under the new process the gas company's baler will come along, compress the straw into small bales and make it ready for the farmer to haul to town and get his money. Twenty tons of it can be put in the ordinary car, so effective is the baling process. Owners of the Coutts patents have secured franchises for gas plants in Western Canada and the Dakotas in a dozen or more cities. They propose to erect others just as fast as they can. They not only assert that they will inaugurate an era of cheap illuminating gas for the West, but that they can supply it for power and fuel purposes so cheaply as to make competition of gasoline and soft coal impotent or impossible.

A Garden.

Come not with careless feet
To tread my garden's unfrequented ways.
No high road this, no busy clanging street,
No place of petty shows and fond displays
Here there are blossoms sweet
That shrink and pine from inconsiderate gaze;
And here the birds repeat
Only to loving ears their truest lays.

Hither I can retreat
And drink of peace where peace unravished stays.
Herein are streams of sorrow no man knows—
Herein a well of joy inviolate flows:
Come not with careless feet
To soil my garden's sanctuary ways.

STORY OF AN ESCAPE THAT WAS NOT AN ESCAPE.

By a Special Contributor.

"AND so it is my turn to tell of some escape, is it?" said Mrs. Fernauld. "But shall I tell it?" she added, turning, laughing, to her husband.

"Why, surely," he replied, smiling back; "only it was not an escape, after all?"

"Well," began Mrs. Fernauld, "it happened thus: About twenty-five years ago, Cousin Ruth and I were studying art. Instead of going to Europe, we decided to go to the City of Mexico. Our specialty was painting ancient architecture, and of course, in that city, there was a great wealth of old churches, monasteries and convents—just what we wanted. We were delighted and fascinated with our work."

"But whenever we made trips to these ruins, or when we roamed about the streets, we took with us a 'mozo' to carry our bundles, and a chaperon, for in those days a girl could not walk, unattended, about the streets.

"However, several times I ventured alone, wrapping my head and shoulders about with my pretty 'rebozo' (long scarf,) and thus costumed I attracted little attention, passing as a Mexican servant girl. One day, when out alone, I came to a large church, with the monastery in its rear. The building was being torn down, to be changed into some public house or school, for there were many, all over the city, thus transformed. There were a number of workmen along the street, but I did not notice any inside, so I slipped through a tumble-down place in the wall, and passed on through what had once been rooms. In one of the rooms, where the light was dim, my foot suddenly struck an object, which, as I turned it over, showed a faint glimmer. Stooping, I picked up a small metal box, a few inches square. Holding it against my bosom, under my rebozo, I hastily gained the street and our rooms.

"'Look at my discovery!' I exclaimed, laying the rusty little box upon the table.

"'Of all the queer things that you are always finding!' exclaimed Ruth, 'this is the very queerest! It must have been the tobacco box of one of these old monks who lived a hundred years ago in that monastery.'

"'Well, it rattles!' I replied, and I am going to find out what is inside.'

"But to open it was the question, for we did not wish to make known our find. Finally, I secured from our landlady a file, and, after working several hours, filed off the clasp. When the little cover flew back, we both danced and screamed with delight. There rolled out several pieces of jewelry, a brooch and earrings to match, set with pearls, beauties, creamy white, and several dark green, which we knew to be very rare.

"'Oh, oh! our fortune is made—we do not need to paint pictures for a living!' I cried.

"'But,' said Ruth, 'these are not ours; they must have belonged to some one.'

"'Yes, a hundred years ago,' I laughed. 'They were buried there for safe keeping, at the time of one of those revolutions. But,' I added slowly, 'I suppose we had better make inquiries as to the probable owners. At any rate we must hide them, and not show them here unless the rightful owners claim them. Which I do not think will happen, and which I hope will not happen.'

"My success emboldened me to venture again into that old building, a few days later. It was at noon, when the workmen would be at their rest or at their dinner. This time I entered by another break in the wall. After passing through several large rooms, I noticed a rude stairway leading down. I was too eager to fear, so hastened on into a small, dark and musty-smelling underground room. After standing a few moments to accustom my eyes to the dim light, I noticed the floor or rather the damp ground, strewn with pieces of Mexican pottery. Pushing my foot into a pile of sticks and broken pottery, I heard a jingling. What I touched was a jar, cracked, which fell to pieces as I tried to lift it. There fell from it a lot of coins, and all sorts of jewelry, bracelets, rings and a chain of some kind. All at once I was afraid, so hastily scooping everything into my dress skirt, for they were heavy, I fled up the stairs again, and had almost reached the gap in the wall when I caught sight of two workmen approaching.

"I thought they did not see me, and crouched down behind a pile of stones and crumbled adobes. But they had seen me, and came right toward me. I dared not move, lest the rattle in my dress skirt betray me. I crouched there while they gesticulated and talked. I understood enough Spanish to know that they were asking my name and what I was doing there. I thought that one of them was trying to persuade the other to let me alone. But one, who had an evil look in his eye, shook his head, muttered to himself, stepped up to me, and reached out his hand to seize me. Then I sprang to my feet, screaming, and before he could touch me I was in the street, all this time carrying my burden in my dress skirt. Passers along the street paused to look, a crowd began to gather. The workmen signaled a couple of policemen from the corner. But I was too quick for them. I called an approaching cab, and sprang in before the policemen came up. But not before I felt some one grasp my wrist, and, turning, saw a man with very dark eyes, and very black mustache, at my side. However, he did not detain me.

"Andale! Hurry!" I cried to the driver, and leaning over, he lashed his horses to a gallop over the cobble-paved street. But I had noticed that the man with black eyes had made a signal to the driver, to which he nodded and gave a wink. It flashed across my mind that they had not given me up, and so, when the driver called to me: 'Adonde?' (where,) I dared not give my correct address. I thought of a place where Ruth and I had often sketched, and where the people had always welcomed us, so I called back: '505 Calle del Rincon.'

"Meantime, I hastily transferred my burden from my dress skirt to the end of my rebozo. The silver pesos were heavy, and I had difficulty in tying all into the scarf so as not to make too clumsy a bundle. While doing this, I noticed a black heavy line across my wrist, where it had been touched. It was stinging a little, and I could not rub it off.

"We were soon at 505 Calle del Rincon. I sprang out, threw a 50-cent piece at the driver, hurried into the open court, smiling and saluting, telling them I was in a big hurry, and passed on through a narrow alley into another street which was familiar to me, and soon was at my own door and in my own room. Then I fell almost in a faint and gasped out my story to Ruth.

"'Well,' she replied, 'it is only what you can expect, prowling around, alone, the streets of Mexico!'

"'But see what I have found this time!' I exclaimed, untying the end of my rebozo.

"Ruth could only stand and gaze in astonishment. I, too, was surprised, for in the dark basement I had not known what there was. Old gold and silver coins, an antique watch and chain, bracelets, rings, breastpins and earrings.

"We were afraid to keep such wealth, but locked them in our trunks and carried the keys.

"After such excitement, I suffered a relapse, and was obliged to keep within my room a couple of weeks. That stain, too, on my wrist, gave me a feeling of uneasiness. I could not get it off, and I knew I was marked. An American friend calling, told us how the papers had been full of a story of a strange Mexican girl who had been seen emerging from the basement of the old San Felipe Church carrying something. The basement had been searched, but nothing found. The girl, too, had been followed to 505 Calle del Rincon, which number she had given, but no trace was there, either.

"Ruth and I feigned only a slight interest, though we were both quivering with excitement, for we had agreed to keep this secret entirely to ourselves. We were very careful after this to take a chaperon or mozo, and I always went veiled and wore long-sleeved gloves, or rather long gauntlets, for we did not then have long-sleeved gloves.

"Several weeks later, Ruth and I were guests at a dinner in the home of an American whose acquaintance we had made while in the city. Among others I was introduced to a gentleman who spoke perfect English but with a slight French accent. He had piercing black eyes, and all through the evening I felt an uneasiness, for move wherever I would I felt those eyes were upon me. He sat across me at the table, and I saw him studying my hands. Of course I wore no gloves, and the long lace on my sleeve, which I wore to cover the stain, often fell back, exposing it to view. I knew in a flash that he was the man who had marked me, and he was a detective. As soon as possible, after dinner, I reached my Cousin Ruth, whispered to her, and on the plea of sudden illness we both bade our hostess good-night. We took the street car, but when we alighted at our corner I was sure the detective got off the other end of the car and followed us past our door.

"'I think we had better leave this city tomorrow,' said Ruth.

"'I do, too—but I am so anxious to finish that sketch of the tower of San Pablo. Let us move to another part of the city and in a few days take our departure for good.'

"So the next morning Ruth started out without me. She found other rooms. I meantime, at home, packed our trunks. She then came in a cab for me, which I entered closely wrapped and veiled. Our landlady was to send our trunks before night.

"A few days later we were sketching the towers of San Pablo Church, entirely absorbed in our work, when suddenly I heard by my side my own English tongue with a musical French accent.

"'I beg pardon, Miss Norton. May I presume upon our slight acquaintance? I, too, am much interested in sketching. May I remain?'

"Looking up, I saw by my side my detective. His quiet, cordial manner reassured me. We chatted on several minutes, moving together to where a better view was gained. After a little while I said it was time to go, and called Ruth, who was sitting a little distance off.

"Then he touched my wrist.

"'Miss Norton,' he said very quietly, 'you know that is my mark! You are my prisoner! Yonder stand two policemen. You cannot escape me this time; so do not try it!'

"I was surprised that I was not afraid. As quietly I replied:

"'Mr. Detective—there is some mistake. I would like to tell you all about it. Will you please dismiss your policemen and come with us to our rooms, the number of which I will give to you; and there I will explain everything to you.'

"'But will it be the correct number, Miss Norton?' he asked, searching my face with those piercing eyes, though there was a smile upon his lips.

"'To prove our truthfulness,' I replied, 'come with us!'

"Reaching our rooms, we told him the story and showed him the valuables. He listened very intently.

"'You say you are ready to return these to their owners. But I suppose they were buried there generations ago, and probably no one will ever claim them. Without a doubt they are yours. But,' he added, 'I am a servant of the law, and the law requires me to deliver to her those whom she may accuse.'

"'But of what am I accused?' I yourself say I am not guilty.'

Well, I was most bled to say a word, and she went right on e of them soda-pop bottles that begins to over d can't stop itself. 'Man has too long depended and false beliefs for his health and happi we wasn't a-talkin' about men,' I said—'I am g to all human bein's,' says she, 'and we are sterin' on a cry in which we will show to the he radiant power of the unseen dweller within to bring peace and joy and riches to the world.' n't take no ellycushun while you was in Los ?' I said. 'No,' she 'lowed, 'I'm only a-unfoldin' of power that lies hidden within me.' 'Had turned on you, mebbe,' I said. 'Yes,' says she, on my soul—a hallumination.'

she brought some curious-lookin' books home and she read them 'bout the same time ev notwithstandin' she talked so much about and what the air did for you, she fixed up little bedroom on the third floor so there speck of light nor air get in and she would and set by the hour, the same time every day she filled all the empty two-quart jars with sunflowers, poppies, marigolds and till the house looked like a yaller-fever then she baked a cake and a lemon pie and quarts of potato salad, and 'lowed as how a-goin' to have company. She needn't 'a' cause I knowed it already, but I thought, of was Jim, he hadn't been over since she got long about 2 o'clock I looked down the road, I see a chunky-lookin' man with bushy hair a whirl, and I said to Ella: 'There's one of agents a-comin' up the road with soap or , and you'd better shet the front door.

Ella looked out the winder, she got all excited and she just panted as she said: 'Ma, Prof. Ospergood, or Eurip, and he's a-comin' to they set and talked in the parlor all after n, I s'posed Ella talked, knowing how she I didn't heed her, and then we asked the to stay for supper, and my, it was a caution how that man et, and I see as how he wa'n't backward about layin' in the beans, potato cake and lemon pie, all the time he was on how onhealthy it was to eat things that at all, and 'lowed as how everything ought raw. 'What!' I asked, 'potatoes, and beets beans?' 'Madam,' says he, 'no sane person eat such earthbound foods as these.' 'Well, to myself, mebbe he don't know beans anyway, when he meets 'em in the road, and so I nothin' to him. Ella and Jim never was no want the family to go away and leave 'em, so in the parlor that night, and the Professor of his whole series of free lectures. I can't what it was all about, but he had some tion that everything in the world is a-movin' in' away from you—but just a-whirlin' round that it looks like it was a-standin' still. He high-falutin' name he called it by, but I what it was, but anyway he said them and quiverin's inside of things made sounds that he could hear, yes, he said he heard and see the sounds; and he said not only stoves and things to eat had them curious , but people, too, and I thought that might be what was a-ailin' Ella. And right here I want to tell you that he made that poor girl believe that her color was yaller and Jim's was brown, and that it wouldn't do at all for them to get married. People, he said, ought always to wear the color that their quiverin's fade, and seein' he had on a shiny, black suit, I said: 'Are your quiverin's black?' 'Oh, the great mother forbid,' he said—I did not know what he meant unless it was his grandmother wouldn't let him wear somethin' he wanted to. 'My color is yaller,' says he; 'it is crystallized in the topaz of this ring I wear, and I carry it as a ensign in this yaller tie. Yaller,' says he, 'denotes great interlectuallity. It is the color of your daughter.' But she looked pretty red to me just then.

"He let on like he could see things clear over crost the mountains, too, and he looked out the winder and said, just as calm as you please: 'It's a-rainin' over in the Palo Verde Valley.' Jake he'd been a kind o' holdin' his hand over his face for a while, but jest then he snorted right out, and then he cleared his throat and made out like he was a coughin', and Mollie, she 'lowed that mebbe the dampness from the rain was a givin' him cold.

"Then the Professor begun talking about how girls and young men ought to know all about each other before they git married, and I could see how his mind was a-runnin' along that line, and jest thinkin' to put him at rest about Ella, seein' he took such an interest in her, I said: 'Jim and Ella's known each other since they was 4 years old.' This seemed to make some kind of a situation that needed a explanation, and I said: 'Jim's Ella's young man, you know.' And right here before my eyes I see that girl of mine turn red and purple and most every color but yaller. But the Professor he jest said, kind of calm and solemn-like: 'Could I see the young man's picture?' 'Sure,' says I, for you know Jim's as fine a lookin' chap as you want to see, and I went and fetched the album. He looked at it for a long time and then he shet his eyes and said slow and sorrowful: 'The young man's color is brown; it is a very inharmonious color when mixed with yaller.'

"Well, when the Professor had lectured on till about 'leven-thirty, of course, he couldn't go home then, and we asked him to stay all night, and Jake give him his bed and slept on the screen porch. But the Professor didn't say nothin' 'bout hopin' he wasn't puttin' us to no trouble nor nothin', and the next day nobody didn't say a word to him about stayin' for dinner, but he stayed, and for supper, too, and all night agin, and what d'ye believe?—that old spongin' galute stayed for three whole weeks.

"Well, he talked so much about brotherly kindness and a helpin' humanity that I wondered why he didn't light in and give Bob and Jake a lift with the alfalfy, but seein' as how he was a visitor, I couldn't say anything. But when I heard that old Ben Erps had broke his leg, I fixed up some liniment and bandages and a couple o' jars of fruit and some salt 'east bread in a basket and asked him if he would tote them over to him. Course the Erpses live two mile up the road, and it was hot, but the boys was a-usin' the horses, and I thought of course he'd jump at the chance to show his brotherhood principles, but what d'ye s'pose that triflin' man said to me? 'Madam, I am in the midst of thoughts this morning too great to be disturbed (he was a-writin' a piece for a magazine.) 'And moreover,' says he, 'this is doubtless some providence sent on the man to teach him some great lesson, and he will find that in himself lies the power to knit the broken bones.' 'But he's a-sufferin',' says I. 'Pain, Madam,' says he, 'is the agent our great mother sends for the unfoldin' of our now twisted character.'

"Well, I was good and mad, but I held my tongue, and I was glad I did, for a few days after that he was a-comin' through the yard with his hands behind him and his eyes glued to the clouds, a-mutterin' somethin' to hisself, and Jake's old saw horse was right in his path and he run right into it and cracked both his shins and fell over groanin' and hollerin' till I come up and said: 'P'raps this is some providence sent to teach you some great lesson, leastways it ought to learn you to watch where yer goin', and pain, you know, is your grandmother's remedy for takin' the kinks outen you.' And then he shet up.

"All durin' them days he talked about unfoldin' and unfoldin', but he never told a one of us how to get hold of the end of that bolt of good that he made out was inside of us. Then he was always a-preachin', too, about lovin' everybody and how it drawed your insides into knots if you didn't, but it didn't seem to me he had any perticular affection for that lecturer who was a-givin' the summer course where he had been a-lecturin', nor any very lovin' feelin', neither, for that editor in Los Angeles what kept sendin' back the pieces he writ to have published. But there was one thing, Caroline, that he shorely did live up to his professions in, and that was what he said about bein' joyful and havin' good spirits—he was jest about the care-freest man I ever see, till one day somebody called him up on the long-distance 'phone and, though I couldn't hear what they was a-sayin', of course, I see he was some worried, and didn't have as much appetite as common that day, and I heard him say over the phone: 'Oh, I will be in town tomorrow and attend to it, sure, never you worry about that,' and then he said: 'No, it's no use comin' out here, I won't be here.'

"But he didn't go to town at all the next day, and he was jest as nervous as a settin' hen every time the 'phone rung after that. From all he'd said I knowed he was no church man, but seein' as how he talked so much about there bein' good in all kinds of religions, I asked him if he wouldn't subscribe a dollar to the new church we was a-buildin'. But he says, powerful emphatic-like: 'No, Madam, my conscience will not allow me. There are too many churches already. I would tear them down and build a temple in which mankind could worship in unity. It is the inclusive religion, not the exclusive, that is to save the world.' 'Well,' says I, 'this church will jest suit your ticket exactly. There are not many of any one denomination out here, and a few of all sorts, and we are a-buildin' a union chapel, and we're all goin' to pull for the shore together.' 'Madam,' says he, 'would you take in Mormon and Mohammedan, Shinto and Brahmin? Would you let the Zarathustrian and Gueber sit down with you?' 'Well,' says I, 'I never heard tell of any of them kind but the first two, and I don't think there's any of them around in these parts, but if they are I wouldn't lift my voice agin them comin' in and settin' down peaceable like and listenin' to the preacher.' 'Yes', says he, 'that's the trouble with you narrow religionists, you are willin' to let everybody listen to your preachin', but you're not willin' to give anybody else a chance to speak.' 'Well, for that matter,' says I, 'I don't think we have a corner on that failin',' rememberin' how he shet your uncle up the night before.

"One night Jim was over and listened to the talk, and when him and Ella was out in the dinin'-room I heard her ask him what he thought about it, but Jim's such a monkey he won't talk serious, he jest repeated somethin' out of a book him and Ella had read about 'consistency bein' a jewel,' and when she asked him if he didn't think the Professor was a wonderful talker, he said yes, if he had any 'terminal facilities' he might be. I didn't know what that meant, but I guess Ella did, for she got powerful mad and wouldn't hardly speak to Jim after that.

"Well, Ella and the Professor wrote backwards and forwards all summer and fall, and I found from things she let slip that he wasn't in such a chipper mood as he'd been. She 'lowed as how he, bein' a ideelist, whatever that is, that his quiverin's was of too fine a kind for him to mix up in business affairs, all of which come to mean, I learned later, that he couldn't pay his room rent and owed a lot besides. Jim, he didn't come over any more, and I was worried, but one day after Ella had been talkin' to her pa about Prof. Ospergood's high standards he says to me: "Never you mind, Ma, jest give that scamp rope enough and he'll hang hisself on one of them high standards, high as Haman.' Well, he did. Nothin' would do Ella long about holiday time but he must come out here on a visit—a visit, mind you, when he'd stayed three weeks jest on a invitation to spend the night! Well, he come, and I see the telephone still bothered him; he turned pale every time it rung, and one day a man come, and he kept him out in the road, and we couldn't hear nothin' but jest their loud voices, but when the woman come—oh! yes, ther was a woman—when she come, you bet she didn't stay out in the road. No, sir-ree. She had a through ticket, and she didn't stop till she had told every one of us how the Professor had borrowed money from her and from a lot of other women, makin' love to all of 'em at the same time. Ella wasn't going to believe it, but, my goodness! she had the letters right there, and he couldn't deny it.

"Well, the boys said it was a good thing he had enough sense to get away from the house before they got back, but Ella she took it pretty calm. In a few days, though, she said she'd like to go over to Pasadena and visit her cousin Delia, and knowed a change was what she needed, so I let her go. She stayed about seven weeks, and when she come home how d'ye reckon she got here? Jim come a-drivin' her in his new top buggy! After she'd been home a few days I said: "Ella, 'pears to me if the Lord made yaller and brown in the same sunflowers that are a-noddin' and a-smilin' out there so chipper in the field, you and Jim might get along all right even if you ain't both the same color.' 'Yes,' says she, 'I reckon we can,' and she's a-wearin' his ring, and it ain't no topaz, neither, but a ruby, and I reckon there'll be a weddin', Caroline, before you go back this time.

But what d'ye reckin Jim says? He says we must not be too hard on Ella, 'cause there is folks jest like what the Professor pretended to be, and that we are all fooled sometimes on counterfeit money. And, anyway, he says, Ella has learnt a lot, and if he's satisfied I ain't got no complaint."

Life in the Holy Land of Today.

By EVANGELIEL BEN-OLIEL

THE Holy Land has at last been thrown open to civilization and modern progress. After centuries, even millenniums, of conservatism in customs and speech, the barrier to enlightenment has been broken down by the Young Turks. They have invited men of enterprise to enter Palestine—so long held in bondage by the late Sultan—and to form it into a modern and progressive country, filled with all that the twentieth century has to give. But with the entry of civilization and modern culture the many peculiar customs which have been observed since the days of the patriarchs, and the poetical speech of the natives which reecho words of the prophets, will soon be banished by the mighty hand of commercialism, and the features of Palestine which to Bible students and visitors are at present the most interesting will soon be things of the past.

For the figurative and symbolical language spoken in Christ's day is still reëchoed in the daily conversation of the natives. Even in the smallest actions of their life the people rehearse Biblical scenes of the days of the patriarchs and speak to each other in the poetical phraseology of the Psalmist and the prophets.

THE STRANGE MONUMENTS of BRITTANY.

BY RICHARD N. HART.

BRITTANY is one of the stamping grounds of the European tourist, and Auray, on the south coast, is in the heart of things. Auray itself is well worth the visit. It is a two days' journey from Paris, and on the way you can stop over at Tours and study up on Balzac, or else spend a few hours on the wharves at Nantes.

Auray folks are far enough from Paris to have fash- of their own, and they stick to them, century in [illegible] century out. The women wear broad skirts of [illegible] colors, sashes and white caps; while the men [illegible] capes of many colors and have broad felt hats [illegible] flaps. Both sexes trundle around in heavy wooden [illegible]. They are blue-eyed, simple-natured and slow in [illegible]; and like the rest of France, they dote on the American tourist, because he is such a fool with his money. One American equals three English, or five Germans, to a doting Breton.

The coast is about ten miles beyond where the little city of several thousand cuddles up to the winding river. The town is very old and the country is full of history. In the first century A. D. Caesar directed his famous siege of the Veneti from a hill near the village. In the middle ages the English under the Earl of Montfort routed the French under Charles de Blois; and that doughty old fighter, Bertrand de Guesclin, was knocked down and taken prisoner after he had broken his sword on the foreigners. Froissart also tells a good deal about the politics, the loves and the trials of Anne of Brittany, who lived near Auray. Several of Balzac's novels in his "Comedie Humaine," notably "Les Chouans," are laid in Brittany. In the time of the French revolution the Bretons were the last to accept the new order of things. They were loyal to the royalists, and it took many years of bitter war with the Republican troops to subdue them. That is the story of "La Vendee." At present Auray is known to the outside through its religious festival of the Pardon of Saint Anne, and also through the ancient stone monuments that peep out of the barren country round about.

James Fergusson, in his work on "Rude Stone Monuments," says: "In a zone about twenty miles in extent, stretching from Erdeven on the northwest to Tumiac in a southeasterly direction, there is to be found the most

WHY THE JOPLINS WOULDN'T PART WITH THEIR COW.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN Selden Joplin arrived from the Middle West to occupy his new five-acre home at Santa Ana, the local lights of the neighborhood were not a little surprised at seeing, in addition to a bulky assortment of household effects, a scrubby-looking cow, evidently of some worthless, nondescript breed, unloaded from a box car at the freight station.

They could hardly credit their own eyes, for if appearances counted for anything, the poor, unsophisticated mutt had shipped the animal all the way from his eastern farm! And the cost of such an unheard-of proceeding would amount to more than enough to buy a good cow of tested qualities here in California.

A few sociable remarks on the weather and some diplomatic inquiries regarding freight rates on live stock brought out the fact that their surmise was correct. Joplin had freighted that scrub all the way from the East. Doc Villinger nearly strangled by swallowing a large wad of fine-cut in his amazement, and Sam Woolpoint gasped once or twice before he could get his tongue limbered up to its normal spieling condition.

The animal was about the size and color of a cinnamon bear, and from a dairyman's view there wasn't a redeeming point about her. Her neck was short and bull-like, and her dewlap was thick and coarse like one of plebeian blood. One horn drooped back over her right ear while the other curved forward, the point looking directly into her left eye. The size and tint of the udder showed sadly indifferent milking qualities, and her unprepossessing appearance generally was grotesquely intensified by a broken tail that hung outward and sideways like the crank of a grindstone.

Summed up in one brief sentence, she was an ornery-looking beast.

Her owner smiled rather broadly at his new neighbors' glances of disapproval, and patted the dewy nose of his bovine pet with rough kindliness.

"Ain't much to look at, is she?" he remarked.

"I should say not," was Sam Woolpoint's blunt reply. "If Teddy ever met that critter in the wilds of Africa he'd surely take her for a native jo-jing. She'd fetch a good thousand plunks from the Smithsonian Institute."

"It would take that much, or more, to tempt me to part with her," said Neighbor Joplin.

"What?" gasped Woolpoint, nearly falling over backward. "You mean to say you wouldn't take less'n a thousand for that crank-tailed, buffalo-haired fodder kettle with milch-cow attachments?"

"That's what I said," responded Joplin quietly.

Woolpoint and Doc Villinger were deeply impressed with the conviction that their new neighbor was far from being in his right mind. It would be well to keep an eye on him until they saw just what turn his brainstorms were inclined to take. They recalled only too clearly their harrowing experience of a few years before with a neighbor who had gone mad from the combined effects of too much morphine and whisky. Not a pleasant recollection, that.

"She's a heap better animal than she looks," Joplin informed them. "Comes of extra fine strain, all the way down. Her looks are just an accident of nature; birthmark, or something of that sort, I reckon. She's dry now, but when she's in milking condition I'll put her up against any thoroughbred silk hide on North American soil. And she's a sort of family pet, too. Got more horse sense than any other female beef factory you ever saw. The folks all allowed they couldn't bear to leave her, so we brought her along with us. See that tail with the fancy kink in it? The reason for that kink is the reason why I came to California instead of staying back there in Illinois. . . . . . ."

As its owner had suggested, there hung to the cow with the broken caudal appendage another tale, which was not a crooked one.

And this is it.

One spring evening in the good old Sucker State the choice little herd of dairy stock belonging to Sel Joplin was increased by the number of one.

The new arrival was a heifer as had been fondly hoped for, but that seemed its sole redeeming quality.

"A freak of nature, nothing else," said Joplin in deep disgust. "Looks more like a young Arizona burro than a respectable calf."

He surveyed the runty, ill-shaped body, the big-jointed, wobbly legs, the large, wonder-wide eyes, and felt like giving it a swift kick for the keen disappointment it had caused him.

From the days of its extreme youth it showed symptoms of a voracious appetite and a remarkable capacity for liquid refreshment. It would nurse its mother vigorously and bunt her nearly insane, and then stand around and bawl unceasingly until next mealtime.

What to do with it was the source of much speculation to its owner. He disliked to kill it and throw it away as a worthless incumbrance, no one would be likely to accept it as a gift, and in spite of its astonishing appetite it remained a loose bundle of hide and bones, wholly unfit for veal. It was a downright nuisance, any way he looked at it.

And to further complicate matters the household toddlekins, little Baby Alice, 4 years of age, with childlike disregard of other people's views, promptly fell in love with the woolly nondescript and adopted it as her own special playmate.

Its big, inquisitive eyes and incessant bawling somehow struck her juvenile fancy in a way to cause her the most unbounded delight. And when it would occasionally flirt its tail in sudden playful inspiration and caper about her in a wobbly attempt at calfhood frisking, she would dance and scream with almost hysterical glee.

When it was about six weeks old, a happy solution of the problem unexpectedly turned up.

Pratt Olmstead, a neighbor, who had plenty of unoccupied pasturage, agreed to accept the freak heifer as a gift, and let her grub it out on grass for a couple of seasons, just to see what sort of thing she would turn out to be.

After the agreement was made, Joplin felt considerable compunction on Alice's account, for he knew she would miss her playmate for a little while and grieve sorely. But he hardened his conscience the best he could, and the calf was duly led away at the end of a rope.

As he had anticipated, little Toddlekins was heartbroken over the loss of her pet, and for a week was quite inconsolable. The father was almost in despair, and more than once deeply regretted his action.

One evening as the family were at the supper table, a familiar bawling sounded from the direction of the barnyard, and the lank form of Neighbor Olmstead loomed up on the front porch.

"Brought her back," he announced, with a slightly uncertain air. "She's hitched out by the stable gate. You see, I didn't contract for any self-winding music box, and as our folks ain't much educated in grand opery, they allowed they couldn't stand it any longer."

"All right; really glad you fetched her back again," said Joplin, while Alice dropped her eating equipment, bounced from her chair and rushed pell-mell out of the house to greet her long-lost playmate.

Thereafter, the child was happy and contented as of yore. The father determined to accept the inevitable and make no further attempt to dispose of the noisy freak. He could bear much for the sake of his baby.

Thus matters drifted along for a little over a month. Then came the catastrophe of which all residents of the Middle West stand in more or less dread.

The day had been hot and sultry to an oppressive degree, and just as the sun was setting, a black, funnel-shaped cloud came whirling its devastating way over the land.

Joplin was at work some little distance from the house, and as he was facing the other way did not heed the first warning roar of the tornado, supposing it to be the rumbling of a heavy freight train on the railroad which passed near his farm.

When he did glance up from his work, his face paled with sudden emotion, and leaving his team and everything he had with him in the field, he dashed for the house at frenzied speed, shouting warnings as he ran. The tornado was bearing directly down upon his dwelling.

It was a desperate race for life, and he won by only a brief minute. With the unselfish clearness of mind of one in a deadly emergency he sped past the doorway, uttering a last warning shout, and jerked open the heavy trap door of the cyclone cellar a few yards away.

His wife and elder daughter, who like himself had at first mistaken the noise of the storm for that of a heavy freight train, rushed to his side terror-stricken. The daughter plunged blindly into the cellar, and then a wild cry of anguish rang from the mother's lips.

"Where is Alice?"

"Oh, my God! Our baby!" echoed the father.

Their startled glances revealed the child standing beside her pet calf away beyond the barn lot, evidently just comprehending that something was wrong.

His last heartbroken glance saw the little one, with fear-stricken eyes, throw her arms about the neck of her shaggy pet.

Terrible the few succeeding moments which seemed years to the grief and fear-stunned refugees in the darkness of the cellar. And when they stood once more in the outer air, they looked upon a scene of indescribable desolation.

House and barn, outbuildings and fences, stock and implements had been swept clean of the ground, or piled in scattered masses of hopeless ruin.

Fainting and unnerved, Mrs. Joplin and her daughter sank to the ground in helpless agony. The husband and father stood dazed and inert, gazing out over the scene of desolation, his eyes strange and bloodshot.

Suddenly he started, looked again at something which had arrested his glance in the distance, uttered an almost inaudible cry and ran toward it with the speed of a winged creature.

In the crown of a large oak tree which had been left unharmed by the storm he had seen the flutter of a child's dress.

The vagaries of such tornadoes are frequently surpassing and wholly unaccountable, which fact is too well known to dwell upon in this case. The father could scarcely believe his senses when he beheld his little one whom he had given up for dead seated astride a limb of the oak tree, her arms tightly clasping one hind leg of her pet calf which was wedged nicely, right side up with care, in a fork of the tree trunk—both calf and child apparently little the worse for their strange experience.

Indeed, it subsequently developed that little Alice was hardly injured to the extent of a scratch and bruise, while the only damage the calf could show was a broken tail. The tornado, however, had gotten away with it musical propensities, and it was never heard to bawl afterward.

"That is the reason why I am now in California," said Joplin to his new neighbors at Santa Ana, when they had heard the details of the story, "and why it would take a nice little sum to buy that cow. Little Alice is not with us any more—she died two years ago. But she always loved her pet like it was a human being, and—well, we sorter feel that we wouldn't care to part with it now. Can you blame us?"

"Not by a —— sight!" exclaimed Sam Woolpoint, extending his hand and shaking that of his neighbor impulsively, while Doc Villinger turned his back toward them and made some very suspicious motions with his handkerchief.

"It does beat all how these here cold nights in California raises the deuce with a feller's eyes," he said grumblingly.

THE REMARKABLE WOOING OF MARTIN HOLBROOK.

By a Special Contributor.

IT was blackberry time. From where he sat on the comfortable, rose-draped porch, Martin Holbrook could see the long double row of bushes, the berries so thick as to make great splashes of delicious inky sweetness.

Martin was alone. He was always alone, and, as is generally the case with those who shun their kind, was morose. A rocker, its rush seat covered with a faded cretonne cushion, teetered gently back and forth as if inviting an occupant, but Martin would have none of it. Rockers were made for women, he argued, and with women he was done. So he chose instead, a hard, straight-back, wooden chair, and tilted it at a perilous angle against the wall.

A branch of the white, bride rose swung nearly low enough to touch him, and a dainty iridescent humming-bird buzzed up and down its length, keeping watch the while of the tiny nest hidden among the green. Sometimes it hovered quite in reach of Martin's hand, but he saw neither the branch nor the bird, for his keen gray eyes were fastened upon the blackberry bushes that banked the irrigating ditch just this side of the fence which separated the ranch from the public road. Some one was stealing blackberries. Every once in a while there was a distinct movement of the leaves, far too vigorous to be made by the wind. Martin brought his front chair legs suddenly to the floor, and half-rose from his seat as he shouted:

"Here, you! get out of them bushes!"

His command evidently was not obeyed, for the suspicious movements continued. Exasperated, Martin strode over to the end of the porch.

"D— you!" he yelled, "clear out of that now, or I'll set the dog on you!"

At this, a tuft of yellow hair emerged from the thick of the bushes, and up from all fours rose a small boy. He came straight toward Martin, calmly eating as he walked, from a fist full of berries. There were sundry rents in his very patched garments, and numerous little streaks of red crossed and recrossed his hands and face, but whether of blood or berry juice, Martin could not say. The boy advanced to the steps of the porch where he stood and looked solemnly up at Martin.

"Sister wouldn't let you say bad words if she had you," he said at last, shaking his tow head.

Martin scowled down in silence at the boy.

"An' she wouldn't let you tell lies, neither."

"Lies?" interrogated Martin in spite of himself.

"Yes," replied the child, "you ain't got no dog."

The man smiled sardonically. "How do you know I ain't?"

The boy tried to stick one bare toe in a crevice between the bricks that made a flooring at the steps' base, and hung down his head. "'Cause folks told us when we came not even a dog'd stay with you."

Martin studied the boy for a moment, then he said sneeringly:

"How's it comes if Sister won't let you lie, she lets you be a thief?"

The red suddenly flared into the child's cheeks, and he looked up at Martin with eyes big with astonishment.

"Do you mean pickin' berries is stealin'?"

"Yes," Martin snapped, "don't you?"

The child looked around helplessly and, opening his fist, let the berries in it drop to the walk.

"I—" he said slowly, "I wuz only helpin' myself thinkin'."

"Oh!" ejaculated Martin, "you were, were you?"

He walked over to his chair and reseated himself, and the boy dropped to the porch step. "Back home," the child said wistfully after a moment, "we let people pick all the berries they want."

"Well, I don't here," returned Martin, "and what's more, I'll rawhide anybody I see at them bushes."

The boy's eyes again grew big. "What do you do with 'em all?"

"Let 'em stay where they are."

"An' dry up?"

"And dry up."

"Oh-h!" came from the boy in long-drawn-out tones of dismay. After that for a short time he was silent. Presently, he began again. "Sister makes the bestest things out of blackberries; jelly an' jam, an' cans 'em for pies. Sister can make awful good blackberry pies; the insides are that thick"—here he held up two dirty fingers to show the depth—"an' the juice all stays in."

"Shut up!" said Martin savagely.

The boy looked up in surprise. "Don't you like pies? Blackberry pies?"

"No," growled Martin.

The boy was on the point of replying when a young woman appeared at the gate.

"Excuse me," she began, addressing Martin, but catching sight of the child, she abruptly stopped.

"Oh, there you are, Berty," she cried in tones of evident relief. "I've been looking everywhere for you. What have you been doing?"

The boy looked guiltily at his stained hands.

"I was pickin' berries," he stammered, "but he said it was stealin', an' he wondered how you'd——"

Martin cleared his throat noisily, and giving his chair a quick jerk rose to his feet. He started to enter the house, but one step in the door he turned back.

"You can come get some more tomorrow if you want to," he said, looking at the boy, "but not your sister. I don't want any wimmen on my place."

It was nearly noon of the next day before Martin remembered his tow-headed pilferer of the previous day. He was mounted on a ladder placed against the trunk of a walnut tree and was cutting out the dead wood. It was an old tree, one of the very first planted on the ranch, and old when he bought the place ten years before, but it still bore its measure of nuts. This year, however, the extremities of the wide branches failed to revivify at the coming of spring, and little dagger points of brittle dead wood stretched out on ever side. It was these points thatMartin was cutting off.

Some fleeting thought served to remind him of the boy, and, glancing through an opening in the trees, he saw the child busily picking away at the bushes, a big tin bucket swinging from one arm. For every berry that went into the bucket, two went into his mouth, and at the sight Martin's lips formed an unaccustomed smile.

"The boy's all right," he mumbled, "but the girl's got to stay where she is."

Some unbidden thought darkened his face. It was like the lashing of a whip, and he shifted his place on the ladder. As he did so, a branch of dead wood on his extreme left caught his attention, and he leaned far over in an effort to reach it. But it was beyond him. He hesitated for a moment, then stepped from the ladder on to a near-by branch. Too late he saw that the decay on this one had extended far in toward the trunk. There was an ominous crack, followed by a sharp splitting sound, and an instant later Martin and the limb were lying upon the ground.

The boy, busy in the bushes, heard the fall, and dropping his bucket was there almost as soon as Martin had recovered from the shock.

"Are you hurt?" he inquired anxiously, bending over the man.

Martin groaned, and tried to straighten out his leg, which was bent under him. At the attempt his face grew very white.

"It's broken all right, and badly," he said savagely; "I wonder how I'll get to the house."

"If you put your hand on my shoulder," suggested Berty, "maybe you can hop."

Martin looked at the staunch little figure and made a determined effort to rise. As he gained his feet, he leaned heavily on the boy and essayed to walk, but after one step he let go his hold and sank back on the ground.

"I can't do it," he gasped. "I'll have to stay here until you get help."

Before he had finished speaking, the child was off. Martin leaned back dizzily against the tree trunk and closed his eyes. By and by, after what seemed an eternity, he opened them to see drawn up in front of him the wooden sled or "boat" he used for hauling stones or wood, and mounted on it, like a charioteer of old.

"Berty said you were pretty badly hurt," she said gently, "but I hope he was mistaken."

"I guess there's no mistake about this," Martin growled between his set teeth, "but he needn't have got you."

The girl smiled slightly. "I suppose I was the first one that came into his mind. He'd so used to coming to me for everything. I sent him off for the doctor." She made a slight motion toward the sled. "I brought the boat," she continued, "because I knew it would be easier for you to get on to it than in the wagon. If you lean on me do you think you could reach it?"

Martin mumbled something about waiting for the doctor, but the girl shook her head decidedly.

"He may not be here for an hour or more." Her voice, calm and matter-of-fact, carried in it also something of a command, and surprised at himself Martin prepared to obey. At his first attempt to rise the girl slipped her strong firm arm under his and almost raised him to his feet. It was but a few steps from the tree to the boat, and sweating at every pore Martin finally made it.

"We can drive right to the kitchen door," the girl said as she sprang in and caught up the lines, "if you don't mind my cutting through the vegetable garden."

Martin didn't mind. Nothing mattered just then except the anguish caused by each jolt over the rough, newly-plowed ground. Fortunately it was not far to the house, and he was soon stretched on the couch in what served him as living-room, growling under his breath at everything and everybody in the universe. Presently the doctor came. Martin watched him take off his coat and roll up his sleeves, and started in to give directions as to what should be and should not be done, but he was soon silenced by whiffs of something sickeningly sweet poured on a piece of gauze and held over his nose by the same firm fingers that had wielded the reins so deftly.

When he was once more himself and the ceiling and walls had ceased to act strangely, Martin looked about him. He was undressed and his couch had been made up with clean, fresh sheets. At first he thought himself alone, but presently he espied in the farthest end of the room Berty's sister. He rose to a sitting posture, and stretching out his hand, said commandingly:

"Clear out! I ain't goin' to have any wimmen around me."

Later in the afternoon Berty came in and Martin welcomed him eagerly.

"Berty," he said abruptly, "how old are you?"

The child looked surprised. "Goin' on 9," he answered proudly.

Martin nodded. "Well, do you think you could look after me if I paid you for it, until I got 'round again? There ain't nothin' else the matter with me but this," he ended, pointing to the injured limb.

"I'll take care of you 'thout pay," responded the boy quickly.

Martin looked at him quizzically. "We'll see about that later. I won't want much in the cookin' line, and you can take your meals home, but mind you," he snarled, "if you come, I don't want that sister of yours hangin' round after you."

Berty's eyes flashed and he clenched his small hands. A half-smile played about the man's lips. "I haven't nothin' against her in particular," he said, "exceptin' she's a woman, and I'm done with them."

It was on the boy's tongue to ask why, but Martin had turned his face away.

One day toward the end of the third week the girl appeared in the door of the room. For a brief moment she hesitated, then she advanced slightly toward Martin.

"I'm sorry to intrude," she began, totally ignoring his lack of welcome, "but I simply can't let you go any longer without attention. The doctor is coming—he's tying his horse outside now—and he'll help me make you more comfortable, and then," with a glance about the disordered room, "I'm going to clean this."

There was the same element in her voice that would brook no denial, and as before when he was stretched under the tree, Martin made no protest. An hour afterward he was alone again, but in that short time miracles had been accomplished. Every trace of disorder had been removed. The shade that would not roll up straight and which let in an aggravating ray of light, had been fixed and fresh muslin curtains draped the windows. The old papers and the crumbs and the pipe ashes were gone, and over on the table where he could see them without turning his head, was a large bowl of nasturtiums. Moreover, he was in a clean bed and on sheets that stretched tightly without a wrinkle. That evening he astonished Berty by asking suddenly: "Do you and your sister live alone?"

The boy looked up from the book whose pages he had been quietly turning. "Yes," he replied; "papa bought this place before we came out, but he died just as we got to Los Angeles, an' Sister didn't want to go back."

Martin recollected that he had heard the story concerning the boy and girl who had become his nearest neighbors, but through lack of interest had forgotten it.

"How do you manage to get along—did your father leave you enough?"

"No," Berty responded, "but Sister raises vegetables, and then we have chickens—'most a hundred now—an' sometimes she makes things an' sells them in the city—puttin' up fruit, you know, an' things like that."

Martin sat suddenly upright. "Are there any blackberries left?" he demanded.

"Not many on the outside, but there's lots an' lots still in the middle under the leaves, an' down by the ditch."

"Do you think your sister'd put them up if you picked 'em?"

"Sure," replied Berty, "but I thought you said you didn't like blackberries."

"Never mind what I said," growled Martin. "If you think she will, you can go over to town tomorrow and get some cans. I'll want 'em mostly for pies."

Berty was all interest. "How many?" he demanded.

"Oh, four or five dozen—eight or ten; I don't know; she can put 'em up until the bushes give out."

"I'll have to stay home an' help her," said the boy; "she can't do it all alone."

Martin's brows gathered into a scowl. "Who said anything about her doin' them to home? She's to do 'em over here."

The week that followed somehow seemed very short. Perhaps it was that Martin had something to interest him besides his pipe and morning paper. True, he saw very little of the girl, which he assured himself many times exactly suited him, but from his couch he could look into the dining-room and through it to the kitchen beyond, from which region daily issued the delicious odor of blackberries—blackberries gently simmering in their own juice—and could catch glimpses of a trim figure in a neat calico dress flitting here and there about the apartment,

It was about this time that he startled Berty by asking: "How old do you think I am?"

Berty ran his eyes over the heavily-bearded face. "I dunno; 'bout 60, I guess."

Martin's face grew black, then he threw back his head and laughed. "Boy alive, I'm only 38!"

The next afternoon, when the day's allotted canning had been done and there was no danger of interruptions, Martin with the assistance of Berty, shaved his face; the first time in years.

"Gee!" he exclaimed, "it does make a difference, doesn't it? If you only had your hair cut, now."

Martin ran his fingers through his mop of hair and pushed back the locks which hung heavily on his forehead.

"Berty," he said, "you're a bright young man. You may take the little wagon tomorrow and drive over and fetch him."

"Who?" asked Berty innocently.

"The barber," replied Martin laconically.

The following night the berries were finished. Berty had gleaned the bushes until they refused to give forth another berry, and seventy-four quart cans, each one turned carefully upon its top, were ranged upon the dining-room table in plain view of the invalid.

Berty surveyed them proudly. "They look mighty fine," he said, shaking his head, "an' my, but won't they make a bully lot of pies!"

Martin's fingers played nervously about his freshly-shaven face.

"What's the matter," he queried, with a strange tremor in his voice, "of your rentin' your place over there, and you and your sister coming here with me. You know," he continued, before the boy had time to reply, "I'll have to have some one to make the pies and help eat 'em, too. I never could eat 'em all alone."

A generous smile overspread Berty's countenance. "It'd suit me all right," he said, "but I'll go ask Sister."

He came back in a minute, crestfallen.

"Sister says you'll have to ask her yourself."

And to his utter surprise the answer seemed to fill Martin with untold delight.

A Shipping Error.

THE young Duchess of Westminster, wife of the richest peer in England, recently gave birth to her third child, a daughter. Thus there is no heir to the immense Grosvenor fortune, Earl Grosvenor, the Duchess's second child, having died at the age of 4.

Apropos of all this, a rather cruel story is being told in Newport about Lady Ursula Grosvenor, the 8-year-old daughter of the young duchess.

A friend, the story goes, called at Eaton Hall, and as she sat in the drawing-room, little Lady Ursula entered.

"Oh, good afternoon," she said gravely. "Mamma can't see any one today. She's upstairs with the new baby. They sent her, you know, a girl when she'd ordered a boy, and she's so upset that she's quite ill."

John L. on Marriage.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, promenading the scorching streets of Reno, was amazed at the size of the Reno divorce colony.

"The divorce colony occupies all this luxurious quarter of the town, eh?" said the ex-champion. "Well, it's amazing. It makes me think there must be some truth in the remark about marriage that a great bachelor editor once made to me.

"'John,' the editor said, 'marriage is for all the world like a besieged city. Those within want to get out, and those without want to get in.'"

Too Naive.

MAYOR GAYNOR, at a dinner in New York, said of a politician's excuse:

"It was altogether too ingenious and naive. It reminded me of the butler story.

"A gentleman advertised for a good butler, and the next morning a young man presented himself.

"'Have you got references?' the gentleman asked.

"'Yes, sir,' said the applicant. 'I have a number of excellent references.'

"'And where did you get them from?' said the gentleman.

"'From the reference library, sir,' was the reply."

The Secret

DR. MINER LEE BATES, president of Hiram College, in a recent address at Hiram, O., enlivened a knotty etymological problem with a story.

"We must not dodge our problem as the boy did," said Dr. Bates.

"A teacher, you see, was having a great deal of difficulty in making clear to a boy the meaning of the word 'recuperate.'

"'Now,' said the teacher, 'your father is a hard worker, isn't he?'

"'Yes, sir, he is,' said the boy.

"'And when he gets home at night he's dead tired, is he not?'

"'Yes, sir, he is.'

"'Then,' pursued the teacher, 'since it's night, and he's dead tired, and work's over, what does he do?'

"'Ah,' said the boy, 'that's what mother wants to know.'"

Human Potatoes.

FREDERICK TOWNSEND MARTIN, the leader of the more intellectual set of New York society, praised, at one of his dinners, the American heiress's new resolve to marry only an American man.

"There's Miss Harriman," he said. "There's Miss Townsend. There's Miss Gould. These girls have set a fashion that I hope will prevail for a long time."

Mr. Martin smiled.

"After all," he said, "a nobleman, with nothing to boast of but his ancestors, is but a human potato—the sole good thing about him is under ground."

Nearest He Could Come.

BISHOP WILLIAM A. QUAYLE, in an address in Oklahoma City, said:

"The East talks of the ignorant and godless West, but the West might well talk, at least as regards certain sections, of the godless and ignorant East.

"The eastern section I have in mind is the younger social set—the idle young men and women of vast inherited wealth. A young millionaire and his wife from this set gave a dinner to a visiting bishop recently, and when the party sat down at table, the young millionaire, for the first time in his life, resolved that in the bishop's honor a grace should precede the meal. So he rapped with his fork for silence, and then stammered:

"'Er—would you mind, Bishop, pronouncing—er—a Benedictine?'"

Young America.

LITTLE Dorothy came in bringing a soft-shelled egg, and exclaimed to grandma: "Just look! the old hen could not find a shell to lay it in, so she laid it in a sack."

Aunt Anna asked her little nephew what he would like to give his cousin for his birthday.

"I know," he answered, "but I ain't big enough."

Little Ben's father caught a bat in the barn and brought it in to show to his small son, asking him what he thought it was. "Oh, Papa!" said little Ben, "it's an angel mouse!"

Four-year-old Edward was eating some rather tough beefsteak when he said: "Say, fader, what's the matter of this meat? It just chews and chews and won't eat up."

Little Eleanor, who was very fond of chickens, stood crying over a dead rooster. Thinking that something good ought to be said, she remarked between her sobs: "He was always so glad when one of the hens laid an egg."

Margaret and her little playmate were exchanging confidences.

"What's your favorite color?" asked Elizabeth.

Margaret looked thoughtful for a moment and then said brightly: "Plaid!"

During the summer, Curtis's sister was sick. He had heard his mother say that she was warm when she had fever. Soon after he came into the house one day with a warm egg in his hand and said: "Mother, I did not know that hens had fever, too."

A sunny-spirited, companionable little boy named Bruce has a charming grandmother whose most devoted lover he is. They take long rambles together through the woods and fields, finding fresh wonders at every step.

One day they came to a gate which Bruce made haste to open, saying: "I thought it was too hard for you, grandma, and you see I want to make you last as long as ever I can."—[The Delineator.

Mary, aged 7, was in the hospital after an operation for appendicitis. One day the surgeon came to see her, dressed in the white gown he had been wearing in the operating-room. The nurse noticed that Mary seemed much disgusted about something.

"A stationer is a man who keeps a station," said John, confidently.

"Frank, tell me what you think."

"I think a stationer is a hotel keeper," he declared confidently.

"Why do you think so, Frank?" asked the teacher curiously.

"Because I don't know any one else who would have twenty-four sheets."—[The Delineator.

Six-year-old Anna was going to have a birthday party to which Wilbur, her little playmate, was invited. "I am going to be a famous singer," she replied.

"And you, Susie, what are you to be?"

"Oh, I am going to write stories when I grow up," she answered.

"And what is Marjorie to be?" continued the mother.

Marjorie, aged 5, thought seriously a moment and then said: "Well, I am not sure, but I think I'll be a widow."—[Delineator.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

THEY MUST BE GIVEN ATTENTION FROM NOW ON.

By Ernest Braunton.

UP to the present time " 'mums" may, without harm, have been neglected, but from now on they must receive constant attention if a crop of fine bloom is to be the climax. The water should not be withheld at any time—too much can scarcely be given. Next to a liberal water supply, in importance, comes staking and tying. Split shakes make very good stakes, and for the dwarfer sorts one length is enough, and for the taller ones they may be spliced. It is all a question, though, of how they are grown. In some cases a few longer and stronger stakes would be necessary, and some use very large ones and group the stems. The better method is to stake every stalk and then but very light, slender stakes are needed. After staking comes fertilizing, and this must begin as soon as buds show, and be kept up until the buds show the color of the flower, when it must absolutely stop, but great quantities of water must be given daily. Manure water, commercial fertilizers or whatever is given should be used sparingly at first—once every ten days or two weeks—for about three times, and then once each week until the coloring buds tell you to stop. Special attention must be given to disbudding, and all buds below the top ones should be rubbed out as soon as they appear. On some sorts a goodly crop of attenuated side branches break out well down on the main stem, and these should be kept off, or they will take part of the food and thereby weaken the main crop. When feeding stops and color appears in the bud, no further note need be taken of disbudding, for after this stage of growth such adventitious growths can no longer affect the general crop. The plants require a great deal of water as long as any flowers remain.

Howeas or Kentias.

A PLANT expert, well known throughout this country, was asked: "What is the most popular pot plant?" and he unhesitatingly answered: "Howea (Kentia) Forsteriana." In any climate more severe than ours it is necessarily a house plant, but with us it is quite hardy, being more liable to injury by sun than frost. In spite of this, the one we illustrate is growing on the south side of a dwelling, yet it suffers but little damage each summer, and none in winter.

The Charms of the Country.

THE "lure of the city" and the "charms of the country" are counter-attractions, to the average citizen, of nearly equal strength. Occasionally some one gets almost hopelessly sick of the one and flies to the other for relief in change, yet at times a yearning comes for old familiar sights and sounds. Once business is laid aside, there is no question but the "call of the wild" beckoning one "back to nature" is by far the stronger, yet it is by reason of experiencing life in the city that one best appreciates the country. In a recent number of the Outlook (New York) "The Spectator" says:

"After supper, in the spring dusk, the Spectator went up in his orchard and fulfilled that engagement with Silence which he has mentioned. Once a year only does he meet her, once a year only does he stand in her actual breathing presence and hear her voice delivering the eternal song of the universe. Sitting motionless in the spring grass, with his old friend the woodchuck erect before him at the mouth of his hole, he held his breath, his thoughts, held the very feelings of his gratified spirit in check, and listened, listened. When, some hours later, he went gravely back to the house to go to bed, he reflected that it is a generous world in which one realm fashions the spirit to receive the best ministrations of the other; and he blessed the city as he went to sleep in the arms of the country."

Protect Birds and Toads.

ALL birds should be protected while in the garden, and everything possible done to encourage them. A vessel always full of fresh water is a strong attraction. If one has no fruits in the garden, all birds should be welcome, but in a fruit garden the common linnet is one of the most persistent and destructive pests ever visited upon suffering humanity.

Though we should protect the birds, a toad is worth a dozen birds in getting rid of insect pests. Analyses of the stomachs of a large number of toads disclosed the fact that they live entirely upon injurious insects well known to the gardener. Grasshoppers, cutworms, ants, rose chafers and beetles and a list of nearly a hundred pests. Toads need a cool, damp retreat. In the writer's garden there is a large pile of stones (granite boulders) from which there issues, every night at dusk, at least half a hundred toads. Some years ago ants were everywhere, but at present they do not number more than a hundredth of the multitude two years ago. So important is the toad in the garden that our government has issued a bulletin entitled "The Garden Toad," urging all to protect it.

The Giant Burr-Reed.

SOME years ago, when the writer did considerable botanical collecting, he sometimes came across a very interesting semi-aquatic plant of almost noble proportions, popularly known as the Giant Burr Reed and to the botanist as Sparganium eurycarpum.

This plant is not at all common, though occasional in the bed of the Los Angeles River, both above and below the city, but not close in, and also along Ballona Creek. In relationship it is close to the cat tail (Typha,) and sometimes placed in the same natural order, but usually in one of its own. Its leaves are like those of the cat tail, but the flowers instead of being in "tails" are in spiky burrs, sometimes nearly an inch through, resembling a green, spiked cypress cone. The plant often grows more than eight feet high, and is sufficiently showy to merit a place in water-side plantations. Why it is not grown with the better-known cat tails is hard to explain, for it is equally ornamentive and much rarer, also more of a curiosity.

Flowers and Vegetables.

THE perfect garden is not necessarily composed of ornamentals to the exclusion of fruits or vegetables. We have many fine evergreen fruit trees, shrubs and vines and a little square full of orderly ranks of vegetables lends a pleasing contrast to any garden. Few plants have more beautiful or more delicately-cut foliage than parsley, carrots or parsnips, and where is the holly berry that will vie in beauty with the tomato, or a flower that in strength of aroma will compare with the onion.

Native Plants Appreciated.

CALIFORNIA native plants are at last "coming to their own." After years and years of indifference, our people are awakening to their beauty and value and their peculiar fitness for gardens in this and similar climates. For ten years the writer has sung the praises of our native plants, and at first none seemingly took note. After a time, a few manifested interest, and then the writer grew bold enough, when planning rural gardens and grounds about educational institutions, to prescribe nothing but native ornamentals. Now these examples are before the people, some of them for several years, and each year the demand for native nursery grows heavier and will so continue for all time.

A Beautiful Amaryllad.

VALLOTA PUPUREA, not purple but crimson, is one of the most beautiful members of the amaryllis family. It seems to be quite rare locally, for a few bulbs have been blooming in the writer's yard and hardly a visitor had ever seen one before. Another rare sight, new to every visitor thus far, is a plant of the common "elephant's ear" in bloom. The few the writer has seen in bloom bore creamy-white flowers, but this plant bore yellow flowers and is but five years of age.

Rose or Blackberry Scale.

A SUBURBAN reader states that his rose bushes, his blackberry and loganberry bushes, as well as those of several neighbors are getting covered with a white coating which rubs off quite easily, but appears to be a white scale of the same shape, though a little larger, than the red scale of the orange. He wishes a remedy.

No doubt it is what gardeners call the white rose scale (Diaspis rosae,) and is one very easy to kill. A kerosene emulsion is probably as convenient to use as any remedy. Shave up a half-pound of common soap, put it in a gallon of water, bring it to the boiling point and add two gallons of kerosene. If you have a spray pump (and you will need one,) pump this solution, while still hot, from one vessel to another until the emulsion is perfect; that is, until so thoroughly mixed that no oil will separate from the mixture after standing several hours. When ready to use it, use one part of this emulsion to ten parts of water. Before spraying hoe the soil away from base of plants so stems well into the ground will be sprayed. Use [illegible] grade of kerosene; poorer grades will [illegible] to the rose bushes.

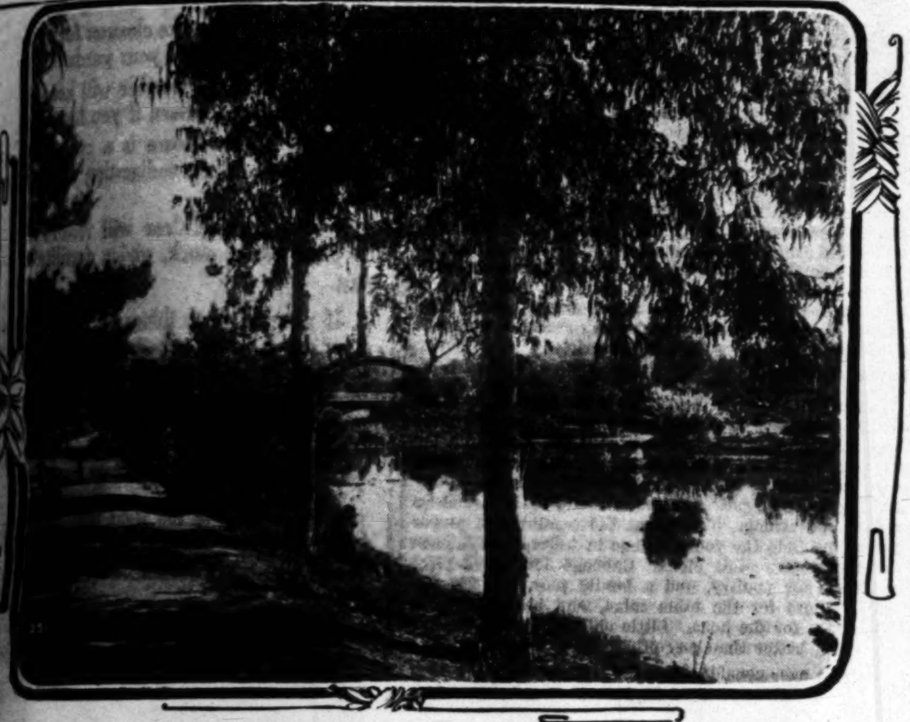
The City Beautiful—Its Avenues, Streets, Parks and Lakes.

SUBURBAN ROADSIDES.

They Should Be Adorned With Trees and Flowers.

BEAUTIFIERS of the city line out parkways with cement borders, plant them to street trees with smaller plants or grass beneath and thereby accomplish more than can be done in any other line of civic work toward making the "City Beautiful," especially in Southern California. In the country we should find conditions much the same; suitable roadside trees should adorn every acre front, and for parkway may be appropriated all the unused strip on either side the beaten track. Any outlying town or city a few, or even many miles from Los Angeles, that will plant the roadsides with native poppies from its center down to the limits of the metropolis will become famous. Nothing else, cost considered, could even closely approach this method of drawing popular favor. "Follow the Poppies to Blankville" would soon be heard all over the country. Magazine writers would dwell upon it with photographs of flowers until the fame of it would soon reach far beyond the seas. No amount of money spent in other kinds of advertising could equal it, and think of the satisfaction to be gained, by every resident, from living, perennial advertisement. In other methods of gaining publicity, both the money and the matter obtained by it are sent away from home, but with ten miles of poppy highway all could enjoy it and keep it home.



EASTLAKE PARK IN ITS WILDER DAYS.

"This roadside gardening is an easy task, and by no means costly. Plow and harrow the ground after the first soaking rain, let it rest for a couple of weeks until weed seeds start, then sow the flower seeds and harrow well to kill the young crop of weeds. Monotony should be avoided by planting many sorts of native flower seeds, but the California poppy (Eschscholtzia) should be the leader; in places it should be the only flower, and in no place should it entirely run out, but at least a thin line of it run continuously throughout. Scores of other sorts could be sown in zones, and would persist forever. After the first sowing, they would be self-sown each year. Some kinds might run out, but others would become correspondingly dominant, so that the crop as a whole would certainly hold its own. After the demonstration was once made, we would find flower-flanked roads all over the country, and we would indeed be a land of flowers."

Inside Parks.

ALL inner parks, from Eastlake down to the tiniest, have suffered from contact with the public. In olden days, when visitors were few, all our parks smacked somewhat of natural wildness, but with increase of visitors and accessories to meet their demands this charm of the wildwood fled, never to return. We must now go to Elysian Park and again, in a few years, to Griffith Park, for a few quiet spots uncontaminated by such so-called improvements. The latter park is so vast and so varied in character that it will be many long years ere man exercises complete dominion over the whole.

Tenement Houses Unknown Here.

IN Los Angeles we have no tenement-houses as the term is understood in the average city, or, indeed, in any city save ours. Here thousands who own their own homes or are paying for them, would, if living in New York or Chicago, be pent up in one of those death traps known in vulgar speech as situated "in the slums." But a small part of our so-called poor live in the city proper. They are found on the outskirts and in the suburbs, paying for homes on the installment plan. Fine transportation facilities, together with a climate of almost perpetual summer, has made us famous as a city of homes.

Great Value of Playgrounds.

SOME of the 1910 graduates from the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School chose for their orations subjects of extreme local interest, and the whole matter was given a strong local coloring. Every resident of Los Angeles will find pleasant and interesting reading in the following, by Mr. George E. Bettinger:

"The playground cannot be excelled as an instrument in clearing the streets of boys and girls and furnishing them with a place to spend their leisure hours. The lessons learned here do more toward making good citizens of boys than any number of lectures or books can do. These lessons of law and order are imbibed as the boy goes about his play. They become a part of him and he obtains the true essential ideas of good citizenship. An incident that happened in Los Angeles, will show the efficiency of the playground in taking the boys off the streets. In a certain part of this city it had been the custom of the police department to put on two extra officers when the summer vacation of the schools began. This was necessary because it did not take long for the children to get into mischief. The year that the playground was opened, the force of officers was increased as usual, but much to the surprise of the police they were not needed and were removed in less than two weeks. This was made possible by the playground The children went there instead of loafing around the streets and getting into trouble."

Lest We Forget.

THE summer is the most trying time for improvement associations, for but little public work is carried on at this season, so many members are away and the hot weather is enervating. Nevertheless, a little life and activity should be manifest and the spark kept aglow until the return of cooler breezes fans it once more into a flame. Theoretically it is a time of rest, but practically there is work for each month in the year. If little is done now, firmly resolve that an active campaign will later be waged on some new and commendable work and that the prosecution of problems in hand will in no wise be abated.

Value of School Gardens.

THE original idea of introducing plant life, with its marvelous story of growth and beauty, into child life is inherently beautiful. It is an idea as beautiful in the city as in the country. Its novelty in city school life is greater than in the country, yet its value as an object lesson in natural beauty is quite as necessary in the country.

The advocates of the school garden, however, do not stop at introducing interest alone; they do not seek merely to teach how plants and flowers grow—in itself, perhaps, sufficiently valuable knowledge—but they go much further than that and correlate the school garden to other phases of teaching, so that, in a sense, it forms the basis of the whole school idea.

Thus, arithmetic is taught in planning and laying out the garden; the multiplication table, fractions, lessons in finding areas and perimeneters, measuring distances and other work of like nature all have their place. Later on, certain aspects of book-keeping are introduced, the children buying seeds and receiving bills for them, paying for them with checks, and otherwise conducting the garden affairs on a business basis.

Other phases of teaching are illustrated and developed in the garden work. Facility in the use of language is promoted by encouraging and demanding conversations on the work done and things observed. Diaries are kept, and the child trained in writing and in observation. Drawing is helped, and coloring by the drawing of plant life. Practical lessons in ethics and behavior are developed in the garden work, which have a very high value in practicability. One child, for example, will help a sick child; one will learn that he must do the joint work necessitated by the development of a concerted scheme; and in other ways the children learn to understand the relationship which must exist between every member of a single community.

Watch the Street Trees.

STREET trees planted last spring will need close watching now, for this is their most trying time. The present and few succeeding months is a time for noting the comparative resistance to drought of our street trees. Many that pass unharmed through our rainless summers do not look at all happy at the beginning of the rainy season, and cannot, throughout summer, be called highly ornamental. The tree which looks best at all times is bound to be the universal favorite, and we use several species of "it."

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

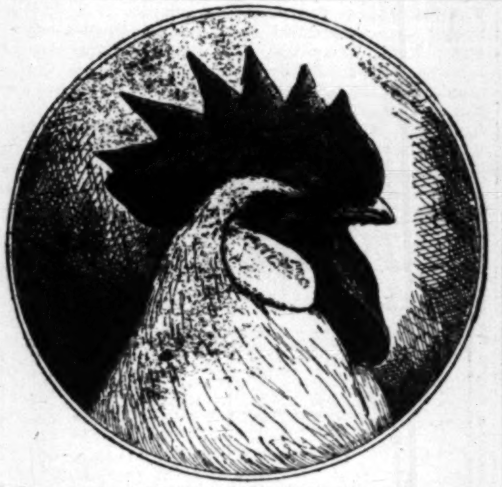
THE BREED CLUBS.

WHAT THEY STAND FOR AND WHAT THEY HOPE TO ACCOMPLISH.

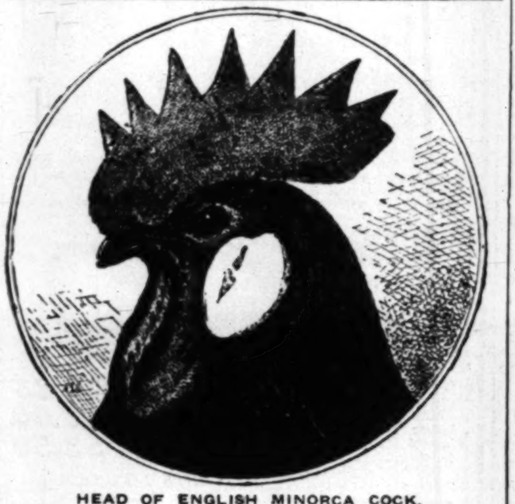
By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

NEXT to the National Association and the various poultry organizations there is possibly no element wielding a wider influence on the fancy and utility poultry culture than the several breed or specialty clubs. As the name implies, these are composed of people interested only in a single breed or variety, the object being to exploit it commercially and strengthen it from a breeders' and fancy point of view. Many of these are national in character; others are local or sectional, covering only a given geographical area in their operations. The good they have accomplished in an educational way is almost incalculable. Not only have their efforts resulted in better poultry and more of it, but they have established standards of value in the different breeds and varieties; they have eliminated faults in both color of plumage and other sections of the bird; they have extended the popularity of poultry culture, especially the fancy end of it; they have augmented the egg yield and enhanced the value of carcass; indeed, in more than one instance the specialty club has dominated the action of the national body itself. All of which has been accomplished by unity of action, by close study and observation of the birds under the care of men and women who are first fanciers and then commercial breeders.



A GOOD WHITE LEGHORN COCK.



HEAD OF ENGLISH MINORCA COCK.

In this State there are a number of strong specialty clubs that are really doing a splendid work. Chief among these must be mentioned the Pacific Black Minorca Club, consisting of about seventy-five members, and representing about 4000 head of Black Minorca fowl. Allowing the usual yield of 150 specimens of hen fruit for each hen, we certainly have a handsome showing for product. Since its inception in 1908 the Black Minorca has gained in numbers and prestige in this section.

Another strong club is the Rhode Island Red organization, which has done more to bring this breed to the fore than all other influences combined. At late shows, this breed represented the largest entry. As an all-purpose fowl it stands at the head, the hens laying a goodly number of eggs, while in quality of carcass it is among the best.

As an instance of reviving a breed, there has been no better work done than that of the Pacific Cornish Fowl Club. Not only did it resuscitate interest in what is possibly our best meat breed, but it practically put it on its feet by doing away with the name "Indian Game," which carried with it an erroneous impression that it belonged properly to the Game class. The standard it established has become national in its operations. To be sure, it "fell down" in its endeavor to have the breed taken out of the Oriental class and placed in the English at the last A.P.A. meeting, but there are other days coming, and we look forward to the time when it will be accomplished.

Besides the above there are associations of breeders covering all the leading breeds, all of which are working along similar lines. It goes without saying that we cannot have too much knowledge on any and all phases of poultry breeding; and no one single influence is at present so dominant as that of the specialty clubs. If you are not a member of the one representing your favorite variety and breed, get into line and join. Be a booster—never mind about the other fellow and his hammer.

Two Superb Mediterranean Heads.

There are no two breeds in the Mediterranean class more popular with the poultry breeders in the Southwest than the White Leghorn and Black Minorca. As is well known, the former stands supreme in Northern California, while the latter has a very strong following south of the Tehachepi. For this reason we have no apologies to offer in presenting to our readers two superb illustrations of two grand specimens from a late issue of the Feathered World of London. The first pictures the winner of challenge trophy and cup for the best White Leghorn cockerel at the Leghorn Club Show in London; the second, the best Black Minorca cockerel at the Palace Show. As contra-distinguished from the American ideal, it will be noticed that the combs are heavier (more beefy) and the neck more stocky. The English are great on utility, hence blockiness in body has its attractions to them. The American bird, we believe, is the egg machine, and also to be preferred for its graceful carriage.

Lettuce for Green.

It pays any poultry keeper to grow lettuce for poultry, planting seed at proper intervals. When wild birds take the young plants, sow in a seed bed made in a big flat box, and raised from the ground, with an inch-mesh wire net cover. During the heat of summer, gunny sacking must be put over the wire until the seedlings are up and strong. Transplant the seedlings at proper times, and hide the young things in a deep mulch from the birds until well along. Cabbage lettuce is most profitable for poultry, and a family man can use the crisp centers for the table salad, and have plenty of good green for the hens. Little chicks can manage lettuce fresh better than any other green.

Did you ever consider that the manner in which fowl are killed and bled, cleaned, trussed and "cured" has an important bearing on the palatability of your chicken dinner? Just give these few thoughts serious consideration when selecting the bird that is about to "travel the bourne from whence no traveler returns," to serve the comforts of your family, and possibly you will denote a pleasing difference when you dine on its flesh.

At Times a Good Thing.

As a general proposition, we do not advocate sending away from home for breeding stock or eggs for hatching. To the person who is about to begin in the poultry business, as well as the person who only wants a family flock, the local stock will be found quite as good as the imported. But very often a breeder wants birds for specific purposes in the carrying out of his breeding pens; again it is desirable to introduce new blood, the strain of which should be known; at other times one cannot always find out just what is needed from local breeders. For any one or all of these reasons it may be advisable to send elsewhere for stock and eggs. As a well-known writer has well said: "When inbreeding has been long continued, a real or fancied necessity for the introduction of fresh blood arises. To introduce fresh blood, and at the same time to avoid the introduction of antagonistic tendencies and qualities, one should confine himself not only to the same breed, but so far as possible to the same strain. But if one procures stock of the same strain, bred in the same neighborhood, the blood of his stock will not be freshened and the advantages for which he hoped will not be obtained. But if he procures stock from a distance, bred from the same strain but under different environment, these advantages will be obtained. Change of environment, in some way, seems to make sufficient change in the blood to produce the desired improvements."

In animal and bird life, as well as plant life, environment has a decided influence. A New England bird in the third generation and of the same strain as the California-bred specimen will possess peculiarities and potentialities which may be of service to a California breeder.

The Heat of Summer.

Unless their physical comforts are looked after by the caretaker, chickens will suffer more or less from the effects of the hot summer days, which arrived in regulation form last week. As precautionary measures, fresh, cool water is an essential. Where water is piped into the yards, the dripping faucet is excellent, but where water is supplied in vessels, a fresh supply at least twice a day is advisable. The earthen and metal drinking fountains are excellent if kept in a shady situation where the water can be maintained in a cooling draught. Cleanliness is of first importance; ing vessels should be thoroughly cleaned each day. In feeding, avoid the heating light on corn and give plenty of green food.

days every city had high, wide walls. It was possible to walk around the city upon them. of the wall of Jerusalem today are wide enough We remember the faithful Rahab in Jericho, whose house was built upon the walls of the city, hiding the Israelitish spies upon her roof among the flax which was there to dry. At the "time of the shutting of the gate" the men were sought for. When it was safe to do so, she "let them down by a cord through her window," and the spies went back to Joshua and brought the report that "The cities were great and walled up to heaven."

Closed at Sunset.

St. Paul, in escaping from Damascus, had to be let down in a basket from a rope from the window overlooking the wall of the city.

The gates of a city were always closed at sunset. Caravans arriving after dark were obliged to wait outside until morning. Travelers on foot could enter the city by the small door of the gate, which was known in gospel days by the figurative expression: "The eye of the needle." Christ was referring to this custom of making the camels wait outside the gate until dawn, because of the impossibility of their passing through the smaller door, when He said: "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle."

Though the gates of Jerusalem still stand and a sentinel guards them yet, they are never closed by day or night. There is only one exception, which is a very remarkable one. It was an oriental custom to honor a great guest or a festivity by opening a new gate for them and after the feast closing it in memory of their entry through it. It is exceedingly interesting in this connection to note that the eastern gate of Jerusalem is the only gate which is closed today. It has been perpetually closed, for the Mohammedans have walled it in completely. It leads from the Temple to the Mount of Olives. It is the gate through which Christ passed so often on His way from the temple to Bethany. Strangely enough, Ezekiel prophesied centuries before that: "This gate to the east shall be closed and no man shall enter in by it because the Lord hath entered by it, therefore it shall be shut."

The Mohammedans, who know nothing of this prophecy, make the following remarkable explanation regarding the closing of the gate. They say that it will never be opened again until the Christians' Prince shall come and take Jerusalem. Nowadays it is more usual to build a new road for an honored visitor. When the German Emperor visited Jerusalem for the consecration of the new German church, a road was cut through the rocks and hills around Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives. It afforded the most beautiful panoramic view of the city to be seen anywhere. Numbers of men and women were set to work to "Gather up the stones" to clear the road—just as in olden days.

There are numberless incidents which take place today in the streets of Jerusalem, in the fields and in the market-places, which illustrate scenes of Bible days.

One of the most interesting, perhaps, since our Lord took it as symbolic of uprightness in man's dealings with his fellow-men, is the daily scene of measuring wheat in the market-place. The official measurer is hired by the vender of wheat, and he measures the quantity before the eyes of the purchaser. He shakes the wooden measure and continues pouring on more wheat until it literally runs over. By his very act he seems to reëcho Christ's words: "Good measure, pressed down and shaken together and running over, shall men give unto your bosoms." Then he lifts the measure and pours the wheat into the large blouse of the buyer's long, wide shirt, which is gathered in at the waist by a broad girdle.

Clothes of Camel's Hair.

This forms an immense pocket. It is in this sheltered place that the shepherd carries his little lamb, and of which Isaiah spoke in figurative language regarding the Messiah's love for His people.

"He shall carry the lambs in His bosom." As the garments of the men are flowing, the skirts are sometimes tucked up into the girdles so as to allow the wearer to work more easily. This is what was called "having their loins girdled."

The men's cloak is still made of camel's hair, like the one which John the Baptist wore. It is sleeveless, but very heavy and warm. It is very easily put on, and we can understand why that should have been chosen as an expression of swiftness: "As a shepherd putteth on his outer garment."

The women wear plain loose blue gowns, with wide girdles. On their heads they wear stiff caps, to which are attached all the gold and silver coins they possess. A married woman wears all her dowry sewn onto her cap. It is as safe there as in the bank. She never takes it off her head by day or night, and the worst robber would never molest a woman's head dress. This money is never used unless absolutely necessary. It is a matter of great pride to a woman to have as many of these glittering pieces as possible and to keep the number intact. Seeing how zealously the women guard these precious coins, one can realize better what it meant to the woman in the parable to have lost one of these pieces. It was a disgrace before all her neighbors. The moment they heard of her loss they all came and wept with her and helped her to search for it with their little virgin lamps. Having found it, they rejoiced loudly.

All Are Neighbors.

The people of a village are all "neighbors," and have a strong sense of the duties of neighbors. By their loud cries of rejoicing the news would soon spread, and to each new visitor the happy woman would exclaim: "Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I lost."

Over their tall caps they wear the picturesque white veil, which falls gracefully over their shoulders. The veil in the Orient is significant of modesty, and a woman appearing without one would have been scouted until within the last year, ever since the Sultan pronounced the edict of liberty. Now there is no law against a woman's face being seen in public. The bride in Canticles lamented in sorrow and shame that "they have taken my veil away." In the story of Rebekah's journey on camel-back to her husband's home we are told that upon seeing Isaac in the distance she immediately covered her face with her veil. These long veils are very useful at times. When marketing, they are used as baskets, and often contain eggs, butter and cheese tied up in the corners. Ruth the Moabitess used hers to gather up the wheat to take home. The women of the Orient have their little vanities just as other women all over the world. St. Paul spoke reprovingly of "the outward plaiting of the hair and the wearing of apparel." This refers to the custom of adorning the head with bright head bands and glittering coins and flowers and ornaments on festive occasions.

Peculiar Water Vessels.

Many important events take place at the well side. Youths are attracted there by the sight of the graceful maidens. Many a marriage results from a meeting at the well. It was there that not only Rebekah, but Rachel and Zipporah were found by their husbands.

Some of the water vessels taken to the well to be filled are made of dried goats' skins. These are the bottles which Christ referred to when He said: "No man putteth new wine into old bottles lest the new wine doth burst the bottles and the wine is spilled." These bottles when full of water are tied at the neck and carried slung over the back of the water carrier. Very often he sells cups of water from it on hot summer days, through the streets. He uses poetical language to advertise his business. He repeats almost literally the language of Isaiah: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the water, and he that hath no money come ye and buy without price." Notwithstanding his beautiful invitation, he expects to be paid for every drop of water he pours out. These bottles become black from the smoke of the fires in the tents. David said in his humiliation and sorrow: "I am become like a bottle in the smoke." Other bottles are of earthenware and have peculiar little spouts. These are used for drinking from and for the "washing of hands." The custom of washing the hands before eating is often referred to in the scripture. The oriental mode of doing this is rather peculiar. The servant pours the water from the spout of this stone jar onto the outstretched hands of his master and wipes them with a towel. It is a service of humility and respect. It reminds one vividly of the instance when the Savior performed this service of love to His disciples to teach them a lesson of willing service one to another. Before meals, it is customary for a servant to perform this act of deference to each guest in turn as they recline around the table.

Meal-Time Customs.

It is still customary in well-to-do homes to recline on couches during the meals, but in the village homes the people sit on the matted floor around the large wooden bowl which contains the cooked rice or beans. The head of the house opens the meal by taking up a handful of the greasy rice and a piece of bread, and rolling it into a ball he places it into the guest's mouth himself. This complimentary act is the sign for all those assembled to literally "dip in the dish," eating with their hands. It recalls to our minds the act of the betrayer, who dipped into the dish with his Master and then gave Him over to His enemies. When the evening meal is over, the comfortables are taken off the shelves and spread on the matting for the family to sleep on. This explains the ease with which the healed man could obey Christ's command: "Take up thy bed and walk." Beds consist only of comfortables. When the children are all rolled up and asleep the women in the homes begin the grinding of the wheat for the bread for the next day, while singing plaintive lullabies.

This is monotonous work, and was often given to prisoners to do. The reproach: "Come and sit in the dust and take the millstone." Samson's enemies set him to grinding when he was their captive. Ezekiel, speaking of utter desolation, used the expression, well understood by the people: "The grinders shall cease and the sound of grinding be low." Christ, speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem, said: "Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken and the other left."

The Dawn of Freedom.

The method of sifting the wheat is also referred to by the Prophet Amos: "Like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth."

The women are as busy in the fields as in the houses. There are Ruths gleaning and reaping and winnowing and even plowing by the side of the oxen. To the town the women come bearing the produce of their fields, and they look very picturesque "sitting in the market-place." On their heads they carry large baskets and on their shoulders their small sons sit, taking their first lessons in riding. This leaves the women's arms free for the other purposes. Baby girls are carried in a carpet hammock slung across their mothers' shoulders. There is a figurative prophecy regarding the better standing of women in the Orient in days to come in the proclamation: "Their daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders."

Those better days are now at last breaking, for this is the dawn of freedom from subjection for women in all Turkey and the Holy Land. Now that her fetters of immutability have been loosened, this land, which has through the ages preserved her traditional customs and retained her quaint poetical and figurative forms of speech, will doubtless before long be affected permanently by the influx of civilization. What has been one of the chief charms of this land for Bible students will before long be a thing of the past.

Farming in California—The Land and Its Products.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Fine Edition.

"FROM DESERT LAND TO FAIRY LAND" is the title of the edition of the Evening Index, commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the settlement of San Bernardino. This special is composed of 128 pages nicely illustrated and interspersed with a text written attractively and in truth concerning the natural resources and the achievements of our largest county. San Bernardino is not only the greatest in area, but is the most thickly-populated to the square mile in its cultivated area. The publication before me is devoted to fruit scenes, horticultural progress and to general rural affairs to an extent that speaks well for the stability and progress of one of the richest sections of the State. The people of San Bernardino should be proud of the newspaper enterprise that turns out such a magnificent edition.

It Is Our Duty.

A CORRESPONDENT who visited the State last winter to try conclusions with a ready-made Tokay vineyard consisting mostly of half-alive cuttings, is discouraged about the fruit industry. I wrote him commending his personal opinion, but also advising him that the fruit outlook is, like the sun—exceeding bright except in a few variable but very dark spots. The spots are governed in extent by ignorance, incapacity and inattention to business, obscuring with them the business of many grape, prune and raisin growers, and abetted by out-of-date marketing systems. He writes his concern about the danger of the removal of fruit tariffs, which is of no interest one way or the other to one who thinks fruits will grow of themselves in California.

But there is a broader view. With meats soaring from rump steak to brisket and no prospect of a fall, millions of people will come to fruit as a food. Dr. Brook of The Times is doing all he can to bring that about even now. The "corn-flake" man is exclaiming upon a page in every magazine: "Why pay 50 cents for a mite of mutton chops when 10 cents will buy five meals of corn?" The health culturists are all "Sunny Jims," and we are deluged with accounts of the finest specimen of "female womanhood" in the world who lives upon fruits and swims like a fish. Men who discard meats are the most robust and powerful of all, and the world is rapidly coming to a fruit-vegetable diet—all of which Dr. Brook firmly believes and much of which the circumstance of meat prices is being forced into the tenets of the writer.

So I see nothing dark about the future of fruit growing in this State excepting through the mistake of the individual grower. The tariffs we are entitled to, and must have as a matter of right. If the tariff is a local issue, then the good league of citrus growers has organized a good cause in getting the coöperation of over 800 fruit and vegetable organizations, most of which associations are in the south and are represented by Democratic Congressmen. The repeal of fruit duties would be about as tough a job as could well be undertaken. With all these facts in evidence and taking into account the rapid increase of fruit production the outlook for the future is not bad at all. The industry is suffering from the production and shipment of inferior fruit everywhere, but that fault can be corrected by the growers themselves.

Growers' Fumigating Company.

A MOVEMENT is under way at Pomona that will be watched with interest by every citrus-fruit section of the State. It is a proposition to fight fruit pests through a general organizaion of growers formed for that special purpose. The company has ordered 70,000 yards of tent material from a cotton mill in New Hampshire, ordered the construction of wagons and other facilities for handling the business, and is now seeking that most difficult of all commodities to procure—expert service. I have been informed that the new company has offered constant employment to a competent manager at $200 per month. He would be worth it.

P. C. O'Gara, who has been in charge of the pear-blight work for years in California and Oregon, has just retired from the Federal service to accept a position at $5000 per year—two or three times the salary he was paid by the Department of Agriculture. He is now employed by the Rogue River, Oregon, Apple Growers' Association. His duties involve blight and insect control, frost fighting, and advising the growers upon all matters pertaining to their business. The Pomona company is using good business tactics in seeking the best service, in adopting all the improved methods of fumigating and in getting supplies at the lowest rate. The eyes of the citrus-fruit men are upon this new adventure, and all hope for its success.

Harp With One String.

THE young women were repacking a carload of Bartlett pears grown in a mountain district. The fruit had been packed averaging forty-five pounds to the box but the new standardization rules required an average of fifty pounds and the pack had to be brought up to standard weight. I unwrapped about a hundred fruits to see if the quality was uniform. Was it? Did you ever see a carload of navel oranges packed true to size, quality and appearance? Every pear was a duplicate of every other, and near the pear orchards producing this fruit were growing superb plums, prunes for fresh shipment, and peaches. I had seen just such pears growing in the San Gabriel Valley a quarter of a century ago, but where are they now? Only the citrus string of the lute remains.

Ole Bull kept a violin trained to lose all its strings, but one while the master was playing to his delighted house. Upon the one string left he would work out his theme with all the variations. Can the citrus growers do it? They are succeeding equally with the great music master. But will they continue to do so? After going through the cherry harvest, and now the Crawford's Early, Bartlett pear, plum and apricot season, I see the need, as never before, of a return to other fruits in the south to the extent at least of supplying the home markets with deciduous fruit of the quality produced in the north. When the Owens River comes boiling down the canal we may look for more diversity, for be it known some of the finest fruits of the mountain districts in the north are grown with irrigation. Why not try pears, peaches, apples and plums in many little upland valleys, and not plant everything to oranges?

Who Cares for Truth.?

HOGS will exterminate Johnson grass. Turkeys are in control of the Colorado potato bug. The meadow lark is fast wiping out the grasshopper plague in the Sacramento Valley, even where the grasshoppers had covered the earth. The hop crop is doomed on account of the myriads of red spiders and aphids that have appeared. Citrus white flies are again ravaging the trees in the northern citrus belt. The authorities contemplate beginning a campaign to exterminate the grasshopper pest—and so on to the end. This is the pabulum upon which our experts are feeding themselves to greatness. Who cares for the truth?

The people of Los Angeles are somewhat interested in hops even if Pasadena and Riverside are not. They saw in late dispatches that the hop crop would be ruined if the State commissioner did not soon intervene "with some kind of paste" with which to exterminate the aphids and spiders. The report went into every hop market in the country, and no doubt brought consternation to the "Old Eighth" in my home city. Amounting to an implied neglect of duty in not furnishing some kind of a paste remedy, I detailed two trained investigators. They covered twenty-eight hop fields in two days and found as fine a crop maturing as was ever seen. Upon all soils suitable for hop culture the vines were vigorous, and laden for the harvest beginning in about three weeks. The damage was so slight that no estimate could be made. One yard had been in constant bearing from the original vines planted in 1884. The present price for hops is 13 cents; last season many of the growers sold for 25 cents. The outlook is fine, and the damage from insect pests practically nothing.

So we might run down every item of the above misinformation. Intelligent readers should demand the truth and accept nothing spurious. There is enough of horticultural misfortune, without making it out of fiction. The trouble with many of our horticultural officials is that they think it adds to their prestige to discover things, even if their discoveries are fictitious: that it adds to achievements to promise to do things; that insect pests can be exterminated by proclamations which the insects never take time in their busy lives to read. I have no corner on truth, yet neither am I niggardly in the use of what I have. A few who thrust themselves into the public eye are too economical in its use.

Rural Conservatism.

I HAVE looked in vain through the news and literary columns of The Times for a case of sensationalism relating to the fruit industries of the State. In the older and most of the newer fruit districts the people are imbued with esprit de corps that challenges all kinds of humbug propositions, discounts exaggeration refuses to accept mirepresentation. For example, how would a proposition of this kind be treated by the average rural community of California? It is a case where a well-known faker has been engaged for over a year in collecting money from the rural women of the country upon a bogus educational scheme. The fee is $52 per year, into which weekly payments of $1 each fit to a nicety. Here is the song in acknowledging the receipt of the first payment upon a membership pledge:

"I look upon this payment as a guarantee that will keep red blood in my veins and avoid the ashes of an empty, lonely ambition for power and honor, holding to the last in its place the love of those I love and the confidence of all associated with me. And now it is morning. Through the night so quickly passed, I have felt your presence, the strong support of your womanhood, the greatest force and influence in the world. But one thing is missing, a message from one far away. Perhaps today will bring that, too, and the cup will be filled."

Now did you ever! And to think that the rascal boasts of securing 110,000 pledges of membership in this country. I guarantee that not one of these victims live in a wideawake fruit-growing community in California. It seems incredible that there are over 100,000 women in the United States who could be buncoed by such a blatherskite. At least those women should never claim the right to vote, or to be considered sane enough to avoid a shower of rain. Level-headed in one thing indicates poise in other things, and in all the I have been connected with this single case of falling to a scheme like been reported. Labrador Tea.

HE Labrador tea, Ledum latifolium, is a member of the Ericaceae or Heath family, to which a number of our favorite broad-leafed evergreens belong. akes a handsome shrub abundantly covered with oval leaves, dark green above, lined with a rusty tomentum or felt-like covering underneath. The rs, in terminal umbels, are small individually, but ed in great quantities, giving a showy effect. Labrador tea is extremely hardy, and well suited rthern gardens, thriving in sunny or partly shaded tions. It prefers a moist, sandy or peaty soil, and well in a swampy place. It was introduced to cultion in England in the eighteenth century, and is there in collections of American plants, but our nurserymen appear to catalogue it but rarely. Like of our other beautiful native shrubs, its garden s seem more freely recognized abroad than at e, though all admire its beauty as a wildling.—al New Yorker.

branch of the horticultural activities of our State wonderful proportions, and as the clitions of its different sections are being studmore thoroughly understood, the time is apwhen we shall see flowers grown in quantity seed in sections of the State best adapted to of the best seeds of their class.

coming to be understood among seed growers part of this State may be ideal for the production of the highest and best type of seed of some varieties of flower or vegetable seed, while another section, not far distant may be utterly unfit to produce these same varieties. A remarkable example of the truth of this statement is demonstrated in sweet-pea seed crop this year in the Lompoc Valley. It is a diminutive piece of country, nine miles long by five miles wide, located on the coast 172 miles north of Los Angeles. The hills surrounding it are 200, and some of them perhaps 300 feet high. The elevation at the coast is 45 feet. Lompoc is 48 feet higher, and at this particular place on the coast the ocean breezes, which are always strong, flow up that valley and keep the summer temperature so low that Lima beans will not mature their seed. This may seem incredible, but true nevertheless. Yet Ventura, ninety-six miles to the southeast, at the same elevation, is the great lima-bean section of the State.

The highest temperature this season was 61 at noon, June 13, while at San Francisco and at Los Angeles, during April and May, a torrid wave swept over them at two different times of 92 to 95 degrees.

A year ago Burpee of Philadelphia decided that the location was ideal for growing sweet peas. He bought forty acres of ground and began operations in December. Edwin Lonsdale was put in charge of the work. He is a veteran in the art of gardening, with the enthusiasm of youth, and the experience of a half-century as his assets. And the results. They are marvelous. The selection of the locality, and the man by the management of the largest mail-order seed house in the world seems to be one of those fortuitous circumstances which happen to individuals and to corporations, that lead to fortune and to fame. We have been looking on sweet peas, grown in gardens containing a few plants, and on fields containing hundreds of acres for more than two score years, but never before during all these years have we seen flowers so large in size, and so much substance as these grown in that valley.—[Pacific Garden.

Farmer's Gardens in California.

IT has already been admitted that there has been, ever since the development of large farming enterprises was seen to be possible in California, an indisposition on the part of our farmers to engage in vegetable growing. Several reasons are urged as explanatory of this very widespread sentiment, and some of them may be cited:

First. The proper conduct of a large specialty farm gives no time for gardening—not even for the direction of work upon it—and it is better to buy vegetables than incur the work of a garden patch.

Second. In small specialty farming on a limited acreage of especially fitted and high-priced land, it is not profitable to set apart land for vegetables when its yield in the special product may pay several times the cost of purchased vegetables.

Third. Success with vegetables in California is very difficult to attain—especially so in certain parts of the State—and a farmer is more apt to lose than to gain by any venture he may make in that line.

Fourth. It is impossible to have a garden without irrigation water, even on lands which with ordinary rainfall will yield cereals and carry productive deciduous fruit trees if they are given good summer cultivation.

It must be granted that there is some force in the demurrer which the California farmer often enters against his indictment for lack of thrift and neglect of opportunities in not undertaking to produce his home supply of fresh, crisp and wholesome vegetables instead of depending upon the stale and wilted goods of the itinerant vendors. It is perfectly conceivable that, under certain conditions, the farmer had better buy food supplies rather than produce them, consequently the general denunciation of the unthrift of the California farmer, which is often indulged in by those who know little of the local situation and conditions, is really unwarranted. California conditions, both in nature and in farm policy, are so varied that criticisms and upbraidings are often misplaced. And yet it is perfectly true that vegetables should be grown on farms in California much more generally and in far greater variety than they have been hitherto. It is not the intention of the writer to urge this improvement upon sentimental considerations nor to claim, as many seem inclined to do, that it is possible to compass it by the fiat method. Too many of our critics seem to hold that all the farmer has to do is to declare that there shall be a garden, and one will spring up around his footsteps with ideal succulence, richness and deliciousness. It will be better to attempt to show that there is an opportunity, providing its requirements be duly met, and that there are really fewer difficulties in the way and greater rewards for prompt and intelligent effort than many of our farmers imagine. And this can be shown without elaborate argument. A more striking demonstration will probably lie in showing to the many the success of the few, in order that they may draw therefrom lessons and exhortations for their own incitement and success. This service will be constantly held in view as this work proceeds.—[Wickson's California Vegetables.

Pittosporums in California.

PITTOSOPORUM is the generic name of certain ornamental evergreen trees and shrubs which have come to us mostly from New Zealand, Australia, and the neighboring islands. About seventy species are known, of which some fourteen found their way into California.

The popularity of these plants is due to the ease with which they are grown and to their suitability for planting in various situations. It is a remarkable fact, however, that several of the better sorts are scarcely known to our nurserymen and landscape gardners. These have been introduced and grown on private grounds where their superior qualities are fully appreciated, but no particular effort has yet been made to extend their cultivation. It is for the double purpose of making these species better known and of providing keys and descriptions whereby any Pittosporum grown in California may be identified, that this account has been prepared.

It has been said above that Pittosporums are suited to many conditions. The species adapted to special purposes may be grouped as follows:

As a street or avenue tree P. undulatum (the Victorian Box) has been much recommended in Southern California, especially by Mr. Ernest Braunton, and its rapid growth, large size, and smooth, green leaves are certainly in its favor. It will, however, require careful training and can be expected to acquire stately dimensions only where abundant summer heat and some irrigation can be depended upon. A species of much greater promise is P. rhombifolium, of which there are now several good examples in California. This has a more erect growth with a single central shaft and pyramidal crown and is gorgeous with orange scarlet berries for several months in each year. P. phillyraeoides, P. eugenoides, and P. crassifolium may also be considered in this connection, but are not to be generally recommended.

For hedges P. undulatum is the best if a broad, massive hedge is desired. P. eugenioides is the best in case a tall, narrow hedge is wanted, particularly if a light-green color is preferred. P. tenuifolium also may be trimmed into a narrow hedge, but is more twiggy, less leafy, and of a darker green color.

The most fragrant Pittosoporums are P. Tobira and P. undulatum. These are both sweet-scented, the fragrance resembling that of orange blossoms, while the flowers of P. eriocarpum have a very pleasing banana-like fragrance.—[California Cultivator.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Addresses of correspondents are not preserved, and consequently cannot be furnished to inquirers.]

Medicinal Foods.

THE editor of the Care of the Body department of The Times has been one of the few hygienists in this country to call attention to the most important subject of the mineral contents of food—minerals that are also found in the human body. He has pointed out that the importance of these minerals to the health of the body and the fact (which so many medical men still seem unable to grasp,) that it is only when in the organic form, as found in foods, that these minerals can be assimilated by the human body; consequently that all inorganic minerals, administered as medicine, are absolutely inert, when they are not directly harmful, that they must all ultimately be cast forth by the body, or if retained will in time cause death.

Some of the readers of the Care of the Body may think that too much has been made of this subject, but how is it possible, in a department of this kind, to make too much of so exceedingly important a feature of the food question, for it is, undoubtedly, due to the lack of certain organic salts in food that such a dreadful disease as leprosy is due. To be healthy you must find your medicine in natural foods.

"The Metabolism of the Mineral Salts" is the title of an article by Henry O. Beeson, M.D., of San Acacio, Colo., reprinted from the Medical Standard of April, 1910. Dr. Beeson has some good things to say in regard to the importance of the organic salts and in regard to the harmfulness of the inorganic mineral chloride of sodium or table salt. He assumes, however, a radically different view from that of the editor of this department, when he claims that there is danger of a majority of people getting too fuch of the mineral elements. Of some elements, yes, perhaps, but not of all. Following is a criticism of Dr. Beeson's article, written for the Care of the Body by Otto Carqué:

"Dr. Beeson's essay contains many good points which are generally overlooked in dealing with the important subject of nutrition. He does not discriminate sufficiently, however, between the chemical properties of the different elements and their physiological functions in the animal organism. Including carbon, there are twelve distinct mineral elements which enter into the composition of the human body. None of these elements can replace the other. Consequently, when there is an oversupply of one or two elements, and a deficiency of another, the vital processes will be handicapped correspondingly. Certain elements are chiefly concerned in the growth and renewal of tissues as potassium, calcium, magnesium and phosphorus, and become, as the organism attains maturity, more stable and therefore need less frequently to be renewed. On the other hand, the elements which carry on the oxidation of the blood, the processes of digestion and the casting out of waste products, as sodium, iron, sulphur, chlorine, must be replaced in shorter intervals. The higher the forms of life and the more intense the vital activity, the more subject to change and renewal are the latter elements.

"To illustrate: The comparatively stable molecules of phosphate of potash or phosphate of lime in the tissues and bones will last a longer time before they require replacement, than the highly active atoms of iron and sulphur which are the oxygen carriers of the blood. Again, sodium, which plays an important part in digestion and assimilation and in the neutralization of uric acid and carbonic acid, in the formation of the bile and in the removal of waste products, must be supplied in adequate quantities, to prevent the accumulation of waste matter in the system and acidity of blood.

"Normal human milk contains all the necessary elements for the growth of the infant, but as the organism reaches maturity, less of the phosphates and more of the elements of sodium, iron and sulphur are necessary. The analysis of the animal body will furnish us therefore no adequate information in regard to its daily requirements of the different elements. For instance, more than 75 per cent. of the total amount of the mineral matter contained in the human body consists of phosphate of lime and phosphate of potash. If we would supply these elements in the same proportions in our food, the organism would suffer.

"This is exactly the case with a diet, in which meat, eggs, cheese, pulses and cereals predominate. Very few people will reach the century mark on a more or less exclusive meat or cereal diet, except they have inherited an extraordinary degree of vitality. Those who continually live in the open air, like the North American Indians, are able to partake of a comparatively large amount of flesh foods, but nearly all tribes used a certain amount of vegetables and fruit with their meat. Even carnivorous animals suffer if they are fed on lean meat, as they do not get the bones, cartilage and blood which contain a considerable amount of sodium, iron, sulphur and chlorine.

"The Asiatic nations which use rice as their staple with the addition of a small amount of animal food, have more endurance than meat-eating Europeans. While rice contains more sodium than any other cereal, nearly all people of the Orient use the peeled rice, from which the outer coats of the kernel, containing iron, sulphur, silica and fluorine of calcium are removed. A diet of rice and fish with inadequate supply of fresh green leaf vegetables will in time produce toxic effects. Beri-beri and leprosy, which frequently occur in oriental countries, must be largely ascribed to faulty nutrition.

Prof. Lee's Invention.

A MAJORITY even of those who favor vivisection admit that some restrictions should be placed upon these experiments on animals. This is certainly a reasonable request. There is an ugly trait in human nature, in the shape of cruelty, that grows by that which it feeds upon. The public has a right to demand that this torturing of animals, often undertaken merely for the sake of gratifying medical curiosity, should be open to inspection by the proper authorities.

There are, however, some who refuse to make even this concession. Among them is Prof. Frederick S. Lee. A.M., Ph. D., professor of physiology at Columbia University. He is one of the leading defenders of unrestricted vivisection at the present time. Here is an article from "Life" regarding a recent invention of Prof. Lee:

"We understand that Prof. Lee is not a member of the medical profession, but his experience as a vivisector and his ability as a demonstrator are undoubted.

"Not very long ago, at a meeting of a society of experimental physiologists held at the physiological laboratory of Columbia University, Prof. Frederick S. Lee brought to the notice of his associates, under the heading of 'original investigations,' a new invention. He called the machine a fatigue wheel, and the report adds that the author demonstrated a wheel, designed for fatiguing mammals by means of voluntary muscular work.

"We are so constantly informed that little or no pain is ever inflicted nowadays in the physiological laboratories that there would seem to be here a peculiarly good opportunity for Prof. Lee to prove this assertion, so far as it applies to certain experiments of his own. Cannot Life persuade the learned physiologist of Columbia University to give a more public demonstration of his wheel in action, with a happy dog gamboling therein, and undergoing all the felicity of fatigue induced by 'voluntary muscular work?'

"It must be admitted that in some other physiological laboratories 'fatigue wheels' do not appear to have been conducive of animal content. The 'wheel' of Prof. Mosso, an Italian physiologist, is said to have resembled that part of a squirrel's cage in which the captive takes his exercise, except that in the scientific implement the 'wheel' is turned by a motor, making it impossible for the creature undergoing fatigue to stop and rest. We are told that one dog, after being made to fast for twenty-four hours, was forced to run for six consecutive hours in the wheel, at the rate of about 380 feet per minute; that in another experiment a blind dog, after running in the machine for only an hour, gave up the task of contributing to science, allowed himself to be dragged helplessly along, and finally, with bleeding feet, was taken out; and that an old dog, which also had been made to fast, was removed from the machine after two hours' running, with legs bleeding and unable to stand. Prof. Mosso is reported as saying:

"'In our laboratory of physiology, where we have been studying the effect of fatigue on dogs, I have been able to note a surprising rise in the temperature each time the dogs wounded their legs during their travels on the wheel. This rise of temperature was always accompanied by scratches, excoriations and wounds in the legs; and these wounds were frequently so considerable that the nails bled, because the dogs offered so much resistance to the machine that was carrying them on. I attributed the rise of temperature to the pain which the animals must have suffered as they struggled against the impetus which was carrying them on against their will.'

"But in Prof. Lee's wheel the fatigue is induced, he tells us, 'by means of voluntary muscular work.' We shall be pleased to have it demonstrated by Prof. Lee that in the wheel which he uses incidents like these are quite impossible; that in the laboratory of Columbia University starving dogs have never been worked until they were 'dragged helplessly along,' or forced—against their will—to struggle within the meshes of an instrument of torture.

"And still another question. In the Popular Science Monthly recently Prof. Lee declared that 'fatigue may be carried so far that recovery is difficult, if not impossible.' In the tragedy of life this is true enough. Is it also a fact which has been demonstrated in a physiological laboratory?"

These remarks by our contemporary Life will certainly meet the approval of all moderate and reasonable advocates of vivisection. The opinion of the rest should not be allowed to count.

And what is the use of all this awful suffering, brought upon innocent animals? Mainly to perpetuate the bacteriological errors—that germs are the cause, whereas they are an effect of disease—which has led to the unnecessary death of hundreds of thousands of human beings. As the late Prof. O. von Rosenbach of author deplores the "flood of mysticism" which

"under the name of theosophy, pantheism, so-called Christian Science, metaphysics and various other guises, is deluging the world, insinuating itself into the teaching of popular religious teachers and tainting a considerable part of the religious literature of the day."

The editor greatly fears that in thus attempting to stem the flood of advanced thought, Dr. Kellogg, in common with others who think as he, is undertaking as difficult a task as did King Knut, when he ordered the waves to cease advancing toward his feet.

Apart from the religious side, however, this is an exceedingly interesting and valuable book. The following headings of the chapters give but a faint outline of the varied contents:

"The mystery of life: A general view of the body; The maintenance of the body; The miracle of digestion; The transfiguration of food; Dietetic sins; Shall we slay to eat? The natural way in diet; The heart and the blood; What to do in case of sudden illness or accident; The breath of life; Dangers in the air, and how to avoid them; The skin and the kidneys; How the body is warmed; The clothing of the body; How to be strong; The brain and the nerves; What is disease? Drugs which enslave and kill; The question box; The Battle Creek health movement."

An interesting and doubtless true suggestion is made by the author, namely, that man probably once possessed the higher intelligence of what we call the lower animals—that is to say, their wonderful and apparently miraculous powers of finding their way, of following a trail, and so forth, and that man has lost this power through a perverted style of living. It is a well-known fact that after a moderate fast the senses all become much more acute, and that the Indian, living the life of nature, can follow signs that are altogether invisible to the civilized man.

Here is another true statement: "Pain is not punishment, but a divine fog horn, warning the wrongdoer off the perilous coast of transgression."

The author devotes several pages to an exposition of the dangers of drinking cow's milk, and shows that nut cream or milk is almost the same in composition as cow's milk, and is equally nourishing. He also shows that butter is even more likely to be infected than milk. Of eggs he says: "When perfectly fresh, and when obtained from fowls which have been properly fed and housed, eggs can hardly be considered as objectionable from a hygienic standpoint." Uric acid, he says, is absent from newly-laid eggs, but appears as soon as the process of incubation sets in. Stale eggs are as poisonous and as unfit for food as animal flesh which has begun to decay.

As might be expected, the author goes at much length into the subject of flesh eating, opposing it from a hygienic and a religious point of view, although he is, of course, forced to admit that Moses permitted the use of flesh under certain restrictions, and that flesh eating is not explicitly forbidden by any Bible command.

In regard to hygienic cookery, the author declares that "nuts and fruits are also in many instances improved by cooking." The editor of the Care of the Body believes that the Battle Creek people cook altogether too much, for there can be no question that cooked food is to a great extent spoiled food, the organic salts being largely changed or destroyed. Consequently, some raw food should be eaten daily.

The chapters devoted to the marvelous construction of the human body and the wonderful intelligence displayed by the blood cells, are of absorbing interest, and are written in a plain, easily comprehensible style. The story of the fight between the blood cells and invading germs is specially graphic. Other striking passages are those in which the author explains how rapidly air is poisoned by the emanations from the lungs. After reading this, almost any intelligent person would become a "fresh-air fiend."

The author properly shows that the cause of germ disease is not in the germs themselves, but in the weakening of the body by incorrect habits of life. "Germs," he declares, "are the scavengers of nature, and we could not well dispense with them in our present state of existence."

There is a general impression that brain workers require as much or more food than those doing physical work. Dr. Kellogg declares, however, that mental work requires much less food than does physical labor. This as he says, is of much importance to brain workers. In another place he says that a sedentary person, no matter how hard he works his brain, consumes only two-fifths as much food as does the man who actively engages in muscular pursuits.

Here is a pithy and truthful statement: "The total depravity which we often hear talked about is, half of the time at least, nothing more nor less than total indigestion."

The author truthfully declares that the faculty of reasoning is not peculiar to the human race, but seems to be the common possession of all animals that have brains. "Wherever there is an eye there is a brain behind and intelligence looking out."

At the end of the book is a brief description of the Battle Creek Health movement, and a view of the main buildings of the Battle Creek Sanitarium.

A Day of Rest.

EVERY one should have a weekly day of rest—a real rest. During the French revolution, toward the close of the eighteenth century, when they tried to overturn the order of all existing things, setting up a prostitute to be worshiped in the Pantheon, they changed the days of the week, and made a day of rest once in ten days. It was found, however, that it did not work well. Moses was right in this, as in many other hygienic laws.

There are many ways of spending a day of rest. One way not to do it is to rush off in the morning with your wife and the kids, and a big hamper of provisions, including heavy plates and knives, which you have difficulty in getting through the crush at the depot gates, and then perhaps to stand up holding to a strap part of the way there and back, and to promenade in a broiling sun after you get there, coming back with weary wife and wailing, grimy children, and waking up on Monday morning feeling as if you had done a hard day's work. Instead of this you would much better use the money so illy expended in erecting in your garden a summer-house—or if you have no garden, on the porch—and playing at camping out, in the shade. Then, two or three times a year, you could manage to afford to run out of town, say from Saturday to Monday.

Sometimes the very best way to spend a day of rest is to lie in bed, with doors and windows open, reading a little light literature, and dozing from time to time.

An Overcrowded Profession.

A REPORT issued by the Carnegie Foundation declares that the United States is supporting three or four times as many doctors as it requires, "mostly trained in inferior schools." California, we are told, has now one physician to every 401 inhabitants.

Again, in a recent report of the Council of the State Medical Association, published in the California State Journal of Medicine, is the following paragraph:

"The relative proportion of medical men to population is greater in this State than any other place in the world. In cities like Los Angeles and San Francisco, a doctor to 250 people; the average for the whole State is one physician to about 450 of population, and in no portion of the State does there seem to be a ratio coming anywhere near what prevails in other States and in other countries. But heretofore the profession has enjoyed fair remuneration for services, thus compensating in a degree for the paucity of material. Recently, however, there has developed in various places an aggravating practice in contract service that eliminates a large percentage of the population from the ordinary honest practitioner. The evil complained of is not confined to one section, but is worse in some places than in others.

It is true that there are too many "regular" doctors in the country—men who are trained to suppress the symptoms of disease by means of deadly drugs, instead of removing the cause, and teaching people to avoid the cause. There is, however, still plenty of room, and will always be plenty of room for real heal-from the system by such natural methods as diet, er-—men who aid nature to eliminate morbid matter and bathing, and massage, and osteopathy, and hydropathy, and suggestion, and other simple measures of that kind. All this, however, involves hard work for a modest recompense. Consequently, the ranks of the nature-cure physicians are not likely to become overcrowded.

Cheap Publishing.

A NEWSPAPER item recently told of an invention that the discoverer believes will do away with the use of printing ink. By electrifying the type he claims that legible impressions may be made on the paper. How long they would endure is another question.

Here is a man who goes this inventor one better. Our esteemed contemporary, the Stellar Ray, in its June number, published a communication from the editor of an Illinois paper described as "The Daily Telepsychist, an occult organ mentally projected, not printed." Cheap system, that.

Perhaps, in course of time, when we go to draw our salary, the paymaster will project us a financial thought. Well, that will be all right, if we can pass it on to the groceryman, and the milkman, and the plumber.

Why Is It Popular?

SOME people wonder why so many read the Care of the Body department with avidity, and regard it as a sort of a gospel.

There is really no secret about this. The reasons are twofold. First, many of the older readers of these columns realize that the editor of the department, while a poor man, could not be tempted for a thousand dollars, or any other sum, to insert a line that he does not honestly believe to be "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Second, a majority of the older readers of this department know that the editor has made a close study of the laws of health, in Europe and America for more than forty-five years, and consequently that he knows something about what he writes.

To this may perhaps be added the fact that the editor has a knack of putting vital facts before the people in a popular and interesting way—dressing the organic salts up in a sugar coating, as it were.

That, in a nutshell, is the "secret" of the popularity of the Care of the Body department.

Sexual Education.

THERE was a conference of American rabbis held at Charlevoix, Mich., June 29. At this conference a long and interesting paper was read by Henry Berkovytz of Philadelphia on "Religion and the Social Evil." The speaker deplored the fact that of late years some Jews should have been mixed up in a disgusting traffic in our large cities. He quoted the saying of a witty Frenchman that "Civilization is syphilization," and concluded with an earnest admonition to parents to see that their children at the proper age, receive instruction that may save them from much future misery. He said:

"A conspiracy of silence on all sexual questions holds the social and religious world in its meshes. We never read the portions of the Bible, the Commentaries or the Codes that have reference to these vital matters. We rarely, if ever, venture to speak to each other frankly in the home circle; the theme is "taboo" in the pulpit and strictly excluded from the instruction given in our schools. As a result the whole effort at moral education falls short and frequently breaks down at the crucial point. This is due to our prudery, our false shame, our ignorance, our timidity, our hypocrisy and moral cowardice. Parents, teachers and ministers share in the great sin of sending out into the world boys and girls utterly ignorant of the simplest natural facts about the most intimate and sacred of all human concerns. The wonder is not that some of our girls go to ruin and many of our boys become vulgarized—the wonder is that all of them are not debased by the false information they imbibe from ignorant nurses, the filth they absorb from the companions of the street, the lies with which their curiosity is fed and the dangers to which they are exposed from obscene literature and quack doctors. Frank Wedekind has exposed this fatal error in our education in his remarkable drama, 'Fruhlings Erwachen,' ('The Awakening of Spring—A Tragedy of Childhood.') It has passed through twenty-six editions in German, and has been issued in every European language. This play has become a factor in the new education. It has become one of the 'stock plays' of 'Das Neue Theater' in Berlin, and has helped on the warfare against the rooted prejudice of the past generations, resulting at last in having the physiology of sex properly taught in the German schools."

The Cost of Dying.

THERE has for some years been a war of undertakers in a South Atlantic Coast city. Two of the undertakers refused to join the trust. Now these two are fighting among themselves, and running startling advertisements in the papers. One of them says: "I am a good citizen, and the trust cannot lower the price so that I cannot go them one better, and a dollar lower." Attractive inducements are held out of caskets as low as $35, and a "splendid rich creation" for $65. It almost makes one inclined to go and die, in order not to miss this rare opportunity.

There is certainly room for a reduction in the charges made by those who dispose of the dead. After poor people have paid for the expenses of sickness and burial they often have to skimp, and scrape, and save for years, in order to get enough together to pay their debts. If any one tries to escape the cost of high living by dying, he is likely to find himself out of the frying pan into the fire.

An eminent Chicago physician recently charged that

Unsightly, Unpleasant and Unnecessary

There are probably more unsightly colored glasses in Los Angeles than in any other city of three times its size in the United States. This is not because there are more imperfect eyes here, but because the almost constant sunshine of Southern California is much more painful to an eye in which the refraction is imperfect than the cloudy or hazy weather so common in all other parts of the United States. The constant bright sunlight only developes the fact that a congenital defect exists. Such eyes should be made equal to the perfect eye through glasses cut to especially correct any and all defects that exist in each particular case. This would make the vision better and the eye as easy in the sunlight as the most perfect eye. Defects of vision should be corrected in any climate, but the sunlight of California makes a perfect correction doubly necessary.

If the sunlight annoys or disturbs you it is absolute proof your eyes are defective, and it is the constant strain on the delicate muscles to overcome the defects that cause the pain and annoyance. Dr. C. C. Logan makes free examinations and gives free a most interesting explanation of each case that enables each person to understand their own eyes, showing plainly what the defect consists of and how the correction is made.

If you are interested call and have a talk with him and he will put the human eye before you in a far different light from that in which you have hitherto held it. Examinations free. Dr. Logan's office, 600-602 Grant Building, 6th floor, 4th and Broadway.

Care of the Body.

some medical men insist upon a "divvy" with undertakers to whom they may recommend deceased "patients." This, of course, makes it necessary to add considerably to the price.

Oceans of Soda Water.

THE NATIONAL DRUGGIST makes the astonishing statement that the expenditure of the United States for soda water will this year reach the stupendous figure of $500,000,000.

All of this money is absolutely wasted for drinks that are unwholesome, and in some cases absolutely poisonous. Some of these concoctions create in people deadly drug habits, and often lead them to join the great army of drug fiends, of whom the United States government in a recent bulletin, declares there are no less than 3,000,000 in this country.

If our political prohibitionists would occasionally turn aside from their fierce onslaughts on the "rum fiend" and pay a little attention to the drug evil, they might accomplish more good.

Recognition of Osteopathy.

DR. DAIN L. TASKER of Los Angeles, an osteopath member of the State Board of Medical Examiners, was recently accorded the honor of being elected president of the board. In the June number of the Southern California Practitioner, a "regular" medical publication, four pages are devoted to an interesting article on osteopathy by Dr. Tasker.

What a change is this, within ten years! When the Care of the Body was started, eleven years ago, and week after week the editor of the department called attention to the advantages of osteopathic treatment in certain ailments, the meaning of the word was unkown to a great majority of readers. The school was regarded with derision and contempt by the "regulars." Now they have been forced to grant recognition to the osteopaths, just as they were forced, after long and bitter fights, to recognize the eclectics and the homeopaths.

Why is it that the medical profession never grants any rational reform until it is forced upon it? Why has it hesitated to recognize the virtues of hydropathy and osteopathy, and other rational means of aiding nature, while readily lending an ear to every new "regular" invention of some useless and dangerous method of suppressing the symptoms of disease by poisoning the blood with filthy animal matter? The answer is simple. Because there is much more mystery—and money—and much less hard work in these latter operations than in the methods of the natural school of healing.

Here is a review, in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, of a new book by Albert Abrams, M.D., of San Francisco, whose work "The Blues" was reviewed here several years ago:

"Dr. Abrams' treatise on spondylotherapy covers a new field in medical literature. The ideas underlying it are that 'the sensory peripheral terminations receive impressions which are conducted, communicated or reflected by aid of the nervous system' and that the reaction produced in the viscera and muscles by such impressions may be utilized in a diagnostic and therapeutic direction. Maipulation of definite vertebrae corresponds with the elicitation of definite reflexes ('vertebral reflexes,) and for diagnostic purposes this manipulation consists either in the application of the sinusoidal current or in concussion of the spinuous processes by means of a rubber pleximeter and plexor. For therapeutic uses the author recommends sinusoidalization or concussion with a device of his own, a pneumatic hammer. Among other methods of spinal therapeutics the book discusses acupuncture, counter-irritation, exercises, reëducation of coördinated movements, hydrotherapy, lumbar puncture, massage, psychrotherapy, thermotherapy and vibratory massage."

Now, what is this but osteopathy or "chiropractic" in disguise?

The "regulars," when they find a successful method of treating disease brought forth by a "layman" or an "irregular" first sneer at it, and then adopt it as something of their own invention, giving it a new crack-jaw name.

Again, the editor of the Medical World, referring to massage and osteopathy, recently wrote in that magazine: "I hope the time will speedily come when the man who never uses manual treatment (and does not know how) will be considered as narrow—and indeed as much of a quack—as the man who uses nothing but manual treatment, and who knows nothing else, though claiming everything for it."

Remember, however, that osteopathy is but one branch of the natural method of healing—the "Nature Cure." As previously stated here, the narrow-minded osteopath, who fails to utilize other natural methods, such as diet, hydropathy, and fresh air, can never hope to meet with more than partial success.

One on the Doctor.

A PROMINENT physician, whose specialty was physical diagnosis, required his patients, before entering his private consulation-room, to divest themselves of all superfluous clothing, in order to save time. One day a man presented himself without having complied with this requirement.

"Why do you come in here without complying with my rules?" demanded the doctor. "Just step into that side room and remove your clothing, and then I'll see you. Next patient, please."

The man did as requested, and after a time presented himself in regular order duly divested of his clothing.

"Now," said the doctor, "what can I do for you?"

"I just called," replied the man, "to collect that tailoring bill which you owe us."—[Puck.

TRUSSES

WE DO NOT GUARANTEE CURES for the reason that no one can do so honestly. We do guarantee to hold by correct, scientific methods, any case of reducible hernia (and to support properly those which are irreducible,) no matter how many have failed, with comfort to the patient and without painful or injurious pressure.

You who are asked to pay high fees in advance for rupture cures and take your own chances on the result—investigate both sides of the question. Let us give you the names and addresses of many who have been "through the mill," and the history of the fakirs who took their money, giving them nothing but abuse and injury in return. Ask them for a guarantee of cure or money back and note their plausible explanation for not giving it.
